GREECE MAY BE REPUBLIC SOON

King George Has Been Asked by a Committee to Leave the Country

ATHENS, Dec. 18. — (United Press).—Greece may become a Republic this week. King George has been asked to leave the country by a committee representing the army and navy.

From the summer palace at Tatoiou 20 miles away, the King defied them.

"I won't leave," he stated. "Whoever dares, let him come here and try to remove me."

But later it was learned that Colonel Plastiras, virtual head of the military government, had accepted an arrangement whereby King George leaves Wednesday at the latest and goes to Constantinople aboard the yacht Narcisus.

King George and Queen Elizabeth will leave Athens to-night for Rumania, it is announced by newspapers here ,following the announcement of the government last night that it was advisable for them to leave country.

King George, the second of Greece eldest son of the late King Constantine, succeeded to the throne on September 28, 1922, after his father had been forced to abdicate by Gonatas and plastiras revolution. It became apparent almost immediately that George was to be monarch in name only, for the revolutionary regime gave Greece what was virtually military dictatorship. Nevertheless therewas no disposition to terminate the dynasty. However, in the last few months republican and pro-Venizelist sentiment in Greece has been growing rapidly.

Strong Language

The letter to the King it is said, in despatches from London was couched in rather strong language and contained an intimation that the sovereigns departure by the evening at the latest was imperative. He was further told that the steamer Esperia would be requistioned for his leave-taking.

The King replied this morning to the letter stating that inasmuch as it seemed to be in the interests of the nation for him to leave Greece he would do so at the earliest possible moment.

Central News despatch from Athens says that King George is leaving for Bucharest this evening and that he has telegraphed to Venizelos appealing to him to take over the reins of government.

Admiral Koundouriotis, it says, has assumed the regency until the future regime of the country is decided.

Presentation to Teacher.

Miss Ruth Wanamaker, public school teacher, is leaving at Christmas to take a position as teacher in a Toronto school. On Sunday the Sunday school and Young Peoples' League while meeting for Sunday school presented her with a French ivory clock, tray and clothes brush. Miss Myrtle Kenendy and Mrs. Myrtle Deacon made the presentation, while Mr .F. S. Pearce read the following address:

Marmora, Dec. 16, 1923.

Miss Wanamaker: The officers, teachers and scholars of Marmora United Sunday school, and the members of the League regret very much that you are leaving our village and they cannot allow you to go without expressing their warm appreciation of your hearty cooperation and help during the time that you have been with us.

Our school and league can ill afford to lose such active and cheerful helpers.

Will you accept the accompanying clock, tray and brush as a very slight token of their esteem and regard.

Our best wishes follow you to your new home and we can assure you that Marmora school and league will be glad to welcome you whenever you can return.

F. S. Pearce, Supt. of Marmora Sunday school.

Myrtle C. Kennedy, President of the League.

Miss Wanamaker has been a teacher in the Sunday school for several years. When the league was formed last year she was first vice-president, and in an able manner performed the duties which fell to her lot. In all church work she has been one on whom they could call if necessary.

Her Sunday school class met at the parsonage on Thursday evening to have a scoial evening before she left them. Everyone entered into the contests and games which were played during the evening. A dainty lunch provided by the girls themselves was served later.

Burial on Sunday.

The funeral of the late Mr. D. R. Jones was held in the Methodist church on Sunday, conducted by the Rev. D. R. Clare. Mr. Jones has been a prominent citizen in Marmora for years. At one time he was bailiff of the Tenth Division Court and at the time of his death Mr. Jones was a county constable. Mr. Mitchell of Toronto and Mr. Jones' mother and sister were here to attend the funeral.

Dr. McKechnie of Toronto, spent the week end in town to attend the funeral of the late D. R. Jones. On Monday he performed a minor operation.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 17.— Rev. Canon McNab, of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, conducted the anniversary services of St. Thomas church on Sunday, December 16th, delivering inspiring discourses morning and evening, the congregations being as large as could be looked for while roads are in their present unfavorable condition.

Mrs. (Canon) Allen presided at the organ and Mrs. D. C. King, of Peterborough, sang very acceptably at both the morning and evening services. The rector, Rev. Canon Allen, and the curate, Rev. M. G. B. Williams, were both present at night and assisted with the service.

The opening hymn, "O God, our help in ages past," was most appropriate in view of the subject matter of Canon McNab's sermon, the text being from Acts, 26, "And the disciples were called Christians in Antioch."

Names divinely given are luminous things, and though the title "Christian" was first used as an insult and a term of contempt, it is to-day the world's watchword, a title which one is proud of, and honored in bearing. Surnames may have history and ancestry connected with them, but they do not stand on a level with the Christian name. The latter cannot be changed even by Act of Parliament; it is the mark which is put upon each individual by the Lord Jesus, and must be borne all through life. Are we living up to the standard of that Christian title, or will memory make shame and remorse our portion as we call to mind things that have brought disgrace upon the name we bear?

We will never fill our churches with worshippers unless we who are called Christians put habit and conviction into our religion and show to the world that we believe it to be real, and true, and necessary for peace and happiness and comfort. In Paul's day the followers of Christ were looked upon as stained with every form of vice and criminality, yet they bore this stigma for love of their Saviour. Why then should we leave it to be found out by stealth, or accident, that we belong to Him?

Heathen religion of that day was said to be a "perpetual festival of vice," and Antioch, like most other cities of its size, offered a continual round of gaiety, races, theatres, gladiatorial combats, and feasting. What a revelation the gospel must have been to these pleasure-loving inhabitants. Fancy those rich, slave-owning, luxurious patricians from Rome, who built their summer villas on the banks of the Orontes on the outskirts of Antioch, being told to "love their neighbors as themselves," or "in lowliness of mind each to esteem other better than himself." With what scorn would they receive the injunction to lay up for themselves treasures in heaven, or that it is more blessed to give than to receive. How would those who frequented the scene of the gladiator's struggles, often to the death, heed the command, "Be kindly affectioned one to another, in honor preferring one another?"

Christianity is still attacked, derided, misunderstood, sometimes even vilified, but it will eventually emerge victorious and triumphant at the last —there need be no fear upon this final outcome. While the new birth, and the rigth to call ourselves Christians is the free gift of God, the spiritual life needs to be taken care of, nourished, trained, and educated. Those who are merely "outside Christians" but have no real inward foundation and principles, only bring the church into disrepute. "By their fruits ye shall know them," and the genuine Christian bears a Divine signature which it is not in the power of man to counterfeit. A Christian is the highest style of man, but it is no use to try to lighten the world with a lamp that has gone out, therefore "let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

As a mark of gratitude for the success which thas attended the special diocesan mission, just completed, and in compliance with the request of the bishop, the congregation joined in singing the Doxology before the closing hymn.

Won a Prize.

Lieutenant E .E. Doxsee received the following telegram from Captain V. W. S. Heron on Saturday evening relative to the standing obtained in the recent rifle shooting competition by his junior cadet corps

"Congratulations on winning the third prize in junior Laura Secord competition. Prizes being sent by express from the factory. Please arrange distribution to the team and acknowledge receipt to the company.

District Cadet Officer."

The district covered extends from Toronto on the west ,but not including the city as far east as Ottawa, and at least fifty teams were entered in the competition. The fact that Lieutenant Doxsee has had his boys in training for more than three weeks makes their record all the more creditable. The members, all of whom made a high percentage, are: Walter Sayles, Bruce Freelove, Nelles Rowlaid, Keith Barnard, George McKnight .The third prize is a five pound box of Laura Secord chocolates.

CAMPBELLFORD PASTOR LEADS OPPOSITION TO SUNDAY BAND CONCERT

Rev. C. F. McIntosh Appealed to Lord's Day Alliance -- Proceeds of Concert for Salvation Army Christmas Tree

MINISTERS MEET

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 18. — The members of the Ministerial Association will invite the executive committee of the Campbellford band to a conference to discuss the question of the holding of sacred concerts in the Regent Theatre on Sunday evenings, the first of which was given a week ago. The band proposes to hold these concerts fortnightly. during the winter, and while some of the receipts will be devoted to charity the balance will be used for the purchase of new music.

These Sunday night concerts formed the topic of discussion at the regular monthly meeting of the Ministerial Association in the parish hall on Monday afternoon. The following members were present: Rev. J. Black, of Burnbrae, president; Rev. H. S. Bennett, secretary. Revs. D. A. Thomson, M. L. Hinton and W. A. Pippen of Hastings; Rev . E. O. Seymour of Havelock; Rev. G. S. Hammond, of Warkworth; Rev. E. W. Caffley of Norham, and Rev. G. C. Clarke, the new rector of Christ Church here, who was extended a cordial welcome by the members.

Rev. C. F. McIntosh and Rev. Wesley Elliott were unable to be present but sent word expressing the hope that Sunday evening concerts would be dealt with.

Appeal to Alliance.

Rev. C. F. McIntosh, who has from the first taken a leading part in opposition to the concerts, had written to Dr. Rochester, of the Lord's Day Alliance, asking if such entertainments are in violation of the Sunday Observance Act.

In his reply, which was read to the meeting by Mr. Thomson, Dr. Rochester said he could find nothing illegal in the concerts. In the first place no admission fee is charged, a silver collection being the means employed to secure funds. If however any person was put out of the building for refusing to contribute that would be a different matter as it would be the same as charging an admission fee. So long as the proceeds are devoted to charity and the program given consists of sacred music there is no contravention of the act.

There is nothing illegal, Dr. Rochester added, in using the reecipts for the purchase of music. No individual receives any benefit from such transactions, and as the band is not incorporated it cannot be regarded as an entity, so that no legal action could be taken against it.

Dr. Rochester suggested a conference with the band to endeavor to reach some agreement by which the original object of the concerts could be maintained and sacred music only given.

No minister at the meeting took any exception to the opening entertainment. The program was essentially one of sacred music and the preceeds were turned over to the Salvation Army to provide a Christmas tree for children who would otherwise be overlooked by Santa Claus. The fear however was expressed that these gatehrings would prove the opening wedge and that secular music would eventually be rendered.

This sentiment was not general among the members. Revs. Glover and Hammond could see nothing wrong about sacred concerts on Sunday night. The latter told how for the past three summers Sunday night concerts were held by the band in Preston, the town in which Mr. Hammond formerly resided, and so far as he could see no harm had ever resulted.

Some of the ministers from outside took the ground that the matter was one which concerned Campbellford alone and for that reason should be dealt with by the local clergymen.

It was pointed out that no hall was available in town for the holding of a concert on a week day evening and that Capt. Hyland gave the Band the use of his theatre on Sunday nights absolutely free of charge.

Service of Hydro Plant

At the November meeting a committee had been appointed to look into the matter of holding special services for the benefit of the men engaged on the new Hydro power plant. The plant is near the Methodist church at Meyersburg, but the river flows between the two places.

Mr. Bennett reported that he and Mr. McIntosh had visited the works and had been told by the superintendent that too many men left for their homes over Sunday, he did not think there would be enough left to justify religious service. He invited the ministers to take supper some week night in the company's boarding house when all the men are there This invitation may be accepted and special services held later in the evening.

"The Power of Song "

An interesting paper on the above subject was read by Rev. D. A. Thomson of Hastings. Mr. Bennett leading in the discusion and every member taking part. Mr. Seymour gave it as his opinion that there are hymns in the various church colleections that should never be sung as they contain thoughts that the most of people have either forgotten or in which they no longer believe.

The next meeting of the Association will be held on January 21st under Rev. Wesley Elliott will review Dr. H. E. Fosdick's book. "Christianity and Progress." Rev. G. C. Carke will lead the discussion

A DESPERATE GAME.

The killing of Arthur Brown, alias Sullivan, fugitive bank robber who escapd from Kingston Penitentiary with the "Red" Ryan gang, following closely upon the capture of Ryan himself, is just another proof that a life of crime cannot fail to end in tragedy.

The modern gunman who is not satisied to intimidate his victims but unhesitatingly shoots whenever he is in a corner, has created for himself a world in which he is hunted down as would be a dangerous animal.

Police officers can take no chances with men who have no scruples about taking life, and the slightest move that might be interpreted an attempt to reach a weapon is the signals for the representatives of organized society to use their guns.

So it was with Brown, who was shot through the heart by a Minneapolis detective hen the fugitive pulled a revolver.

The gunmen have made new rules in the desperate game they are playing, and they cannot complain if the police follow the lead.

CUTTING CHRISTMAS TREES.

The usual agitation against the cutting of trees for Christmas use is going the rounds of the press, and many newspapers deplore the economic loss to Canada represented by the annual attack on the evergreens.

Undoubtedly considerable damage is done, and there is an amount of economic waste as a result of the practice.

The dividends of joy and happiness that the Christmas trees bring into Canada's homes, however, wipes out the debit entries, for the putting of which on the country's books the destruction of young trees is responsible.

And after all the harm done is small in comparison to the waste of Canada's timber resources in other ways.

The careless hunter who tosses a lighted match into the dry brush often causes a fire that does more injury to standing timber than all the Christmas tree cutting that has been done in a decade.

The settler who burns slack after a period of dry weather is in a fair way to cause more economic waste than could be encompassed by continuing the Christmas tree practice for twenty years.

There are many major leaks in Canada's policy of timber conservation, and until they are plugged the minor leak may well be left alone.

Let the children have their Christmas trees—the cost is only a drop in the bucket of Canada's annual timber wastage.

CONTROLLING THE POLICE.

The chief difficulty that will bar the way towards a restoration by the Ontario Legislature to City Councils of greater control of Police Departments is the reason that originally actuated the legislators in creating the present form of commission.

That is the feeling that with the police force entirely under Council control or under the supervision of an elective commission the influence of municipal politics would sooner or later creep into the administration of the police force.

Commissioners directly responsible to the people or members of the City Council, as the case might be, would be likely to find themselves besieged by friends of those who happened to get into difficulties with the police for intervention in this case or that.

Police Departments everywhere in Ontario believe that the work would be greatly handicapped as a result, and from the experience of American cities where police administration is a political matter there is reason for this fear on the part of Ontario law enforcement officers.

In the past the Legislature has appreciated the value of this objection and has failed to give a very sympathetic hearing to requests for a different system.

The new Legislature may differ from its predecessors in this respect, but City Councils who intend to press for a chance would do well to recognize the force of this argument and have something reassuring to offset it.

THE SCHOOL PROBLEM.

Candidates for the Board of Education should take advantage of the campaign—if one eventuates—to tell the people something definite about the problem of additional Collegiate Institute and technical school accommodation and state clearly, for the information and guidance of the ratepayers, just where they stand on this most important question.

There is, unfortunately, a widespread indifference on the part of citizens generally towards this question, and there is a natural temptation for candidates to take advantage of that indifference and avoid a definite statement.

But in spite of the unwillingness on the part of many people to see civic projects launched that will involve considerable expenditure, the school problem is approaching a critical condition, and action cannot be deferred much longer.

The whole question, therefore, should be thoroughly threshed out between now and January 1st, and the ratepayers should know just where each candidate stands and what can be expected of them in the event of their success at the polls.

It is not too much to ask that School Board aspirants should be frank enough to express their convictions on this subject for the benefit of the electors, many of whom are puzzled as to the best policy to pursue and are looking for guidance to the aspirants for office.

THE MISSING SNOW.

With Christmas less than two weeks away, there is still no sign of snow in the cities along the St. Lawrence, or in the woods, save in the far north, says the Montreal Star. A Christmas without snow is unusual, but not without precedent. But in the woods no snow at this period of the year is almost a phenomenon. Sleighing has been going on for three months north of Lake St. John, but no sleighs are being driven south of that lake. While bright, sunny days, with a tang in the air and morning frosts, make conditions in the cities pleasant, yet even here the snow is missed. Shopkeepers declare it affects business. Children miss it. And there is a tree in Outremont budding for the second time this year!

In the woods the absence of snow is creating conditions that cannot be contemplated with equanimity. Logging operations are being seriously handicapped.

While there is no reason to anticipate that the present conditions will last for any length of time, it has already created sufficient trouble in the way of a setback to logging work to make all interested in the timber industry watch the weather with apprehension. The country generally needs snow. Despite the howl of protest against Kipling's line, the Canadian knows very well that unless Canada is indeed in winter "our lady of the snows," the country at large will be the sufferer. Wherefore all good Canadians will combine in wishing for a speedy and a substantial snowfall without delay. There is something strange, almost eerie, about windswept fields and bare forests with the sound of the Christmas bells almost ringing in our ears.

A CAUSE CELEBRE.

Lord Alfred Douglas, son of the Marquis of Queensberry, goes to jail for six months for the crime of criminal libel against Mr. Winston Churchill. The trial, which has been proceeding in the famous Old Bailey, London, during the past week, has been something of a cause celebre. Douglas, to begin with, is a strange figure. Scion of an illustrious Scottish family, a figure in the trial of Oscar Wilde, called by Swinburne the greatest sonnet writer since Keats, and a former editor of the Academy, he is a combination of qualities that baffles understanding. Last year he wrote in "Plain English," a review which he edits, that Mr. Churchill and Sir Ernest Cassels had made millions out of the story of the battle of Jutland. Churchill, it was charged, wrote the communique so that the stock market became demoralized, and then, after Cassels had bought up securities right and left, a new and brighter communique was sent out to enable him to reap an immense fortune. Nobody paid attention to the yarn, ("Plain English" is an obscure little screed) but when Lord Alfred republished the charges in a pamphlet, and the pamphlet was widely distributed, he was arrested.

In the trial which followed, Douglas had absolutely no case. Mr. Churchill, it was shown, not only neither wrote nor inspired the Jutland communique, but actually never saw it or knew anything about it till it appeard in the press; while Sir Ernest Cassels not only failed to make a fortune out of British securities, but did not buy securities at that period at all. Douglas, indeed, did not attempt to justify his charges; and it was shown that one of his statements was based upon the story of an officer who had been three times in an asylum.

A feature of the case was the attempt of Douglas' counsel to save his client by appealing to prejudice against Churchill. Here is a passage taken from his address:

"I wonder if you realized while he was in the box we were dealing with one of the most skilful and most impetuous and erratic men in all England who had ever had charge of the helm of the navy? We are told that there are only three first-class brains in the country, so they themselves tell us. Mr. Churchill is one. Do not let Mr. Churchill dominate your brains by his charm and personality and exquisite manners. Stripped of his kudos the Right Honorable Winston Churchill is a professional politician, he has got a hide like a rhinoceros, a skin like a chameleon, a short memory, and the cheek of the devil. (Laughter.) That's the man you have got to deal with here. You have to compare Mr. Churchill and truth. If Mr. Churchill is incapable of telling a lie, if Mr. Churchill is George Washington, this case is over. But I will tell you that Mr. Churchill has lied and lied badly."

"Sin bravely," enjoined a famous philosopher. Douglas, apparently, believed in this dictum. And so not satisfied with charging Churchill and Cassels with trafficking in lives, he wrote a monstrous attack upon Lord Balfour. Balfour, in the course of the trial, swore that as First Lord of the Admiralty he and he alone was responsible for the Jutland report; that he had written it and altered it several times with his own hand, and that he issued the final draft only after long consideration. Yet Douglas, out of nothing but a vivid imagination and complete lack of conscience, wrote that Churchill and Sir William Graham Greene wrote the report and took it to Balfour, who, sitting with his feet on the mantelpiece, and reading a book, signed the document after merely glancing at it.

The conviction is a good thing for public life. There is in all countries a great deal too much of innuendo and insinuation against the characters of public men. If enough mud be thrown some of it will stick, and, unfortunately, there are always a certain class of persons only too willing to believe wrong of politicians. The consequence is that politics is be devilled, public unrest promoted, and the authority of government undermined.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Candidates who are holding back have only until Friday to make up their minds.

It looks as if there will be a last minute rush not only in Christmas shopping but in politics as well.

There is no reason why the mayoralty contest should be confined to members of the present Council. All the material for good civic government is surely not limited to that body.

SUPPOSED STUDIO COPY IS EXPERIMENTAL WORK

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(Associated Press.)—Titian's painting "Venus and Adonis" in the National Gallery here has been considered to be only a studio repetition of one at Madrid, but in the course of renovating operations the discovery has been made that the painting is a first experimental version of the subject by the master himself.

It exhibits Titian's style in the transition period between the "Bacchus and Ariadne" and the famous "Mother and Child."

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—After last week's experience shippers needed no further admonition as to limiting the supplies and there was a sharp decline in yesterday's deliveries, which were 1,642 cattle, 230 calves, 1,935 hogs and 1,596 sheep and lambs.

Good butchers were quite steady and a shade better. Frank Hunnisett paid 6⅞ cents a pound for one load. Medium light butchers' steers and heifers were up half a dollar a cwt. from last week, when useful butchers sold as low as 4¼ cents a pound. Exporters were higher by 15 cents a cwt. than two weeks ago.

For a load of heavy rough steers the Canadian Packing Company paid $5.60 a cwt. Cows were steady and a little firmer and the average good cow sold at $3.75 a cwt. Bunches of butchers heifers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, sold at 3 cents. One extra good baby was bought by F. Bailey at 11 cents a pound. Trading brightened up towards noon and a fair clearance is promised today.

The search of good calves was continued yesterday and any promising vealers sold at 11 cents a pound. Chris Waugh paid 12 cents for some extra good ones and 11½ cents for others. Good mediums sold at 10 cents and bunches of grassers went at $2.60 and $2.75 a cwt.

The lamb market was good and there was a large number of stale lambs from last week still on sale. One deck of these sold at 10¼ cents and others were offered at 10½ cents. Light fresh lambs had a market from 11 to 11½ cents, according to quality. Puddy bought one package of light lambs at 11 cents a pound.

With last week's heavy run of hogs out of the way sellers stand for firmer prices and asked $8 a cwt. f.o.b. The price is unsettled, but it is certain that the $7.50 a cwt. bid will not affect purchases.

STUDENTS MUST PAY POLL TAXES

About Twenty at London, Ont., University Are On Delinquent List.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press)—Students of the University of Western Ontario who do not pay their statute labor taxes will be hailed to the Police Court, according to City Treasurer Bell. About 2 students in Arts and Medicine have thus far evaded all efforts of the tax collector, but if they believe they will be forgotten entirely, they are warned that such is not the case. They will be treated as any other tax delinquent according to Mr. Bell.

"The taxes are on the rolls and we have nothing to do but collect them," Mr. Bell pointed out. "Some object that we should not assess those students for statute labor, but that has nothing to do with this department. The assessment has been made and we are in duty bound to see that the taxes are collected. Our only course left for us to take is to bring the delinquents before the police magistrate."

WORLD SURPLUS OF WHEAT LARGE

Nearly One Million Bushels, According to Estimates of International Institute of Agriculture.

OTTAWA, Dec. 17.—With a yield higher than last year by nearly a bushel and a half per acre, the world's wheat production, excluding Russia, is estimtaed by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome at 3,461,000,000 bushels. This is 351,000,000 greater than that of the preceding year and 558,000,000 in excess of the five year average. The yield per acre for the five year period is 14 bushels. It was 14.5 for 1922 and 15.9 for 1923. A first estimate of the wheat crop of Australia, received today is 120,000,000 bushels compared with 107,000,000 bushels last year and 102,000,000 the average of the five years.

The estimated expotable surplus of wheat in all the exporting countries for the current grain year is 950,000,000 bushels. The estimated requirements of the importing countries amount to 717,000,000 bushels.

Imports Theoretical.

These import figures, according to T. K. Doherty, Commissioner, International Institute of Agriculture, given as prospective for the current year, are the actual ones for the preceding year, but the exportable surplus figures are merely theoretical and take no account of unmerchantable grain or waste.

"In Canada official inspections from September 1 to Dec. 10," Mr. Doherty continues, "shows only 85.32 per cent. of contract grade wheat compared with 92.40 per cent. to same date last year. If the Canadian grades continue in the same proportion, over 14 per cent. would have to be deducted from the total shipments from the farms and it is known that producers will not ship wheat believed to be under grade and of a grade that will be more profitable as hog and poultry feed.

Surplus Vanishes.

"The United States do not report under grade wheat at the terminal markets, but it is recognized that even a larger proportion is non-contract or retained on the farm for feed. Hence, even assuming that the official reports of other exporting countries do not comprise so large a proportion of undergrade or waste wheat, the theoretical surplus inferred from the institute report as carry over on August 1 next decreases to the vanishing point, especially if the exports for the current year are to approximate those of the preceding year and actual exports to November 24 run only 11 million bushels behind them, notwithstanding the late movement of the Canadian crop. The imports to Great Britain to same date are 13 million bushels ahead of last year.

"Recent events emphasize the improved European conditions and forecast a further increased demand."

REGINA, Dec. 17.— The advisability of organizing a movement to persuade the provincial governments of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba to undertake the completion of the Hudson Bay Railway will be considered at the annual convention of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association to be held towards the end of January. A resolution containing the proposal has been received at S. G. G. A. headquarters from the recent Kerrobert constituency convention.

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—(Associated Press)—Many German educational institutions are closing because of the economic situation. Others are removing from the cities to districts where living expenses are much less.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 17.—An event of interest to the Masonic Order throughout this district took place here this week in connection with the meeting of St. John's Lodge, A.F. & A.M. This lodge has the distinction of having among its two hundred and fifty members five who have seen fifty years of continuous Masonic connection, a record which probably exists in few towns of the size of Cobourg. These five gentlemen are: Wor. Bro. J. W. Bickle, V. Wor. Bro. Robert Buck, both of Cobourg; Bro. Geo. Gruillet, Port Hope; Wor. Bros. R. J. Winch, of Peterborough, and Bro. Peter Williamson, of Hamilton. The two latter were unable to be present. Wor. Bro. J. W. Spragge, W. M. of St. John's Lodge, presided with ability over the meeting.

Wor. Bro. James F. McCullough the three gentlemen to the Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, Rt. Worshipful Bro. W. J. Drope, of Lindsay, who accompanied by Rt. Wor. Bro. W. M. Logan, Grand Secretary, came purposely to Cobourg for the occasion.

The first to be presented was Wor. Bro. J. W. Bickle. Then Wor. Bro. T. J. Stenhouse introduced V. Wor. Bro. Robert Buck, and Wor. Bro. J. W. Odell introduced Bro. George Guillet.

The Grand Master addressed these veterans in Masonic service, in appropriate and pleasing terms and presented them with Masonic Jewels of beautiful design. The recipients made appropriate reply.

Very sincere regret was expressed because Wor. Bro. R. J. Winch, of Peterborough, and Bro. Peter Williamson, of Hamilton, were unable to be present. Wor. Bro. Bickle, in his remarks, recalled the circumstance that Wor. Bro. R. J. Winch initiated him into the mystery of Masonry. Fifty years ago the lodge numbered sixty-five members, now there are 250.

Wor. Bro. Buck stated that he had been in Masonry for nearly fifty-one years and for forty-one had filled the office of Secretary.

After the banquet which proved to be a notable feast, Wor. Bro. Wormington, District Deputy Grand Master of Ontario District, presided over an interesting toast list.

Grand Master Drope, in replying to the toast "Grand Lodge," was in reminiscent mood and referred to his early boyhood at Roseneath, and his attendanse at High School and at Victoria College at Cobourg.

Grand Secretary Logan delighted all with his witty characteristic address.

Rt. Wor. Bro. Slade, of Toronto, was listened to with much interest.

V. Wor. Bro. Moore, of Brooklin, was another appreciated speaker of the evening.

Musical numbers were given by Rt. Wor. Bro. Geo. Page, Bro. M. E. Hall and Bro. F. Parkinson. Guests were present from Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Colborne, Orono, Brooklin and other places.

Pratt—Jamieson

COBOURG, Dec. 17.A Cobourg citizen, who deals in raw furs, appeared in the police court this week, charged with not keeping a record of his sales and also with buying skins out of season. A fine amounting altogether to $55.75 was imposed and the man also lost his license. The charge was laid by an Inspector of the Fish and Game Department, and was the first of its kind to come before the courts here for some time and consequently evoked considerable interest.

Community Christmas Tree

Cobourg's annual community Christmas tree is to be held on Thursday evening next. The Cobourg Citizens Band and the Salvation Army Band will be in attendance and will accompany the Christmass carols in the community sing-song. The children are to assemble at the various Sunday School rooms and led by the bands, march to the Town Hall, in front of which will be the huge tree all aglow with colored lights and beautifully decorated. Each child will receive a ticket that will entitle it to a gift from Santa Claus.

Proposed War Memorial

As yet Cobourg has erected no war memorial to commemorate the sacrifice of its citizens who fell in the great war, but the local press is being largely used these days for communications from veterans and others expressing their views upon the form the memorial should take and inciting citizens to action. A public library or a monument are each being feely advocated. The Cobourg Primar Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire has been working for a couple of years past, having in view the erection of a memorial, but it is thought now that the town should assist also.

Action Entered Against Town

Dr. Adam Watson, a member of the Cobourg Town Council, has entered an action in the Division Court against the town of Cobourg for damages. Dr. Watson claims $100 for injuries sustained through alleged negligence of the corporation and the contractor who was replacing a sidewalk on Queen street last September.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 18.—Councillor R. H. Cole announces that he has no intention of running for the deputy-reeveship but that he intends to be a candidate for re-election to the Council. New Manager Here

Mr. K. K. McCallum, of Stoughton, Sask., arrived in town on Saturday and has assumed the position of manager of the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Mr. Leavitt, who has been acting manager since the former manager, Mr. R. T. B. Bonnegan was transferred to Chester, Nova Scotia, has gone to his home in Montreal.

Death of Wm. Thompson

The funeral took place at Oronoon Thursday of William Thompson, a former well-known resident of Durham County, as he ran a tannery at Orono for many years. Of late he has been residing with his daughter, Mrs. W. S. Roy, at Cooksville, where he passed away at the ripe old age of 85 years. Four children survive their father: J. C. Thompson, Toronto; William, of Chicago; Mrs. W. Colville, Orono, and Mrs. Roy, Cooksville.—

George E. Purdy Died Suddenly

More particulars of the death of George E. Purdy, formerly of Colborne, who with his family has been living the past few years in Bowmanville, have been received. Mr. and Mrs. Purdy went to Whitby the day before his death to visit their daughter, Mrs. E. R. Freeman and her family. He was apparently as well as usual and all spentt a pleasant evening. All retired, but about 2 a.m. Mr. Purdy was taken ill. Everything possible was done for him but he passed away during the early hours of that morning. He is survived by his wife, three sons, Ira F. Purdy, Bowmanville; Hiram and Kenneth of Rochester, and by one daughter, Mrs. E. R. Freeman.

BELLEVILLE MAYOR FOR BONNE ENTENTE

W. C. Mikel, K.C., at Ottawa Banquet Made Plea For Goodwill.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press)—W. C. Mikel, K.C., mayor-elect of the city of Belleville addressing La Bonne Entente League at a banquet in the Chateau Laurier last night, referred to the celebration at Belleville next June of the 14th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by the United Empire Loyalists and said that the early French missionaries inculcated a distinct religious strain into the French settlers of Canada, and the U.E. Loyalists brought a strong patriotic settlement to this country. Religion and patriotism the two noblest sentiments are therefore woven into the warp of the Canadian people and are their two outstanding characteristics today, and should make a great nation. As wealth and population pass westward, the seat of the British Empire may be in Canada resting on the sure foundation of religion and patriotism.

Mikel made a plea for a "better understanding" between the two basic peoples of this country, the French-speaking and English-speaking. "By understanding each other better, suspicion will disappear and mutual confidence arise. Misunderstandings rather than actual grievance separated the American colonies from the Mother country. Misunderstandings caused the war between the North and the South. We cannot afford to misunderstand each other."

LAST GRAIN BOATS TO LEAVE SUPERIOR.

Thirteen Vessels at Fort William Remain For Winter Storage.

FORT WILLIAM, December 18.—With the clearing of the J. J. Sullivan, with 390,000 bushels of wheat, and the Price McKinney, with 268,000 of wheat, the last boats of the season in all probability left this port for the lower lakes. The T. J. Drummond cleared for Duluth late on Saturday night with a cargo of flax and she may make another trip to Duluth, since the rates are favorable, three and a half cents, practically the same as for the bay ports.

There are now 13 vessels lying at the head of the lakes, which will take on grain for winter storage at a rate varying from 5 to 6 cents. The Drummond will also put in the winter here.

SETTLEMENT STARTED EARLY LAST CENTURY IN ASPHODEL SECTION

Sturdy Pioneers Arrived in the Township in 1820 By Way of Rice Lake — Story of the First Bridge

Steady Development.

HASTINGS, December 18. — An interesting story unearthed from old documents tells of the settlement of Asphodel Township and its subsequent development under the sturdy pioneers who reclaimed its land from the wild. The first settlers arrived in the township in 1820, the first survey also taking place in that year, and soon after a few settlers found their way into the township by way of Rice Lake, among the earliest of whom was John Beckett and his family.

Other early settlers pushed through the wilds of Percy and crossing the Trent River, assisted in its early settlement.

Among the names of the pioneers into Asphodel are Mr. John Cameron and his sons James, John, Duncan, Donald, and Ewen, who located in its south-western portion, but subsequently removed to Otonabee; Messrs. Walter Scott, Robert Humphries, Hugh and Alexander McColl, W. Kirkpatrick, Job Humphries, Richard Birdsall, William Housten, and Charles Parker.

Thirty-seven families were brought into Asphodel by the immigration of 1825, and others were gradually added to their number. But the situation was then so remote and the distance to a market, in the absence of roads, so great, that progress was slow, and the struggle for existence was maintained under very discouraging circumstances.

Soon after the first settlers began to find their way into Asphodel a little mill was erected at Norwood by the late Joseph A. Keeler, of Colborne. It contained a single run of rock stones driven by a tub water wheel and a bolt covered with muslin.

Although a mere apology for a mill, it was the greatest utility to the early settlers who carried their slender store of wheat on their backs from an adjoining county for a distance of ten to twelve miles to Keeler's mill to be ground.

Just prior to the erection of this mill a saw mill had been erected by Mr. Keeler the same dam and flume supplying the motive power for both.

First Bridge.

About the year 1826 the first bridge across the river Trent connecting the townships of Asphodel and Percy was built. Its site was in a portion of the river then shallow one mile above the village of Hastings. It was built in a most ordinary manner and was carried away during the following spring. A second and more permament structure was speedily erected chiefly by government aid, to replace it and this with constant vicissitudes of fortune and by the aid of sundry repairs lasted for a long term of years and proved a great public convenience until superseded by a more costly though not more durable bridge crossing the stream below the dam on the site of the present structure.

This bridge was erected about the year 1845 and after a little more than twelve years became so decayed as to render a new one necessary.

The present bridge was accordingly built in 1858, Peterboro County contributing towards it the sum of $2,400.00.

The old bridge was frequently tried by masses of ice and rafts of ice and rafts of timber passing down the river.

According to the official returns for 1832 the entire population of Asphodel was 265, the number of persons assessed 55; acres cultivated 767; total assed value $1,680.00, and total rates for all purposes $76.80.

Only Six Had Horses.

Up to 1835 the townships had made but little real progress. Only six residents owned horses at that time and the entire township only contained four frame buildings, the population in that year was returned at 428.

During the early years of the township of Asphodel two distilleries were in operation, one managed by the late John Beckett a little distance south of Westwood and the other by Mr. Patrick C. Foley, a mile west of Norwood.

During the call for militia in 1837 the people turned out voluntarily in number large in proportion to their scanty population.

Richard Birdsall, Esquire, took the lead of the Asphodel company and served during several months in the battalion at Peterboro without pay or reward.

During the decade that followed, the farmers of the township made substantial progress and passed from their early struggles to a state of competence and plenty.

Many fine farms and elegant farm houses now grace the landscape and harvests are grown and reaped as successfully and as surely in Asphodel as perhaps in any part of Canada.

How Population Grew.

In the year 1866 Asphodel had 550 ratepayers which would give a population of about three thousand; the total assessed value of its real and personal property was $276,286 and the amount of its county rate alone exclusive of townships and school rates was $1,446.84.

The number of militia for 1866 as returned was: first class, 138; second class, 22; third class or reserve, 78.

The census by religion for the year 1861 shows: Church of England, 390; Roman Catholic, 1025; Wesley Methodist, 28; Bible Christian, 10; Free Church, 496; Church of Scotland, 92; Baptists 2, and other churches, 67.

Notes From Santa Claus

BY SANTA CLAUS

TOYLAND, North Pole, Dec. 18.

My dear Children: Every child every place can probably imagine the great rush that has come over Toyland, these past few days.

Why, I have never seen so much activity!

In fact, there was so much to do this year, in preparation for my annual trip to the home of good little girls and boys, that I had to ask everybody in Midget Land to help me.

It's because I have received so many, many letters from boys and girls, and so many, many requests from dads and mothers.

This girl wants this present, and that boy wants some other present. And it seems every mother and dad in the world has written me, telling me what Tom, Dick and Harry, and what Susan, Jane and Mary want.

Maybe you thing so many letters would make me mad. But, honestly, children, the more letters I get the happier I am.

I cannot think of anything better than fulfilling a wish of a child.

Just to show you children how I appreciate your writing to me and how much I like to have you like me, I am going to tell you all about what's going on in my great Toy Land, these few days before Christmas.

Tomorrow I'll send you another letter and it will tell you all about what's going on in the Toy Land zoo and in the workshops where the Midgets make blocks, balloons, rubber balls and lots of other things.

Yours truly,

SANTA CLAUS.

INDIA SWARAJ HOLDING ALOOF

Won Provincial Election But Decline Governor's Invitation to Form Government.

CALCUTTA, British India, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—C. R. Das, leader of the Swaraj Party, which won the recent election in the province of Bengal, has written to Earl Lytton, the Governor, declining the invitation extended him to form a Government, it was announced Monday.

Mr. Das, in his letter, explained that the Swaraj Party, the Indian home rulers, were pledged to put an end to the Diarchy which governs India, an object they would be unable to accomplish if they accepted office.

Mr. Das, chief lieutenant of Ghandi, the non-cooperationist leader, is one of the most prominent advocates of Indian independence, but advocates a policy of non-violence.

The Swaraj, at its meeting Sunday, adopted the suggestion later announced by Mr. Das, and also suggested that the Swarajists would reject all Government measures until the national demand for at least a provincial responsible government was granted, in the meantime refusing to accept any offers respecting Governmental offices.

The Hindu-Moslem pact aiming at establisning foundations for self-government was also adopted. This pact provides for the allotment of government posts and seats in the Legislatures, as well as mutual concessions in religious affairs.

BELIEVED TO BE THE WRONG MAN

AURORA, Ind., Dec. 18.— The police of Jamestown, N.Y., to-day added another angle in the mystery of Lorenzo T. Farley, alias Jack E. Faston, who is being held here, by forwarding alleged identification and a warrant for his transfer to New York, where a charge of attack with murderous intent has been filed against him.

Farley has been in jail here awaiting action of the Canadian authorities, who now express doubt as to his real identity. The suspect was thought at first to be George Norton, wanted at London, Ont.

The Aurora prisoner has a marked physical disability which does not check up police records at London. Police Chief G. F. Elliott, of London, arrived here to-day to take over the prisoner, but he hesitated to do so because of doubtful identity. He said he though the man was not Norton, but added he could give no definite opinion.

Gradual Line on the Graph Indicating the Growth of Prohibition Has None of the Sudden Revulsions of Sentiment That Mark the Down-Trend

OLD-TIME BAR GONE

(By GEORGE W. H. ERITT)

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 19.—Trace a steadily rising curve to a dot labeled 1918, then drop it sharply to another dot at 1923, and on the white paper ahead place a leering question mark.

There you have a history of prohibition in Canada.

On the rising slope are wavy ups and downs representing the varying successes of the Dominion Alliance or drys, and of the opposition that fights now as the Moderation League.

But none of the waves in the line has the sudden, violent, jagged appearance of the depression since 1918. This plunge takes one's breath.

Local Sentiment Rules

If you place the Canadian graph now alongside a similar curve for the United States, there appears a striking parallel. That is, up to 1918.

The eighteenth amendment has held the United States to the peak level of its legislation. Unhampered by constitutional restriction, following its fundamental policy of determination by provinces, Canada has altered the course as local sentiment wished.

But there is no getting away from the parallel. It insists upon the question, "Will United States eventually follow Canada in this latest turn?"

Canada reflects the American movement through most of its history.

New Brunswick First

When Maine went nominally dry in 1851, the adjoining province of New Brunswick followed in four years with a tentative prohibition law. It lasted a year.

When the American prohibition party was organized in 1869, it was followed soon by the Dominion Alliance. And so it continued. Dominion-wide prohibition was voted in 1898, but the government never put it into effect.

"County option," as provided in the "Scott Act " of 1878, was for years the Canadian national policy on prohibition. In certain provinces provision was made for votes by townships and municipalities. Local option was specially popular in the maritime provinces.

At the beginning of the war Ontario had 68 per cent of its municipalities dry and Quebec, 75 per cent.

Has Time Restrictions

The war eventually brought dominion-wide prohibition. It was ordered by the government, effective in April, 1918, continued until Jan. 1, 1920, and was severely "bone dry."

Prohibition by the province as a unit had been started in 1901 by Prince Edward Island. Influenced by the war-time wave of prohibition sentiment, other provinces fell into line. The landslide included in order Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, Alberta, Ontario, News Brunswick and British Columbia. The federal order brought it in Quebec also.

Dry forces naturally, fought against repeal of the war-time order, but in vain. They did obtain, however, a law which permitted dry provinces upon petition, to have the federal government prohibit shipments into their territory.

The dominion government always has retained control over the manufacturers of liquors and beer in dry provinces and export from such provinces. It permits that business today.

Governmental Control

After the dominion dry order was revoked, the provinces began rapidly to jump the fence from the prohibition fold. Quebec inaugurated its present system of government sale and licensing in May, 1920. The next June British Columbia put a similar system into effect by authority of popular vote. Yukon territory followed in September.

This year the progress has continued. Manitoba voted for government sales in June, Alberta in November. A petition is to be presented in Saskatchewan before Christmas and a vote is expected in the spring. Ontario almost certainly will vote on the question next year and the other provinces are astir.

The old-time open bar has passed out in Canada. No one agitates it Government control is widely present, however, and growing in popularity.

Canada has begun to slip ominously. And the dry army at length is aroused for desperate battle.

SWEET CLOVER AND MILK

Altogether over two hundred acidity tests were made with samples obtained as follows:

1st—While the cows were confined to winter feed of corn silage, hay (free from sweet clover), mixed chopped grain, and mangels.

2nd—While the cows were on ordinary pasture free from sweet clover.

3rd—While the cows were confined entirely to sewet clover pasture.

No purpose would be served in tabulating the figures of these tests, for in no single case, either in samples of milk from individual cows or in the composite samples of the herd, was any variation from the normal acidity of the milk recorded. The acidity of each sample of milk remained constant throughout the entire period of investigation regardless of any change in the diet. Whilst the cows were confined entirely to sweet clover pasture for five weeks, the acidity of the milk showed no variation from the time they were confined to winter feed and ordinary pasture free from sweet clover.

The question of whether or not the organic acids of silage increase the acidity has been pretty thoroughly studied. The effect of inorganic acids has also been studied and investigators are agreed that the acidity of the milk cannot be increased by the acidity of the food.

Flavor Tests

Flavor tests on samples of milk taken for acidity examination were made in two ways:

1st—By tasting the milk in the ordinary manner, and,

2nd—By tasting the curd made from each sample of fresh milk.

All the curds were made under uniform conditions, using standard quantities of milk and rennet, and coagulating at a definite temperature. The original object of making these curds was to find out if the feed including sweet clover affected the coagulation of milk with rennet. Interesting results were obtained and will be discussed in another publication. The curds proved very satisfactory for detecting a variation in the flavor of different samples of milk owing to the ease with which the curd was retained on the tongue while tasting. Although slight differences in flavor from individual cows were noted, in no single case could a taste or taint due to sweet clover be detected.

Opinions have been sought of investigators from various experiment stations in the United States, and all are of the opinion that under proper feeding conditions the flavor of the milk is not affected by sweet clover. It is quite possible, however, that exclusive feeding of any clover or other strong foods, such as turnips, containing volatile organic compounds would affect the flavor of milk, especially if feeding takes place immediately before or during the process of milking. It is interesting to note that dairy stock on natural pasture feed sparingly when the milk cells of the udder become distended.

The exclusive feeding of one kind of clover or any other single food has never been advocated by practical stockmen. From the chemical standpoint there are few, if any, single feeds which provide a balanced ration. Natural pasture is composed of a variety of grasses and clovers, thus providing a balanced ration. It seems logical to suggest that sweet clover should not form the sole constituent of a diet for dairy stock any more than any other food. Providing sweet clover is varied with other foods and the main feed taken after, instead of immediately before or during milking, there should be no danger of so-called sweet-clover flavor in milk. It should be remembered that milk readily absorbs odours which affect the flavor when exposed to the atmosphere. During haying time there is often a strong odour of sweet clover pervading the atmosphere of the barn and the milk-house. Under such conditions milk left exposed would absorb a sweet clover flavor.

I Go Out and Find It Says Izzy and That is How I Get So Much.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18.—Gold is where you find it.

Any old-timer will tell you that.

And the same is true with booze, according to Izzy Einstein, federal prohibition sleuth de luxe.

"I go out and find it," says Izzy. "That's how I get it."

And his moon-like face creases in an expansive grin showing every gold tooth in his broad mouth.

Izzy, whose fame nearly rivals his illustrious namesake who expounded the theory of relativity, chuckles so hard all his 200 and some odd pounds quivers as he begins to tell how he is "drying up New Orleans, wettest of all American cities, by Christmas."

Pete Hunts Fights

The story starts with Izzy drifting quietly down from New York and registering at an exclusive hotel with "Battling Pete" Reagan, his pugilistic protege.

Now, Pete really is somewhat of a boxer. At least, he used to be, before he went to fighting booze with Izzy Einstein.

They were looking for a match. They got training quarters at a private gymnasium, conducted by a former city detective.

And that was only the opening gun in their bombardment of the 2500-odd liquor-dispensing emporiums in New Orleans.

Ten Cents a Shot

After that, Izzy was everywhere. His widely heralded disguises changed with startling rapidity.

First day Izzy was in greasy overalls on the river-front wharves, unloading bananas. He bought "moon" for ten cents a shot in water-front saloons.

That night in "soup and fish"—monocle included—he entered an exclusive club and bought whisky at a dollar a drink. And Izzy swears it wasn't a bit better than the kind he bought for a dime a throw down on the river.

Next day, in flashy checkered suit, he was the hot sport up and down the Tango Belt. He entertained fellow sports, bought drinks lavishly and made all sorts of friends.

But the Tango Belt is in mourning today. And Izzy's to blame.

Then, all bedecked in costly looking clothes and massive jewelry, and posing as a retired brewer, he mingled with kindred spirits at an exclusive luncheon club. He cursed prohibition up and down and sat in for a couple of games of pinochle.

Bucktown Mourns, Too

Of course he wanted their addresses. And down in his little notebook they went.

That night, all dolled up in faultless tuxedo, with a young woman of more than average beauty leaning on his arm, he rolled out to the West-End. There by the shores of Lake Ponchartrain gleam the lights of Bucktown, with its suburban cafes.

Now the lights of said cafes are dimmed. Again, Izzy's to blame.

At three prominent restaurants he applied for a job as a waiter. He was from New York, he said. Cleared out because that "damn Izzy Einstein's shuttin' things up too tight for good sports there."

He did not land the jobs. But two or three proprietors invited him to return later.

He took them at their word. The proprietors and waiters wish he hadn't.

"It's the funniest game in the world," muses Izzy.

High Power Gin

He even laughs about the time the bartender in New York served him kerosene when he called for gin. The barkeep had met him before.

For amusement, Izzy plays the slide-trombone. That got him a job in Brooklyn once when no other government agent could get past the doors. In the raid that followed, a truckload of liquor was the prize.

He admits he has worked at every job from bank-clerk to peddler of collar-buttons in getting evidence.

"New Orleans it is wettest spot I've struck," he asserts. "But I'm gonna make it dry by the time Santa Claus comes."

And the 2500-odd bootleggers are beginning to think he is darned near right.

THAT SETTLES IT

The bargaining for the cow had been going on leisurely for an hour.

Finally the prospective purchaser came flatly to the point.

"How much milk does she give?" he asked.

"I don't rightly know," answered the farmer who owned her, "but she's a darn good-natured critter, and she'll give all she can."—Woman's World.

RAISED CHILDREN WORTH MILLIONS

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—"I wouldn't take a million dollars for my experience, and I wouldn't give a nickel for any more."

It isn't a war-wrecked veteran who expresses that sentiment this time, but Mrs. Josephine K. Ormsby, the "world's champion mother."

The Siamese twins 20 years ago were no more famous to frequenters to side shows than Mrs. Ormsby. In seven years she gave birth to 14 children, including two pairs of twins, a set of triplets and a set of quadruplets. Six of the children survive today.

Made Family Famous

The quadruplets, born September 29, 1901, of course clinched the family's place in history. They were the attraction which thousands paid their dimes to behold and won the title of champion for the mother. Physicians said they could not live, but the entire quartet is here today.

Mrs. Ormsby with two daughters and two small grandchildren lives in a cottage on the far outskirts of Chicago, hidden away as quietly as if it were not the home of a national celebrity. They have a flock of goats, chickens, geese, turkeys and a garden.

"It made life pretty hard to take care of all the children, but they were sent from God and they are a comfort to me," says Mrs. Ormsby, a gray and wrinkled woman of 55, turning through the family album.

"I was married in 1894. I wouldn't marry like I did if I had it to do over again. Mr. Ormsby and I didn't get along happily, and he left me just before the 'quads' came. I have had lots of chances to marry since I heard he was dead, but I never considered any ot them.

"The year after we were married the first baby came, a boy. The next year we had twins, Joseph and Josephine. The next year it was a girl. Then came Daisy Elizabeth and Mary Alice. Daisy died last year, and these are her babies living with me now.

"After them came the triplets, George Dewey, Carter Harrison and Helen Gould. Next was a boy, and then in 1901 came the 'quads,' Edith Viola, John Studebaker, Theodore Roosevelt and William Hearst. George, Helen and the 'quads' are all I have left."

"The paper told the other day, Ma, about a man offering to sell his baby for $5000," interrupts Edith.

Money Couldn't Buy 'Em

"Well, I wouldn't take $5000 for any of mine, or for any of these grand babies," says Mrs. Ormsby. "But I don't think it's a good idea to have such big families, and I wouldn't choose it if I had my life to live over. But they're not going to take any of mine away from me."

The Ormsby family had been in modest circumstances before the father left in the early summer of 1901. His departure left them destitute. The quadruplets overnight brought fame and fortune. Mrs. Ormsby had a four-passenger baby carriage built and promenaded in state. Finally it appeared that everyone interested had paid to see the 'quads' and poverty overtook the family.

The children were placed in an orphanage, in spite of the mother's protests, until about seven years ago Then they returned home. The four quadruplets show more variation in appearance than is common among twins, and Edith, the smallest, is less than five feet tall.

JAPANESE ERECT TEMPORARY HOMES

Buildings Will Last Only Five Years—Money and Material Scarce.

TOKIO, Dec. 18 (Associated Press)—Officials place the toll of death resulting from Japan's earthquake and fire of September 1 at approximately 150,000. The material losses are estimated at anywhere from four billion to ten billion yen. The cost of reconstruction cannot be accurately estimated, as government decision is awaited, on plans under consideration.

Meanwhile 40,000,000 yen (about $20,000,000) has been spent in relief work, and the quakes continue. According to the meteorological bureau there have been 1,370 quakes since the big one which occurred at exactly 11:58 o'clock on the morning of September 1. Of that number 356 occurred on September 1st and 2nd. The number continued at a decreasing rate daily thereafter.

No two authorities agree on the extent of the material losses. K. Kodama, president of the Yokohama Specie Bank places the "direct losses" of the government and private concerns at 4,000,000,000 yen, while Chokiuro Kadono, chief director of Messrs. Okura and Company, one of the largest concerns in Japan, says the losses will reach 10,000,000,000.

Small buildings are springing up everywhere. There is neither money nor material enough at hand or obtainable at present to start reconstruction on a grand scale. Permits are not being issued for buildings that are to stand for more than five years and both foreign and Japanese companies that wish to rebuild are being told they must await the final decision of the government on plans for rebuilding the devastated cities.

DIPLOMACY ALWAYS PAYS

Hubby.—Really, Ethel, seven pounds for a hat is the height of extravagance!

EVEN CHINA HAS JOY-RIDERS.

Peking.—Chinese coolies sure love their little joy-rides. It is nothing for one of them to spend his last few pennies on an automobile ride that will leave him stranded miles from home. Complacently he trudges back, satisfied he has got his money's worth.

LET'S BE PROUD OF OUR INSTINCT.

For One Man, Of All Who Condemn Us, Favors Our Ways, and He Is Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Well, granted we are creatures of instinct, and not reason, what's wrong with that?

This is all: we women have taken this charge from the opposite sex too seriously. We've almost come to believe our lack of reasoning ability makes us inferior to man.

But no. Here's a man himself who sides with us. He's Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, medical director of the Life Extension Institute here.

In fact, Dr. Fisk, well known for his activities in connection with the promotion of personal hygiene and the prolongation of life, goes even further. He urges us to continue in our own feminine ways, for our instincts, he adds, are basically sound, to be depended upon and logical.

For instance—take the matter of age.

The best of us will hedge when it comes to that, or will slice off a few years when no one is looking if we think we can get away with it. Or we'll indulge in a nice little cry when the birthday anniversary comes around, no matter how handsomely we may have fared in the way of gifts.

Discard Birthdays

Men call this vanity. But it isn't, the doctor says.

"There's just one thing to do about birthdays," he assured me. "Forget them. Women's way is the only way. Discard the calendar as a record of age. Let's measure our age by our physical condition, which is the only fair measure, and be as old or as young as our bodies.

"Not that I have any objections to calendars," he explained. "But we have attached such false significance to 30, 40 and 50 that it is almost impossible not to let down at each milestone, just because the years seem to call for it."

Then there's good ground for the other feminine instinct—the desire to alter the figure. Do you number among your acquaintances one woman who isn't dieting to reduce or to increase her weight?

"Instinctively a woman realizes she must control her physical contour if she is to keep from 'settling down'," Dr. Fisk went on. "As women give up exercise and yield to overindulgence in food, the aging process manifests itself in flesh and flabbiness.

Wrong Step

"Women who have become neurotic, anemic and undernourished lose their feeling of youth and seek to regain it by adding on flesh and restoring the natural stature.

"To be sure, many women in their eagerness to keep young and agile have not followed the most judicious but the laziest means. They depend on cosmetics and alternate starving and gorging to do what only reasonable diet, fresh air, exercise and a cheerful philosophy and tenacity to youthful illusions and enthusiasms can do.

"But through their determination to stay young in face and in form, women have set up better standards for men and have imposed better living conditions upon the world. In all forms of public health work and health propaganda, you will find more woman workers than men, because these activities give them an opportunity to follow their natural instincts and impulses toward perfection.

"So, instead of curbing their impulses toward health and beauty, women should develop them," he concluded.

HE SAID A MOUTHFUL.

HINDU MUSLIM UNITY IS INDIA'S PROBLEM DECLARES EDUCATOR

Difficulties Between the Hindus and Mohammedans Is Effectual Bar to Self-Government — No Solution Reached.

WANT OF VISION.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 18.—(Associated Press).—Sir Rabindranath Tagore, poet and educator, has condemned the proposed wrecking of the legislative councils, and questioned the possibility of any adequate self-government in India on account of the difficulties between Hindus and Mohammedans. He advocated the building up of new and independent institutions instead of trying to wreck those now in existence, and held the regeneration of rural life to be more important than national reform.

The one problem of the day, said the poet, was the question of Hindu-Muslim unity. He considered that the leaders of the country had not yet been able to arrive at any practical or permanent solution of this problem, and was thoroughly convinced that until the question has been effectively solved all efforts to establish self-government will be wasted. He stated emphatically that he was not one of those who thought freedom from foreign rule would immediately solve all India's difficulties.

"The Mahommedans," he continued, "are united in all religious matters, and have a democratic organization. I cannot understand why they wish to come to terms with the Hindus who are demoralized with internal divisions and dissentions and full of the false pride of religious aristocracy. The Mohammedans have strength in them and are conscious of it. They know that the Hindus are weak. I cannot expect the Mohammedans to rise above their nature and determine their relations with the Hindus in a spirit of broadmindedness.

"I went to Malabar immediately after the Moplah rebellion. There I saw with my own eyes how 4,000,000 Hindus had become mortally afraid of only 1,000,000 Mohammedans. The Hindus were living at the mercy of the Mohammedans. What has been possible under the British Government would remain possible should that government be removed.

"Another factor which makes it almost impossible for Hindu-Muslim unity to become an accomplished fact is that the Mohammedans cannot confine their patriotism to any one country within geographical limits. The Moslem would has been built up on a basis of religious fraternity. It is the bond of religion alone which firmly unites Mohammedans scattered over widely different parts of the globe. Even such men as Mohammed Ali have declared that under no circumstances is it permissable for any Mahammedan, whatever his country may be, to stand against any other Mohammedan."

There Is Beauty in Your Body But It Can't Be Shown By a Painted Face.

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Don't be deceived by the beauty that you see. Most likely it is the beauty of the lipstick and powder-puff.

Real beauty is not in the face alone. It includes the whole body and comes from healthful exercise and training.

This is the message of Paula Pogany, who has come here from Austria-Hungary to teach women a new type of beauty based on a knowledge of bodily sturcture.

"I find the average woman much less intelligent about her figure than her face," says Miss Pogany. "She can look into the mirror and see for herself what improvements her face needs. She has standards of beauty for the complexion, hair and profile. She knows how she wants to look.

"But when it comes to her body, the average woman has just one ideal. She doesn't want to be too fat to wear fashionable clothes. Whether she stands correctly or walks beautifully or has a statuesque body does not interest her so much."

Harm in Fashion

Nine out of 10 women today stand badly, Miss Pogany adds, and consequently they have acquired the protruding abdomen and the concave back that has resulted from a general effort to follow styles.

"Some women blame their figures to going without corsets, others to wearing stays," she says. "But the real reason is their ignorance of anatomy. Only a knowledge of their bony and muscular structure will correct their defects."

Miss Pogany believes the corset started most of the trouble.

"Because it gave women false ideals of beauty," she explains. "Women actually distorted their bodies to conform to fashionable standards instead those of nature.

Muscle to Fat

"The corset made women flabby and anemic because all pressure on muscle fibre, no matter how light it is, will deteriorate the muscle. Unused muscles that have been allowed to die quite frequently turn into fat. The gross arms and hips we see today are the result of dead muscles and bad circulation."

Diet will reduce flesh, she adds, but only corrective exercises based upon a knowledge of the bodily structure and functions will bring it back to beauty after it has been ruined by bad posture and inactivity.

"Instead of taking your cue from manikins and style magazines, go to the museums and art galleries and study the beautiful structure of the Greek statues," she advises. "When you compare your own outlines with those of the Venus de Milo, you will realize how far we have strayed from symmetry and how necessary it is to return."

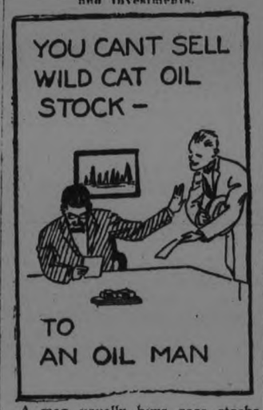
MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



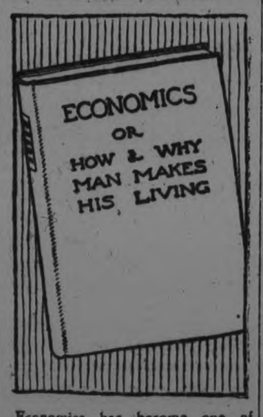
A man usually buys poor stocks in an attempt to get rich quick. The only reason these stocks can ever be sold to him is because he is unfamiliar with that line of business.

You can't convince a shoe man that anybody ever became rich in that business without working his head off. He knows too much about it. Yet a stock slick salesman probably convincing him that he could easily double his money in the oil business.

It is human nature to believe that the other fellow gets his money without much effort. The shoe man thinks his neighbor is getting rich easily in the oil business, and the oil man probably has the same ideas about the shoe business.

There is nothing enticing about the cold hard facts which each man understands in his own business. Consequently, the get-rich-quick salesman in any given line will have to lure his victims from another business. He can't fool the man who understands that business.

Be sure you understand a business before you let any one sell you stock in it. If you have no knowledge from experience, seek the advice of an honest, relaible man who has.



Economics has become one of our most-used words. Just what is its exact meaning-

Economics is the science that deals with material human wants and the means by which they are satisfied.

It is plain that our wants are not limited to necessities. We don't eat to live; instead we often live to eat. We are not satisfied with warm clothing, or weather-proof housing. They must be ornamental as well. There is apparently no end to the wants of man; no one is absolutely satisfied; the more we get, the more we want.

In order to attempt to satisfy these numerous wants, we have to work. No one except Alladin with his lamp ever figured out a way to satisfy wants without working.

In economics, then, we study about what a man wants and how he works to get it. To sum it up, economics is the study of how everybody makes his living.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

FURUNCULOSIS

Furunculosis or pimples together with their little darker brothers, comodones or blackheads, decorate the faces of altogether too many people, young and middle aged, women as well as men.

Through pinching and squeezing their pus-producing organisms are sometimes forced into the venous circulation. The blood stream may then carry them to other organs or tissues of your body, where they may do serious harm.

This may sound rather unimportant, as the majority of people regard squeezing a pimple or two a morning exercise of no consequence. But you may some day have a condition for which you cannot account. It may be a serious infection, causing you much pain and suffering.

Their presence is usually the sign of a lowered bodily resistance. Perhaps your diet is not evenly balanced, containing too high a percentage of carbohydrates, such as vegetables, starch and sugar. If your skin is naturallly oily, you may be forcing this unnatural suppurative condition by eating too much energy or fat-forming fo . Carelessness in bathing or allowing the pores to become clogged by lack of proper exercise or free perspiration, may also encourage pimples.

To get rid of pimples, try the following treatment:

Do not squeeze, pinch or puncture them. A mild, simple ointment or a zinc ointment should be smeared on them to cause a gradual drying up or ripening of the pustules. When ripe open carefully with a sharp sterile instrument. This will result in a small scar which may eventually disappear.

Be careful not to cut or scratch your skin. If the pimple is a deep-seated one try the application of a small, hot compress.

FIND U. S. LACKS 800,000 HOMES.

National Housing Officials Seek High Costs Cut to Aid Building.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18. — A shortage of between 800,000 and 1,000,000 houses in the United States was revealed by officials of the National Housing Association, who met here recently for the three-day session of their ninth conference.

Three vital factors in shortage were summed up as:

High cost of money.
High cost of material.
High cost of labor.

Bridgeport, Conn., is the only city in the United States with a surplus of houses. During the war the Government constructed dwellings for workers at industrial plants there, and when the war was ended, there was an exodus.

Acute in Five Cities

New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Boston now are facing an acute housing shortage. In many other cities there are no houses available for the workingman and few are under construction.

To relieve the shortage, which is declared dangerous to the health and morals of young Americans, at least six remedies must be adopted, assert the conference officials.

These are:

1. Banks must let up the embargo on building money. At present they are unwilling to make loans of more than 50 per cent. of the value of the building. This retards construction, and invites profiteering on second mortgages.

2. Builders must be content with smaller profits to stimulate construction.

Must Change Types

3. The type of house for the workingman must be changed so as to get cheaper construction. Unnecessary 'ginger bread' designs can be eliminated, and open the home market to the salaried group of $35 to $50 a week, and 30 per cent. more of the population would be home-owners.

4. The cost of building materials must be lowered by increased production, with the wages of the makers of the materials the same as now received.

5. Cities must improve suburban properties, installing sewers, water mains and electricity, so the land will be available for building operations.

6. Building codes of "Tutankhamen's time" must be changed to modern codes and standardized. Variety then could be eliminated and building material produced at lower cost.

Scores Profiteering

Profiteering, irregular employment, unwillingness of banking institutions to lend money on real estate and the failure of contractors to employ apprentices were blamed for the country-wide housing shortage by speakers last week.

Declaring labor wants the responsibility for high housing costs placed where it belongs, Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, laid it at the door of every element other than the building trades, entering into the construction of the building. He asserted there was profiteering in the purchase of land, the transfer of title, in money costs and in contractor's, architect's and engineer's charges, but he said the public knew nothing of it.

"If they did," he said, "there would be a quick change in public opinion and the blame for the high cost of building would be placed where it rightfully belongs. That is one important thing that labor wants to have done."

CARELESS MORALS FOLLOW COSTUMES.

Slinky Slouchy Way of Women's Dress Has Lessened Morale, Declares Authority.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 18 (United Press).—Girls don't "roll their own" any more—it's passe—declared Madame Antoinette, nationally known authority on women's dress, speaking here.

Along with the low rolled hose under dimpled knees has vanished the corsetless figure and the short skirt, the madame said:

"The slinky, slouchy, slovenly way that women have been dressing in the past has done much to lessen the morale of the mind," she stated "It is not to be expected that looseness of standards of dress will cause anything but looseness of standards of everything else."

All the false curls and the puffs and the million and one other hair extravagances have passed away, too, or are rapidly vanishing, according to Madame Antoinette. The correct way this year is to follow the headline and coil the hair at the back of the neck in a simple roll.

And the lip-stick, rouge and powder-puff—they, too, have made "positively their last appearance."

"Don't paint the lily," she pleaded "Why does youth indulge in the lipstick and rouge and other cosmetics when it is not necessary? Keep yourself fit and the skin, if there is any left, will take care of itself.

"Older people use cosmetics, and that is all well and good, providing they are applied artistically."

To men, Madame Antoinette awarded the prize for being the best judges of women's appearance. "A pretty face attracts," she said, "but a glance at the face is followed by glances down to the feet—and my lady's clothes must be as well and carefully kept up as her face."

GERMANY PREPARES FOR REVENGE WAR DECLARES FRANCE

Army Experts Claim That Fatherland Can Put Half Million Armed Men in Field Without Calling Reserves.

PARIS, Dec. 18 (United Press).—In the mind of French military men, Germany is preparing for a war of revenge. Marshal Foch has officially pointed out the danger to the Conference of Ambassadors. It has been practically decided that the work of the Interallied Control Mission, which lapsed with the Franco-Belgian occupation of the Ruhr last January, will be resumed, at least partially, this month, in centers where the Berlin government may be able to accord protection to the allied officers.

What is the exact status of the German military machine, which the treaty of Versailles limited to seven divisions of infantry and three of cavalry, comprising a total of 95,255 officers and men, in addition to the general staffs of the army corps and the artillery, the total not to exceed 100,000 effectives?

Says Army Is Strong

Lieutenant Colonel Reboul, who, previous to his retirement from the army, served on the Interallied Control Mission in Germany and the countries bordering on Russia and is in close touch with the high army circles here, has just declared that the camouflaged German army is as strong numerically as it was before the war. In an article in the Temps he traces the organization of the Einwohnerwehren, which was followed by the Orgesch, which in turn was replaced by various military formations, ostensibly volunteer corps, but providing an efficient system of training for millions of young Germans.

Before the war Germany had 21 army corps, each with its general staff and comprising two divisions. Colonel Beboul points out that the seven infantry divisions comprising the Reichswehr, or regular German army, are so distributed and organized that they cover exactly the same territory as the pre-war corps and are capable of being immediately split up into 21 army corps, or 42 divisions. The German division, according to the treaty of Versailles, consists of 410 officers and 10,830 men.

Thus, while complying with the letter of the treaty, Germany would be able to put into the field half a million infantry without calling on the reserves.

Has 21 Trained Staffs

The treaty permits the establishment of only three general staffs of army corps two for the infantry, one for the cavalry. Colonel Beboul holds that there are actually 21 trained staffs. Moreover, Germany, in view of the next conflict, according to this expert, is building up:

1.—A railroad system especially adapted to the strategic transport of troops;

2.—A mobilization machine similar to the pre-war organization;

3.—A war industry capable of manufacturing in a minimum period of time all material needed for a prolonged campaign.

According to the treaty, the armaments allowed for the seven divisions comprises 84,000 rifles, 18,000 carbines, 1,926 machine guns, 262 minenwerfer, 204 field guns, calibre 77, and 84 howitzers of 105. In contrast with this, Colonel Reboul recalls that during the functioning of the Control Mission the allied officers found in the factories at Muenster 400,000 parts of rifles, 77,000 rifle barrels, 4,000 barrels of anti-tank guns, and in the factories at Rockstroh 343 howitzers tubes, 245 similar tubes in construction, two hundred pieces of steel, evidently intended for the manufacture of howitzers, besides five machines for rifling big guns.

Marshal Foch has declared that since the occupation of the Ruhr, when the work of the control mission was interrupted, this war construction has moved ahead at an enormous rate.

RADIO NEWS.

At the time of the Second National Radio Telephony Conference, called by the Secretary of Commerce Hoover in the early part of this year, the question of allocation of wavelengths was thoroughly taken up. The interference caused by a great number of broadcasting stations transmitting on a few assigned wavelengths was remedied by setting aside a band of wavelengths from 222 meters to 545 meters for their use.

Due to the increase in wavelength of many of the broadcasting stations it is necessary for many receiving tuners which formerly could tune up to 400 meters only be changed so that the stations above their range could be reached. A receiving tuner employing honeycomb coils for tuning can easily reach the higher stations by substituting a set of coils that have more turns on them. However, the sets using inductances such as variometers and variocouplers find it is almost impossible to reach the higher wavelengths without adding more turns to the instruments or by using condenser across them. When some of the stations can only be reached on the very top of the tuner scale it is best to add a loading coil consisting of a honeycomb coil of thirty to fifty turns in series with the aerial. A coil having a similar number of turns of number twenty-two wire wound on a three-inch tube, single layer, will suffice in place of the honeycomb coil.

The usual single circuit set employs a variable condenser in series with the antnna or ground for tuning. A condenser in series with the antenna reduces the wavelength of the set so it will be necessary to remove this condenser and place it across the inductance in the primary. That is run one wire from the condenser to the aerial binding post and the other wire to the ground binding post. In some commercial sets which use two fixed condensers in series with the antenna, one post for short waves and one for long waves, such as the Aeriola Senior manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the wavelength can be increased by connecting the post not in use to ground.

IMPORTANCE OF TIGHT PART

A wrench and screwdriver should be applied occasionally to every part of the car to make sure everything is tight. A car is subject to considerable vibration and there is danger of the nuts and bolts coming loose at the base. If this is not attended to almost anything may happen, from oil leakage to a wrecked engine.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Young Peoples' League Held a Bazaar to Help to Pay Missionary.

MILLBROOK, December 18. — The bazaar held at the Waverly Parlours on Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Missionary Department of the Young People's League, though not on a large scale, was well attended, and proved a successful event. Mrs. G. W. Sayles is the efficient vice-presidnt of the department and is indefatigable in her efforts to make every arrangement as perfect as possible

The sale is an annual affair, and is one means used to raise the $100 for which the League is responsible as their share toward the salary of Rev. E. Hibbert, the missionary who represents this Peterborough district in China. The other sources of income are personal subscriptions and the offering taken up at the monthly missionary meetings.

The bazaar was not opened until 3 p.m. but a large number of prospective purchasers were on hand before that time, and selling commenced briskly immediately the hour had struck.

Miss Stella Hetherington, president of the League, had charge of the fancy work table where dainty handkerchiefs, aprons of many varieties, towels embroidered and crochet-trimmed, bags of a number of patterns, books, calendars, caps, etc., were rapidly picked up. The novelty table was presided over by Miss Olive Fallis, and the smaller folk soon exchanged their nickels and dimes for the gay-coloured balloons, whistles, picture books, and other toys which it contained.

Miss Bertha Hatherly was behind the counter of home-made candy, and her attractive wares also rapidly disappeared.

The blue and white streamers and the large C.G.I.T. monogram which decorated the rear section of the room, together with the daintily laid tables, proclaimed the fact that the "Wide Awakes" group were serving afternoon tea, and also a regular tea at 6 p.m. Those assisting were: Gladys Tucker, Marjorie Sayles, Vera Weeks, Jean Burnham, Gladys Willis, Lillian Sanderson, Hazel and Flossie McMahon, Bertha Lang, Eleanor Fallis, Wilma Fallis, Marie Kenyon, and Elsie Spence.

Mrs. E. Kenyon was the guest of her sister, Mrs. G. W. Sayles for a brief stay last week, returning to Peterborough on Saturday.

Mrs. H. Mulligan is making an extended visit with Mrs. J. Kerr and other friends in Toronto.

Mrs. G. Paterson, of Detroit, who has been visiting her brothers, Mr. T. Douglas, Cavan, and Mr. J. Douglas, Peterborough, for the past two weeks, returned home last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ball and Mr. and Mrs. P. I. Bentley were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Burk McGill, Janetville, on Sunday, Miss Thelma Ball returning home with them that evening.

Miss Ella Elson is the guest of friends in Peterborough this week.

Mrs. J. Gardiner and Miss Luella Kennedy were visitors to Peterborough on Saturday.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Many times a hostess is puzzled as to how much to prepare for her guests. Of course, the sort of occasion enters into this very largely. For instance, a smaller portion of salad will be served with sandwiches at an afternoon tea than the same salad served with lettuce at a luncheon.

These calculations may help you:

One quart of whipping cream will whip to serve 25 persons with one large spoonful. Whipped cream for chocolate would serve 30 cups.

One-half pound cocoa will make 25 serving cups of chocolate. This will require about four quarts of milk.

One quart of ice cream is calculated to serve from six to eight persons. A brick cuts ordinarily into six portions, but seven or eight can be made if served with cake.

Sandwiches, made from sandwich loaf, 48 slices to a loaf. These are cut in thirds or halves. One pound of butter will spread 60 whole sandwiches. Three pints of filling will make 60 sandwiches.

Weights and Measures.

One large layer cake is calculated to serve from 12 to 16 persons. If several kinds of cake are served the cakes should be cut in small portions.

One quart of salad serves six to eight persons, varying with the service and occasion.

Four pounds of chicken after stewing make one quart of salad.

Three pounds fresh salmon are calculated to make salad for 25 persons.

Three one-pound cans of shrimps make salad for 25.

One quart hot bouillon serves 8 persons.

One pound of coffee serves 30 persons.

Three pints of chopped meat are calculated to make croquettes for 25 persons.

OYSTERS—Buy number for stew, four to a person; raw, four to six to a person; in cream sauce combined with mushrooms, 150 for 25; chopped in made dishes, two and one-half to three quarts with the liquor.

Averages Only.

It must be remembered that these are rough estimates for the average occasion. They may serve to help you to compute the quantities needed for your own special needs.

In planning for a large dinner, if the cook calculates on the basis of her needs for her own family, she can arrive at a fair conclusion.

In making over recipes be sure to keep the proportions the same, double every ingredient if you are making twice the rule. In the matter of cakes it is better to make two ordinary ones than one extra large one. This is true of any dish that requires a large amount of beating.

In the case of chafing-dish cookery, two chafing dishes normally filled are preferable to one overfilled.

The length of time required to cook large quantities is increased to some extent, but not in proportion to the increase in the rule.

"THIS AT LEAST IS CERTAIN."

In the darkest hour through which a human soul can pass, whatever else is doubtful, this at least is certain:

"If there be no God and no future state, yet, even then—

"It is better to be generous than selfish.

"Better to be chaste than licentious.

"Better to be true than false.

"Better to be brave than a coward.

"Blessed beyond all earthly blessedness is the man who, in the tempestuous darkness of his soul, has dared to hold fast to these venerable landmarks."—F. W. Robertson.

DIET FOR WOMEN UNDER 25 SHOULD BE WELL BALANCED

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 18.—Young girls who are dieting for fear of getting fat are much more in danger of contracting curvature of spine or some other deformity, Dr. Helen S. Mitchell, chief dietician in charge of the experimental laboratories of the Battle Creek Sanitarium, attending the third annual conference of health officers and public health nurses, is emphasizing the importance of teaching the people correct food values. The question of young women restricting their diet was called to her attention.

Tries It On Rats

"Girls younger than 25 need have little fear of becoming too fleshy," she said. "What they need most is to select for themselves a well-balanced died, one that will give them the proper amount of protein and minerals and that will furnish the necessary vitamines. I have no doubt that the many cases of spinal curvature and other deformities of the skeleton in young girls are due to insufficient of mineral matter in the food. Young girls should drink plenty of milk and eat an abundance of vegetables. They can easily select foods that bulk largely but that have low calory content, if they show a tendency to take on undesirable weight. But in any event, they need variety in diet, plenty of vegetables and greens, and these may well take the place of large quantities of meat."

Dr. Mitchell has with her several cages of white rats which are used in experimental work in her laboratories. She explains that the food requirements of rats are very similar to those of human beings, and that if a diet proves faulty on insufficient for rats, it may be considered as unsuited to human needs.

"Meat, potatoes, white bread, butter substitute and sugar form the skeleton of many family meals," said Dr. Mitchell. "Rats fed on such a diet lived only from two to five months. When whole wheat bread was substituted for white bread, the life of the rats was prolonged about six months. But if milk, eggs and a variety of vegetables were provided in place of part of the meat and potatoes, the rats become sleek and well nourished instead of being rough and scrawny as was the case of those which did not have the vitamins and minerals and proteins found in the better diet."

LIBERAL PARTY HELD A CAUCUS

Both Labor and the Conservatives Are Making Strong, Indirect Bids For Liberal Support.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — (United Press).—Holding the balance of power in Parliament, the leaders of the Liberal party held a caucus at the National Liberal Club to-day to decide upon a party policy.

Both the Labor and the Conservatives are making strong, indirect bids for Liberal support.

The former Premiers, Asquith and David Lloyd George were among the speakers, and the former stood for a definite rejection of any alliance, informal or otherwise, with the Conservatives for the purpose of "keeping Labor out."

The view taken by that veteran politician is that it would not be fair play and would be unconstitutional for the Liberals to do such a thing.

Asquith is also convinced the Liberals can turn out Labor or the Conservatives either whenever necessary. The Rothermere press is conducting an active campaign, urging Asquith to support the Conservatives and prevent a Labor Government.

PETERBORO CORPS MADE HIGH MARK

Peterboro Collegiate Cadets Won a Silver Shield.

"A contest of great interest among Cadet Corps of the District has just been concluded in the Laura Secord Candy Co., Rifle Competition. In the senior group about 20 teams were entered from the District, composed of teams of 10 Cadets, from Collegiates and High Schools. The first prize a beautiful silver shield, was won for the second time by the Peterboro Collegiate Cadet Corps, with a score of 972 points out of a possible 1000.

In the junior group about 25 teams were entered composed of 5 cadets from any Public School Cadet Corps or Company. In this Peterboro again did very well, 7th place going to "A" Coy. Prince of Wales School with a score of 401 points out of a possible 500, 8th place to "C" Coy. Queen Mary School with a score of 400. 9th place to "B" Coy. King Edward School with a score of 398 and 10th place to "D" Coy. Central school with a score of 397 So close was this competition that it took the last shot fired to decide the winners of the special prize of $5.00 offered by the District Cadet Officer for the best team in Peterboro, this of course being won by Prince of Wales school on a 1 point margin.

It is expected that keen competition will prevail in the coming Canadian Rifle League Series to be competed for throughout the Dominion. "Peterboro Public Schools on top", is the slogan now heard everywhere.

The competitions were conducted under D.C.R.A. rules, with a representative from headquarters supervising, and Peterboro Cadets are to be congratulated upon the splendid Sportsmanship displayed throughout.

THE RED VIRGIN ON TRIAL TODAY

ermaine Berton Known as the Red Virgin Faces Charge of the Murder of Marius Plateau.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(United Press). The "Red Virgin," as they call Germaine Berton, went on trial today for the murder of Marius Plateau, noted Royalist.

Mlle. Germaine is an anarchist, one of the most celebrated of France. She is strikingly pretty, 20 years old, and reputedly the misogynist her nickname indicates. Plateau just happened to be in the offices of the Royalist newspaper "L'Action, Francaise," when Germaine went around to shoot the editor, Leon Daudet.

The trial of the pretty anarchist is expected to heighten the tension between Anarchists and Royalists, and the court-room was heavily guarded.

The death of Daudet's 15-year-old son, Phillippe, by his own hand, recently, may be dragged into the case, for the lad left the home of Phillippe's suicide in a taxi. He declared the boy had expressed the intention of avenging the arrest of Mlle. Berton.

NO ALLIANCE SAYS BALDWIN

Asquith Declares No Overtures Have Been Made to Leaders of Other Parties — Preserve Uncompromised Freedom.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — (Canadian Press).—Former Premier Asquith, speaking at a meeting of the members of the Liberal party this afternoon, at which Lloyd George and practically every Liberal member of Parliament was present, declared the Liberals intend to remain free from alliances with other parties.

"There has been no overture, direct or indirect, official or unofficial, above ground or sub-terranean, by us with leaders of either of the other parties," Mr. Asquith said. "That freedom I intend to preserve uncompromised and unfettered and in complete and unassailable integrity."

"If either protection or capital levy is submitted to the free vote of the Commons, it will be defeated in each case by a majority of more than 200. If we understand our business, it is we who are really in control of the situation. The days of the present Government are, of course, numbered."

Mr. Asquith declared he would not move a finger to connive at a prolongation of the present Government's "disastrous stewardship," and added, "We are not going to become a wing or an adjunct of any other party."

Mr. Lloyd George, who spoke next, said: "I am in complete agreement with the policy laid down by Mr. Asquith."

HOW COMMUNISM IS TAUGHT HERE

Forty Schools in Canada Teach Red Doctrine

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 18. — (Canadian Press.) — There are in Canada, 1,259 children in at least forty schools, who are being instructed in the principles of "Communism," through the instrumentality of the Ukrainian Labor Temple Association, according to a news story published by the Manitoba Free Press in the course of a series dealing with the history and alleged objectives of that organization.

The children in these schools, declares the Free Press story, "are taught the principles of Communism under the same system which prevails in Soviet Russia and Soviet Ukrainia. "The largest school is said to be in Winnipeg with 250 scholars 8 to 16 years, and another in Transcona has 200, while three others in Greater Winnipeg have smaller attendances. Toronto is alleged to have 189 scholars, Port Arthur 45, Thorold 80, Regina 325 Lethbridge 68 and Moose Jaw 62, Fort William 59, and there are said to be 25 other branches with an average attendance of 25.

RADIO IS BEING USED BY PILOTS.

Greater Safety For Air Mail Carriers When They Get Lost Is Assured.

Hereafter, when an air mail pilot's engine stalls on him in midair, he may have a rescue party waiting for him by the time he reaches ground. At least, the rescue party would be on its way to his relief by that time.

This comes from the comforting news sent out to pilots and would-be pilots by the Postoffice Department at Washington. It is that plans are under way for the use of radio receiving and transmitting sets on air-mail planes. Equipment of these planes is expected to be completed in a short time.

This decision of the government authorities follows successful experiments made at Schenectady with a combination receiving and transmitting set of the super-heterodyne type, the most efficient apparatus in existence. Under most severe weather conditions, this set was found to function without failure. Besides, its comparative simplicity in operation has caused its approval for this use.

Use of such apparatus on an airplane will obviate the necessity of pilots to depend solely on beacon lights at night, or on other forms of signaling during the day. Wherever they may be, night or day, in heavy fog or severe storm, all they need do is send out a call for landing assistance. With the pilot and the landing station talking to each other, the pilot can be directed to the ground with more safety than under any other condition.

Emergency Aid

In case of emergency, when an unexpected landing must be made, the pilot need only send out a call for help and tell his position, to be certain of rescue. Without the radio equipment, pilots have landed in such out-of-the-way places that they had to undergo severe privations before their rescue was effected.

For these, and other humanitarian reasons, radio equipment has been found essential to safe flying.

Since the mail plane carries only the pilot, to conserve space for the "paying load," or the mail, the radio engineers detailed to design a set for the planes had to make this a complete one-man, simple-control apparatus. It would have to be simple enough not to interfere with the pilot's flying duties.

Simple Operation

This requirement has already been fairly well met by the engineers at Schenectady. The only difference between the plane set decided upon and the simple telephone is the pilot has to operate a switch to talk or listen. That requires little extra effort.

The turn of a large knob to its maximum reading prepares the set for transmission. To receive, there are only two knobs to adjust in tuning. Once tuned in, all the pilot need do is throw the switch from "transmit" to "receive" and back, as he talks and listens.

A trailing wire of 200 feet acts as the antenna. When the plane takes the air the antenna is let out from a reel in the cockpit. It is grounded to the framework, engine and gas tank.

The sound of the engine, or interference from passing air currents, are as nothing against the efficiency of the super-heterodyne. That is why this set was chosen for this purpose. Its sensitivity and high selectivity reduces interferences to a minimum.

FRIVOLOUS GIRLS MORE ATTRACTIVE.

Men Seek the Company of Women During Their Leisure Hours When They Want Company.

Is a silly girl more popular than the intelligent girl? This momentous question (don't be too sure it isn't momentous) was discussed recently by young ladies at University of Chicago.

There's a popularly accepted belief that a frivolous girl is more attractive to men than a girl inclined to discuss the Einstein Theory in preference to the latest movie sensation. This belief, of course, is based on the supposition that men seek the company of women during leisure hours when they want companionship that'll be a complete change from the monotony of humdrum business.

A frivolous beauty undoubtedly is more alluring than a homely highbrow. Beauty compensates considerably for ivory brain But an intelligent beauty has the field to herself, a combination supreme. And deliver us from a homely woman who's also silly.

The final answer, of course, is in the law that water isn't the only thing that seeks its own level. Personality and intelligence also seek their own level.

The appeal of the so-called silly type of femininity is mainly to the silly type of man. The intelligent girl appeals primarily to intelligent men.

The law slips a cog frequently, when the leading actor wants to gratify personal vanity by comparison. For instance, a beautiful woman can get a thrill by associating with women of lesser charms and observing her superiority in this particular. So with mentality, there's a natural elation and satisfaction when any one discovers that his brain power is superior to his associates'.

Such is the psychology of the intelligent man attracted to the "nobody home" type of feminine beauty. He's gratifying his vanity, rather than worshipping the girl.

Our associates are mirrors in which we can see our own images, like attracting like—or our own weaknesses, like attracting unlike, to gratify vanity.

BLIND VETERANS WORK AS SKILLED LABORERS

BERLIN, Dec. 21 (Associated Press).—Men who lost their eyesight during the war, to the number of 94, today find profitable employment in the Siemens-Schuckert Electrical Works in this city. They work on boring and stamping machines, and such has been their training that they labor successfully alongside of men whose sight is not impaired. But special devices have to be attached to the machines of the blind to protect them against accident.

DUNDEE REGAINS HIS LOST TITLE

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Johnny Dundee, of New York, world's featherweight champion, added another star to his crown last night by taking the United States junior lightweight championship back from Jack Bernstein, of Yonkers, on a judge's decision after a 15-round bout, the feature of the Christmas charity show at Madison Square Garden.

In a semi-final bout, Babe Herman, formerly of California, sustained two broken ribs and was forced to retire at the end of the eighth session of a 10-round bout, conceding a technical knockout to Kid Sullivan, of New York. Herman had a safe margin when injured.

In defeating Bernstein, Dundee regained the first title he had ever held which he lost to the Yonkers lad last summer. The title was created for Dundee by Promoter Tex Rickard because of his weight, which ranges around 130, and his long career against men of heavier poundage, most of whom he defeated. After losing to Bernstein, Dundee won the world's featherweight title from Eugene Crique, of France.

DRECO BUILDS HIM UP

Weak and Run Down, Mr. Scott Tries Famous Herbal Remedy and Whole System Immediately Responds. Never Gets Tired Now, He Says.

"Last spring I had an attack of La Grippe," says Mr. George E. Scott, a prominent farmer of Hastings, Ont. "It left me in a badly run-down condition and I couldn't seem to get anything to build me up. I continually had a tired, worn-out feeling and everything I did was an effort to me. I couldn't sleep at nights and would lie awake for hours after going to bed, and would get up in the mornings feeling all tired out. Had a very poor appetite and had to select my food with great care so as to avoid the agonies of indigestion. I was chronically constipated and had to use harsh laxatives all the time.

"But I am feeling my old self again since taking Dreco. I have only used two bottles of it, but it certainly went to the spot and everybody tells me how much better I look. I can work all day without tiring, sleep soundly at nights and have a splendid appetite. My bowels are regular every day too, and all my old time strength and vigor has returned."

Dreco is the most reliable tonic and body builder known. Its pure herbal juices put the digestive organs in healthy working order so that they assimilate the nourishing values of the food and enrich the blood with its life-giving strength. The whole system benefits as a result and strength and vitality return once more. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterborough by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also at Lakefield—E. H. North; Campbellford—J. E. H. S. and by a good dr[illegible]d George.

DREAM POINTS WAY TO BODIES

Real Estate Man and Girl 14, Who Vanished Oct. 30, Are Found in River

SPRING LAKE, Mich., Dec. 18.—A dream by George Snyder, Spring Lake contractor, revealed the bodies of Harry B. Proctor 33 years old, Grand Haven and Muskegon real estate dealer, and Edna Fullager, his 14-year-old companion, buried in the mud of Grand River, three blocks from the Proctor home here. They had been missing since the night of Oct. 30.

"For three nights I dreamed of their resting place," said Mr. Snyder, next-door neighbor of the Proctors. 'I finally made a sketch of the place and took it to the officials. It was only a dream, but something told me it was the solution. A half hour after they started to drag the Proctor automobile was found."

The automobile, a coupe, was found 30 feet from the dock at the end of Park avenue. The doors were closed and the car in second gear. The windshield was broken, showing that the two had made an effort to escape. The girl's body was first brought to shore by members of the Coast Guard. It was located near the automobile. A half hour later Proctor's body was found, also near the machine.

Mrs. Rosie Fullager, a widow, mother of Edna, was at the river along with 5,000 Grand Haven and Spring Lake people when the body of her daughter was recovered. She was led weeping from the scene by friends. Mrs. Proctor was at her home three blocks away.

When informed that the girl's body had been found, Mrs. Proctor said: "Well, they soon will find his body, I think that Harry went down there for more moonshine and the girl, inexperienced at the wheel, drove the car into the river. They have been selling moonshine down there."

The night of Oct. 30 Proctor visited at a Grand Haven home with Mrs. Proctor. After dinner he excused himself and said that he had to make some business calls. A short time later he called at the Fullager home, having sold Mrs. Fullager a house. He had been drinking and said that he did not like to drive his automobile. Edna volunteered to drive and it was finally agreed that she should go with Proctor. He promised to return within half an hour. That was the last seen of the two alive.

When they did not return Mrs. Fullager reported the matter to the officials, and the next day a warrant was issued for Proctor, charging him with abduction.

Friends of Proctor insisted that he had met death. Twice Grand River, at the foot of Washington avenue, was dragged for the bodies. Meanwhile Sheriff Delbert Fortney started a nation-wide search. Many clues were run down and finally it appeared that the two had dropped from sight for all time. Then came the dream of Mr. Snyder. Officers finally consented to drag once more, and the solution of the mystery which has stirred the two towns, Grand Haven and Spring Lake, as no other affair in years, was solved.

Proctor came from Lansing to Grand Haven six years ago and had prospered in the realty business. He also was prominent in society and established a fine home in fashionable Spring Lake.

Proctor leaves, besides his wife, two sons, Earl, 3 years old, and Ralph, 9 years old. The two boys played about the home yesterday, unmindful of the tragedy.

"They have found daddy's body," said Mrs. Proctor to her son, Ralph.

"Oh," remarked Ralph, and continued on with his play.

An inquest will be held by Ottawa County officials, it was announced.

Although the natural theory was that Proctor had eloped with the girl, friends of the family insisted that he was dead from the first.

WORKING LIKE MAD AMID AWFUL RUINS OF JAPAN'S CITIES

Thrilling Picture of Tokyo and Yokohama Struggling to Throw Off the Horrors of the Great Calamity.

(By CLARENCE DUBOSE)

TOKYO, Dec. 15 (United Press).—What do Tokyo and Yokohama look like now, two months after their desperate disaster?

Yokohama looks like all the ruin and wreckage of all the Western war front, concentrated into one place, and then smeared over with all the "Y" huts and Red Cross soup kitchens and shacks and shanties in all the world.

Three-fourths of Tokyo looks exactly the same as Yokohama.

And yet that isn't a perfect picture. For, before the earthquake Tokyo was unlike any other city on earth. Unlike any other city in Japan. It was itself. And so, in its ruin and rebuilding, it is again, a picture without parallel. Put it this way:

You've seen the "city dump" out beyond the slums of your town—the place where all the old junk, the tin cans, the refuse was piled, awaiting the incinerator, or the barges to float it down the sea. Imagine that stuff covering twenty square miles out of thirty square miles of area that had been the third or fourth largest city on earth!

Take your own city! Imagine it shaken to pieces first, then burned, and then your city "dump pile" scattered all over the devastation and that burned, too—leaving blistered sheet iron and warped corrugated tin roofing and, occasionally, half-burned timbers—and blackened human bodies. Pile the half-burned dead up in heaps, pour oil on the awful pyre and complete the burning.

Put a million half-starved coolies to work carting the debris away. Then put 'em to work erecting flimsy, one-story, raw, unpainted, wooden shacks, roofed with tin. Look out over your twenty-square miles that had been a city. See nothing except these shacks, shacks, shacks—squat things; raw timber, tin-covered tops—everywhere mushrooming up through burned and blackened wreckage. Nothing except the sound of coolie carpenters hammering new shacks into shape. Workmen, in the fantastic coolie garb, skin-tight blue trousers and heirogylphic-marked jacket, swarming like ants—literally like ants—over all the landscape—carting away the "dump-pile" into which a great city was almost instantly converted; building shacks and shanties, thick as booths at a county fair, throughout all the rubbished area.

That's a part . . the biggest part—of the picture of Tokyo. It's all of the picture of Yokohama. But in Tokyo there are patches here and there, and a considerable stretch of suburban districts, where the fire did not reach, where the earthquake damage has been repaired, and where life has just the same appearance it had before the disaster.

Like War Training Camps

In the Tokyo parks, and for that matter over a large part of the burned area, the sight now suggest one of America's great training camps during the war—only with the wooden barracks much lower, much flimsier, much uglier and vastly more crowded together, and with wreckage and ruin scattered all around—but being rapidly removed. These barracks may house anything from refugees to one of the biggest banks.

An amazing amount of work has been done. It is, without exaggeration, herculean. Enormous quantities of rubbish and wreckage have been carted away, and carried off on coolies backs and several hundred thousand shacks have been built across these ruins. A million coolies have done the work. There could be a much greater death-list than even this last disaster brought, and still Japan would have almost unlimited man-power—Which will continue. For in just one park, and a small one, 4,000 babies have been born or soon will be born among the refugees, according to medical reports.

The people will continue to live and do business in these shacks and barracks until permanent structures can be built—and that will, at least, be a year or so, in many cases longer. And the very poor will continue all their lives to live in these shacks, or others like them, just as they did before the earthquake. The cold fact is that the coolie, the very poor coolie, if he has any sort of a roof over his head, a mat to sleep on and a paper wall around him, and a little dab of rice every day, is living just as well now as he ever did or ever expects to.

Tokyo's Broadway

The "Ginza," Tokyo's "Main street," Tokyo's Broadway and Fifth Avenue, was completely destroyed. Already shacks have replaced the wreckage of the once proud buildings—and business is being done in all of them. Somebody borrowed the slogan "Business as Usual." Now you find that sign, in English, over almost every shack on the Ginza!

The Marounichi district, Tokyo's pride was, and is, the "big business" section—the home of the big banks and industries and the "skyscraper" office buildings (None over eight stories tall). All these skyscrapers stand—but several are too badly warped and sundered for occupancy. The outside of the great N.Y.K. building is just one mass and network of jagged rents. But the steel frame is intact and ultimately the structure will be restored.

In some of the buildings in this section, such as the Tokyo Kaikwan, or new Oriental hotel, the steel frame itself is so warped as to be unavailable for reconditioning.

But, broadly speaking, the Marounichi district stands, and is all of modern, business Tokyo that does stand—which means that everybody with business to transact has rushed madly to the Marounichi Building and others in the neighborhood, begging to rent desk room, office room, store room. It is the equivalent, in a way, of New York, Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco, Dallas, Atlanta—any city you name—being, overnight, confined to its one biggest office building for all the important bulk of its business facilities. Today the Marounichi building, day and night, is more congested than the Chicago Loop or the Brooklyn Bridge at the rushiest of rush hours.

Dead Not Forgotten

And there are the temples and shrines. The little "Jizo's" (god of the children) stuck up in wayside places. Mothers pray before Jizo and put a little bib around his neck and that brings blessings to the baby. The temples are crowded. Wayside graves—pathetic graves wedged here and there in the junk-heap—have fresh flowers, and fresh bowls of rice, and fresh cups of sake—that those who died in the earthquake may have refreshment in the other world.

They say that the faith of the Orient is a sealed book to the Western understanding. Yet it is a faith that produces smiles in adversity, courage amid danger and disaster, that keeps fresh the memory of loved ones who have died, but that wastes no time in maudlin tears and hops with a grin to an enormous, a staggering job of rebuilding. And it does that job.

I'd say that Tokyo and Yokohama today are grins, amid shacks, in a junk-heap, with everybody working like fury and that great things will come therefrom.

XXVI. (Continued)

The luncheon was by no means easy and informal. Mary, by racking her memory, recalled the first names of most of them and never in all her varied life had she been more sweetly amiable, made so determined an effort to please. She might not care what they thought of her, but she was sorry for them, they had behaved very decently, and for Jane Oglethorpe's sake alone the occasion must be a success. She was ably seconded by Mrs. Goodrich, who stzred at her in wide-eyed admiration and rattled off the gossip of New York, and by Mrs. Tracy, who had an insatiable interest in diplomatic society. When she had satisfied the latter's curiosity she led the conversation by a straight path to the sufferings of the children in Austria and begged them to join her in forming a relief committee. They received this philanthropic suggestion with no apparent fervor, but it served to relieve the stiffness and tension until they retired to the drawing-room for coffee.

They stood about for a few moments, Mary looking up at the portrait of Jane Oglethorpe in her flaming youth. But the hostess ordered them all to sit down and exclaimed peremptorily: "Now, Mary, tell them all about it or I'll have a lot of fainting, hysterical women on my hands. We're still human if we are old and ugly. Go to it, as Janet would say. I believe you have met that estimable exponent of the later New York manner. You are no more extraordinary yourself than some of the changes here at home, but you're more picturesque, and that's harder to swallow. Put them out of their misery."

The ladies smiled or frowned, according to what humor the Almighty, niggardly in his bestowal of humor, had allotted them. At all events they were used to "Jane." Mrs. Goodrich, who had let Mary to a sofa and seated her beside her, took her hand and pressed it affectionately, as if she were encouraging her on the way to the operating room. "Yes, tell us the story, darling. It is all too wonderful!"

"Do you really mean that you have never heard of this treatment?" asked Madame Zattiany, who knew quite well that they had not. "Few things are better known in Europe."

"We have never heard of it," said Mrs. Vane austerely. "We were totally unprepared."

Madame Zattiany shrugged her graceful shoulders. "I have been told that America never takes up anything new in science until it has become stale in Europe. But women as well as men have been flocking to Vienna. Russian princesses have pledged their jewels"——

"How romantic!" exclaimed Mrs. Goodrich, who was one of those women in whom a certain spurious sense of romance increases with age. But Mrs. Vane mumbled something less complimentary. She had never been romantic in her life; and she was beginning to feel the strain.

"Well," said Madame Zattiany, "I suppose I must begin at the beginning. I dislike holding forth, but if you will have it"——

"Don't leave out a word!" exclaimed Mrs. Tracy. "We want every detail. You've made us feel both as young as yourself and as old as Methuselah."

Madame Zattiany smiled amiably at the one woman in the room who had lingered in the pleasant spaces of middle age. "Very well. I'll be as little technical as possible. . . As you know, I ran a hospital in Buda Pesth during the war. After the revolution broke out I was forced to leave in secret to escape being murdered. I was on Bela Kun's list"—

There was a sympathetic rustle in the group. This at least they could grasp on the wing. Mrs. de Lacey interrupted to beg for exciting details, but Mrs. Goodrich and Mrs. Tracy cried simultaneously:

"No! No! Go on—please!"

"Quite right," said Mrs. Oglethorpe, who was prepared to enjoy herself. "We can have that later."

"I naturally went to Vienna, not only because I had some money invested there, but because I could live in the Zattiany Palace. The old house was difficult to keep warm, and I was too tired and nervous to struggle with any new problems I went at a friend's suggestion into a sanitarium.

"The doctor in charge soon began to pay me something more than perfunctory visits when he found that intelligent conversation after my long dearth did me more good than harm. Finally he told me of a method of treatment that might restore my youth, and begged me to undertake it"——

"Ah!" There were sharp indrawn breaths. Mrs. Vane drew herself up—figuratively, for she could hardly be more perpendicular, with her unyielding spine, her long neck encased in whaleboned net and her lofty head topped off with feathers. A look of hostility dawned in several pairs of eyes, while frank distaste overspread Mrs. Ruyler's mahogany visage. Madame Zattiany went on unperturbed.

"It may relieve your minds to hear that I was at first as indifferent, as all of you no doubt would have been. The war—and many other things—had made me profoundly tired of life—something, of course, that I do not expect you to understand. And now that the war was over and my usefulness at an end, I had nothing to look forward to—but the alleviation of poverty by means of my wealth when it was restored, and this could be done by trustees. Life had seemed to me to consist mainly of repetitions. I had run the gamut. But I began to be interested, at first by the fact that science might be able to accomplish a miracle where centuries of woman's wit had failed"—

"Wit?" snorted Mrs. Vane. "Ignoble vanity."

"Well, call it that if you like, but the desire to be young again or to achieve its simulacrum, in both men and women, has something of the dignity which the centuries give to all antiques. However, at the time, you will also be glad to know, I was far more interested in the prospect of re-energizing my wornout mind and body. I was so mortally tired! And if I had to live on, and no doubt with still much work to do in distracted Europe"——

"But what did they do to you?" cried Mrs. Tracy. "I'd have done it in your place—yes, I would!" she said defiantly as she met the august disgusted eye of Mrs. Vane. "I think Countess Zattiany was quite right. What is science for, anyhow?"

"Go on! Go on!" murmured Mrs. Goodrich. She was too fat and comfortable to have any desire to return to youth with its tiresome activities, but all her old romantic affection for Mary Ogden had revived and she was even more interested than curious.

"I am trying to! Well, I must tell you that the explanation of my condition, as of others of my age, was that the endocrines"——

"The what?" The demand was simultaneous.

"The ductless glands."

"Oh, said Mrs. Prevost vaguely, "I've seen something"——

"It is all Greek to me," said Mrs. Vane, who felt that unreasoning resentment common to the minor-informed for the major-informed. "You promised to avoid technical terms."

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

Finding the Right Job and Measuring Up to It

The Color Perimeter, Which Determines Your Field of Vision and Zones of Color Perception.

ARE you measuring up to your job or wasting yourself in work that does not use the best in you? "Four of every five men," says William J. Kibby, famous business psychologist and employment expert, "never find that work for which they are particularly fitted." Such men offer their employers only those capacities that thousands have. They never use and never are paid for their valuable, often unsuspected, special aptitudes.

Getting the right job has been a vexing problem to most of mankind since the birth of civilization. But the man in the wrong job need remain a problem no longer. How science has hit upon ways of determining the right job, or at least making it possible for a man to avoid wasting time and effort on a job in which he is bound to fail, is explained in Popular Science Monthly by Herbert A. Toops, Ph. D., Research Associate, Institute of Educational Research, Columbia University.

"This new science," says Professor Toops, "may be called 'vocation selection.' It is exact. It is comprehensive, and it is so elastic that, once its principles are explained, almost any man of average intelligence may readily adapt them to test the aptitude of anyone for any trade or profession.

"It is based on the theory that the principal cause of vocational misfits and consequent failures is the haphazard, headlong way in which men rush into a line of work without first determining their intellectual fitness for it. No man of meagre physique and frail strength would think of embracing such a career as blacksmithing, say, or lumbering. Yet men without number whose intellectual equipment is average or less, seek to succeed in professions and occupations that require general intelligence of the highest sort or intellectual qualities of an extremely special sort. Again, men of high intelligence often undertake work whose simple intellectual demands never can engage their hearty interest.

"Early attempts to find for a man the job that suited him went not much further than inquiring what profession or trade interested him. This was better than forcing him into some distasteful occupation, but the limitations of such vocational selection are apparent. Many persons nowadays are interested in radio and automobiles and moving pictures. That obviously does not indicate that they should all be radio engineers, automobile manufacturers or moving picture producers.

"Personal inclination is often superficial and hence an inaccurate and even a dangerous index. Dislike may be expressed for work that would be enjoyed if tried.

"Many persons profess a liking for such professions as banking and teaching. Pressed to explain their preference, if they are honest, they often will admit that they prefer banking because bankers usually appear to be prosperous and because their hours of work are from 10 to 3. Their preference for the teaching profession also usually is founded upon some similar reason—often a misconception. For those who would be bankers because of the short hours of business, or teachers because the schools are closed two days every week and during the whole Summer, usually know nothing of the long hours that bank employes labor after the doors are closed to the public, nor of the nights and holidays the teacher spends correcting papers, compiling reports and attending to other details.

"The new science of vocational selection is based on the principle that if a man says he is interested in a certain profession, whether he has had any experience at it or not, he certainly must have looked into it enough to be able to answer simple questions regarding it. If he can, he proves his interest to be more than superficial."

As an example, Professor Toops takes a man who is considering carpentry. For such a subject he has compiled a set of simple questions like the following to test the interest of the prospective carpenter:

1. What tool do you use to drive a nail?
2. What long tool do you use to smooth a rough board?
3. What size hole will a No. 8 auger bit make?
4. What does a "7" on a saw mean?
5. What tool is used to turn a bit in boring a hole?
6. What is the common name for a 20-penny nail?
7. What tool do you use to drive a chisel?

"But the amount of general intelligence one possesses," Professor Toops proceeds to explain, "determines more than any other single characteristic or any knowledge about a specific thing, what shall be his achievement in life. It is important that one should know whether he is above the average, about the average, or below the average of his fellows in intelligence. Vocational selection furnishes an exact index to the general intelligence of an individual by psychological tests, of which two are illustrated in this article.

"The test illustrated determines aptitude for clerical work, for revealing natural speed and accuracy in handling figures, lines and letters. The test is an intelligence test to measure the keenness and adaptability of your mind.

"But no one should consider that the results of a few tests are conclusive. At the very least a dozen, of varied types, should be taken before one can be reasonably certain that the results represent fairly your mind's capacity. Every corner of the mind must be probed if all its resources are to be revealed.

"A reading test is important in indicating academic capacity or ability to progress in any work requiring quick understanding of the written page, in the study of law, engineering or journalism, for example.

"Get an encyclopedia. Select a paragraph at random and read it once. Then have someone read the paragraph two or three times. Have him ask you questions about it. If he asks you regarding many facts that you did not observe or cannot recall, you are a poor reader. The poor reader cannot succeed in any profession depending on book work.

"If the test shows you are a poor reader, and if you are still anxious to undertake such a career, get special coaching on how to read and study. Learn your difficulties and then start to overcome them. Textbooks on how to read and how to study can be obtained at any public library.

"In order to attack the problem of what you can do, and how you can improve your abilities, take a complete mental inventory of yourself. This inventory should indicate your rating in each of these general tests:

"Ability to read: Indicating ability in book work.

"General intelligence: Giving a general idea of ability to achieve success.

"General mechanical ability: Showing skill in manipulating things as against ideas.

"General clerical ability: Showing natural aptitude for general clerical work.

"General selling ability: Showing capacity for success in dealing with people. This is vital to a salesman, minister, or social worker. Consideration must be given also to the fact that diplomacy, rapid thinking, ability to 'give-and-take' gracefully, quick decision and the ability to accept criticism impersonally are indispensable concomitants.

"The tests I have mentioned furnish only the barest outline of the principles of the new science of vocational selection. They are sufficient, however, to reveal how the principles may be amplified to fit almost any trade or profession.

"I do not want to be understood as wholly condemning the rolling stone. Changing jobs may sometimes be beneficial, provided you know you are working upward, provided your brain and not your heart directs the change.

"A recent study of the biographies of men in 'Who's Who in America,' shows that one out of every five changed the field of his occupation at least once in early life before finding the line of endeavor at which he succeeded.

"No matter what your job, it is not the right job if it offers you no chance for promotion, for gaining wider knowledge, for accumulating responsibilities, nor if it saps your physical, intellectual or moral strength."

"Radio Ear" Is Newest Malady

A NEW affection of the ear is being reported by some radiophans, who sit for long periods at their receiving sets. It is called "radio ear" and is accompanied by noticeable pains in the auditory appendages even when not listening in. Sometimes it takes the form of sharp shooting pains in the head near the ears which cause thoughts of possible abscesses or other serious afflictions.

Upon consultation, ear specialists usually say that the remedy is easy and fairly sure. "You are a radiophan?" they ask. "You spend a good portion of your time with your head phones on?" Upon receiving your replies in the affirmative, they say, "Well, when you go home loosen up on your head phones. The spring is too tight and presses on some of the nerves of your ear. Just like some forms of spectacles," they will tell you. "Your head set is undoubtedly causing the pains. Relieve the excessive pressure and it will disappear."

One assurance of a benefit from radio head sets, however, is pointed out in Radio Digest by Carl H. Buttman. Youths of this generation will never have as protruding ears as some of their older brothers. All youngsters who sit for as much as three hours a day with their head phones clamped over their ears will grow up with close-fitting ears, most experts believe. Mothers who formerly tied back their offspring's ears to prevent their protruding will be saved that worry and trouble if they provide their children with radio receiving sets and head phones.

What MAKES You GO to SLEEP

YOU fall asleep, not because the blood leaves the brain, and not because it is poisoned with fatigue, but probably because of muscular relaxation induced by monotony of sensation, according to the explanation of a writer in The Journal of the American Medical Association. The problem has for the most part been relegated to the psychologists. Old theories have proved to be mistakes.

"Probably the most popular explanation of falling asleep," says this authority, "has assumed an anemia of the brain, due to fatigue at the end of the day's activities. Innumerable schemes to 'draw away blood' from the brain so as to create a cerebral anemia, supposedly favorable to sleep, are familiar to every physician.

"Who, indeed, has not now and then attempted to apply the idea in advice to a patient complaining of insomnia? It will be a disappointment to many, therefore, to learn that, contrary to Mosso's assertion, there is probably a plethora rather than a deficit of blood in the brain during sleep. As for the vasomotor center, furthermore, in Kleitman's observations at the physiologic laboratory of the University of Chicago, it was impossible to detect any loss of tone even after 115 hours of wakefulness, or seven times the normal sixteen-hour period. The low blood-pressure obtained during the insomnia periods was partly due to a slowed heart, and both the slowed heart and low blood-pressure were due to muscular relaxation in the lying position, and were absent when the subject was seated.

"Another favorite theory of the genesis of sleep involves the alleged 'autointoxication with the products of wakefulness.' Chemical compounds supposedly arising as the result of fatigue, fatigue toxins, have lost their popularity of late as sponsors for bodily changes. Kleitman found that a large variety of measurable factors—blood-sugar, alkali reserve of the blood and plasma, percentage of hemoglobin, percentage of corpuscles, red and white blood cell count, body weight, basal metabolic rate, appetite, temperature, ability to name letters and to do mental arithmetic—showed no variations from normal during the period of sleeplessness. There is no evidence of an intoxication.

"Furthermore, while it is true that fatigue will accelerate the onset of sleep, a person can fall asleep when not fatigued at all, and idlers have no difficulty in falling asleep at the usual hour, or at any hour.

"The onset of sleep is probably due to complete muscular relaxation, voluntary or involuntary. We have failed, therefore, to realize the extent to which the impulses pouring into the brain come from the muscles, tendons and joints, in addition to the visual, auditory and tactile sensations that usually play on the sensorium.

"Kleitman concludes that when a person lies down the visual sensations soon become monotonous, and muscular relaxation, removing the greater part of the proprioceptive impulses, precipitates what we call sleep."

New Use for SUGAR CANE WASTE

SINCE the beginning of the sugar industry it has been the custom to use the waste products in a manner which is far from advantageous. Each year the sugar world produces an enormous tonnage of residual molasses and an enormous volume of refuse shredded cane. Neither is of any value as a source of sugar; yet the financial success of sugar raising hinges largely upon their economical utilization in some way.

It has been customary to burn the bagasse, or refuse cane (also known as megasse), sometimes as fuel and sometimes merely in huge piles, as the easiest means of disposal. It will burn—and that is about all that can be said for it. It has a moisture content of 45 per cent, and this must be largely evaporated in the flames before combustion can proceed effectively. Moreover, when used as actual fuel, it causes much scale in the boiler tubes and forms many clinkers, in addition to the excessive losses of heat.

The molasses, on the other hand, can be converted into a rather high-grade fuel; and the ash from its burning is the finest sort of fertilizer possible for application to the sugar fields. If it were burned, instead of the bagasse, the latter would be available for other uses.

Hawaiian planters are finding at least one use for the waste fiber which is described in the Scientific American. Paper can be made of this sugar waste, as of all plant fiber. This is done, and the resulting product, "mulch paper," is used in the fields, being laid in strips over the rows of young cane. As the cane grows its tips penetrate the paper, and the sugar crop suffers no slowing up or diminution through the paper's presence. But the weeds that infest the sugar field have not the sharpness or stiffness to penetrate the paper, and they are completely eliminated, so far as the portions of the field close to the sugar plants are concerned.

A large plantation thus prepared for the growing presents a striking sight. The fact that the bagasse can be thus utilized, with very large benefit to the crop, will doubtless lead to the experimentation necessary to effect a substitution of the molasses for the waste fiber as fuel, thereby completing the cycle of twentieth-century sugar-plantation economy.

HAIR NETS NOT Made of HAIR

THE hair-net that is wholly an artificial product, and not made of hair at all, is bound to arrive before long. It will have no knots, sharp bends and frayed ends; and it will wear longer than the nets now in such almost universal use.

The latter are far from being altogether satisfactory, but hitherto no available substitute for human hair (practically all of it grown on Chinese heads) has been found.

Chester R. Pieper, of La Crosse, Wis., believes, however, that he has solved the problem. He proposes to make artificial hair-nets out of cellulose, a compound of which, brought to a soft plastic state, may be dyed to match all colors and shades of hair.

The compound, after being colored, is passed between two rollers, one of which is scored with lines, in intaglio, representing the pattern of the net. The second roller, which is smooth, presses the plastic stuff into these lines, but contacts so closely with the first one that none of it remains between the rollers except what the depressed lines retain.

Thus the net-work of cellulose, in the desired pattern, comes out complete from between the rollers, and needs only to be dried in order to be ready for use as a hair-net. Being in effect of artificial silk, its threads have all the strength of the latter product.

The net formed by this means has a relatively heavy outer band which serves to fit it upon the head in such wise as to confine the hair of the wearer. When the middle part is pushed upward, the affair assumes an irregular sphericity of shape, giving it the general appearance of the ordinary type of cap hair-net.

Top and Side View of an Artificial Hair Net Made of Cellulose.

Nets of this kind can be manufactured very cheaply, and, inasmuch as there is no preliminary cleaning of raw material to be done (as is the case with human hair), they ought to be inexpensive.

The Danger of Measles

MEASLES must be recognized as a dangerous disease and every child is entitled to protection against contracting the disease, as well as to the best of care and nursing if he should be so unfortunate as to contract it. The old fallacy that a child should "catch" measles and have it over with has been exploded, says a bulletin issued by the California State Board of Health. "Measles teas," where mothers were accustomed to bring their children to a home where a child was suffering from measles, should never occur in California. An English writer has referred to such parties as "orgies of death."

It must be remembered that while the immediate results of measles may not be exceedingly disastrous, by far the most harmful results lie in the after-effects. Tuberculosis, bronchitis, pleurisy, pneumonia, malnutrition and retarded growth often follow and attack of measles. In its complications and after-effects it is one of the most disastrous of all of the infectious diseases. Safeguarding against exposure, better nursing, medical attention and careful home supervision are all essential in the control of this disease.

DISEASES That AFFLICT BREAD

THERE are several changes which take place in bread which are due to the presence of micro-organisms, and which may accordingly be called bread diseases. The first of these converts the bread to such a condition that it can be pulled out into threads. This bread disease is most common. The crumbs become sticky and colored. It is most characteristic, according to the Scientific American, that the bread, on being broken, can be pulled out into fine threads. The bread assumes quite a disagreeable odor and taste. The musty acid odor can be detected in bakeries, where the disease has been prevalent, many weeks after it was first noticed. The particular bacteria which bring about this disease belong to the potato bacilli group and possess one characteristic in common, that they produce spores which are extremely resistant, being able to withstand the heat of the baking oven. The bacteria grow best at a temperature of 20 to 28 degrees centigrade. The formation of the sticky mass in the bread, which can be pulled out into long threads, is due to the bacteria membranes.

Bread becomes blood-colored due to another bacillus. Outwardly, the appearance of the bread is the same, but when it is cut open red streaks are seen in the crumb. This disease and the one described previously are most troublesome to the baker, because once the disease sets in, it is an extremely difficult matter to eradicate it. The utmost cleanliness must be observed to prevent the occurrence of these diseases and to destroy them once they do set in.

Bread also has a tendency to become moldy, for it is a first-rate medium for the development and growth of molds. Various molds can produce various colors in the bread. For example, the mold mucor produces a white coloration, aspergillus glaucus a bluish green coloration, etc. Reddish and black spots may also be produced by molds. Neither the molds themselves nor the decomposition products which are brought about by their presence in the bread are deleterious to the health, but they make the bread unseemly in appearance and unpalatable.

There are various precautions to be followed in order to avoid the development of these diseases in bread. A moderately high temperature is favorable for the growth of the bacteria. Warm bread should be cooled off quickly after baking. The moisture in the bread is also of importance in this respect. Moisture promotes the growth of the bacilli, and hence a poorly baked bread, in which the moisture content is high, will be more apt to be attacked by the germs than a well-baked bread.

How High Temperature Affects the Body

VENTILATION has been found to be of little use in reducing discomfort from high temperatures in humid air, after the temperature has risen to approximately that of the human body, according to a report of recent experiments made by the United States Bureau of Mines on the physiological effect of high temperatures with and without air movement. In temperatures up to 95 degrees the movement of air caused much relief. At 100 degrees the symptoms were fully as severe with moving air as with still.

The subjects used in these experiments, which were carried out by Dr. R. R. Sayers, chief surgeon of the Bureau of Mines, and Dr. Harrington, supervising mining engineer, were experienced mine laborers. The work was carried on in deep and hot metal mines.

The principal effects of exposure to hot, humid and stagnant air were found to be a rise in the body temperature of two or three degrees, a fall in blood pressure, perspiration so profuse that the subjects' shoes were partly filled with sweat, and sensations of giddiness and weakness. These symptoms were all very pronounced at 95 degrees in stagnant air. If the air were in moderate motion little discomfort was felt.

This was not the case, however, at temperatures of 98 degrees and more. Symptoms in still air, which were more trying than at the lower temperatures, were not much relieved by a current of air, while at 100 degrees they were so unbearable that even when the air was moving the subjects were not able to stand a full hour's exposure to the conditions.

A more thorough study of the effect of high temperature has now been made possible through the use of a specially designed room where any desired conditions of temperature, humidity and air movement which are likely to be met may be maintained. From this a system of "comfort lines" is being worked out, a graphical representation of the combinations of temperature and moisture at which equal comfort is experienced. It has been shown that while humidity has a marked influence, the temperature taken by the ordinary dry-bulb thermometer is of great importance. The discomfort experienced is shown to be due more to the increase in the pulse rate than to any other cause, according to findings of Dr. Sayers and Dr. Harrington.

RYAN DECLARES ESCAPING PALS HAD LONE HAND

No Assistance Was Given by Guards. the Captured Bank Robber is Said to Have Stated--Easy to Get Narcotics.

GUARD SHOT CLOSE

TORONTO, Dec. 1..—(Canadian Press).—In a special despatch from Minneapolis to-day Norman "Red" Ryan, noted Canadian bank bandit and escaped convict, being held in Minneapolis on a charge of bank robbery, declares emphatically that he and his companion convicts who escaped from the penitentiary at Portsmouth last Septemer, did not get any "inside' help in the making the break.

According to the Correspondent Ryan stated that "there are all kinds of ways" of getting narcotics and even guns to convicts in the penitentiary, most of it at night over a wall which is left unguarded. "I have had it handed to me' Ryan is said to have told the Correspondent, "that the obys had inside help and that the Warden is hep to the way it worked

Nothing to it. They said the shooting of the guard who ran down from the tower along the wall as we chased ourselves after beating it over the wall, was bad, well if the guys who said that, had been with us five convicts racing along the wall, under the wall with that hick plugging at us every jump, he would have known better. Simpson was sliced across the shoulder and my old pal, Art, got two bullets in the heel of his shoe which tore it off. That shows how close the gink came to getting us.

Never Fixed Guard

"I figured some of us would get it, but the chance was worth it. These flat feet are always handing out this stuff about help from inside every time a bunch makes a getaway. I never had the luck to fix a guard yet and I never heard a real crook say he had. Some of these cheap rummies who rob servant girls, are always talking about standing in with this or that guard but they usually are stooling for the Warden.

Now, I never touched snow or took shot, but I have seen a lot of it and I can hand you this straight, right there at Kingston, they can get all they want without any guard doing any panhandling. How does it come in? Say, all kinds of ways. I don't care if they get wise to this for I think it would help them poor stiffs inside if the warden would get wise. Most of it comes in right over the wall at night. How many people know that the walls of all penitentiaries are left unguarded at night? Well, that's a fact."

POLICEMEN DID NOT GET WAGES

Judgment on Appeal Reserved in Toronto Yesterday, and Men Here Are Still Without Salaries After a Month.

Chief Justice Sir William Mulock yesterday stated the determination of the Court of Appeal to reserve judgment in the case of the appeal of the city against the judgment of His Honor Judge Ward in favor of Chief Constable Newhall. His Lordship remarked that the matter is one of province wide interest and would be given the careful consideration it warranted.

There have been no new developments locally in regard to the police salaries, which remained unpaid this afternoon. It was decided on Saturday forenoon in an emergent meeting of the Manufacturers' Association that if the City Council did not, on its recommendation, pay the arrears of salaries on Monday, the Association would take steps to assure payment to-day.

A special meeting of the City Council has been called for to-night to discuss the situation, and it is reported that the Manufacturers' Association may withold action pending the outcome. The Examiner is assured, however, that the salaries will be forthcoming immediately the City Council announces its final decision not to pay the police constables, if that is its decision.

Meanwhile the police force remain on duty, awaiting developments.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir.—I would like to see a good list of nominations for Aldermen on nomination day and I hope that when nominated that Messrs. H. Gainey and J. J. Hartley will consent to run. They are two of a number of level headed men I would like to see in the Council.

Yours truly,
Business Man.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir.—Kindly insert the following: the answer to Mr Mulligan's letter concerning qualifications of City Council candidates, as it seems to me for one, to be a very non-sensical way of doing it and not exactly to the point and worse than that it is not a creditable way for any man to express his views on any question.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y. Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press). — Stocks were unsettled in the early dealings on the Stock Exchange by the preparations to give the soldier bonus bill the right of way in the house, however the thought that the final disposition of this question had to be made before the mellon tax program could be considered served as sustaining influence, another encouraging factor was the statement by the treasury head that recent developments had given support to his annual report in which he declared "the factors which have been most influential in the revival that has taken place are likely to remain effective at least in considerable degree." Prices among the active issues showed a steady tone early with good demand and plentiful offers for the leaders of the recent advance. Further selling in the house of the first hour furnished an excellent test of the markets technical condition which test was passed in impressive style. Traders trying to bring a reaction on the basis of the Congressional uncertainty found stubborn support under most stocks which prevented even a normal setback from the recent advance, Baldwin gave ground more easily than the other industrial leaders but the professional pressure exerted against this stock had special help in the unfavorable showing of the companies current bookings. The oils were hardly distributed by the irregularity of the general list, operations for the rise continuing in several issues of this class. The standard oils made the best showing interest connected with these companies have been heavy buyers of their own stocks, professional selling continued in the late morning and irregularity characterized the fluctuations in the general list, but the undertone was confident and offerings were absorbed in orderly fashion, in addition to the oils, several other groups displayed strength, stocks benefiting from the splendid character of the holiday trade were in particular demand. In certain great shopping districts of New York City, police reserves have had to be called out to handle the great crowds of shoppers.

COMPROMISE APPEAL C. G. E. ASSESSMENT

Increase in Buildings Assessment Over Last Year of $84,000 and Decrease From This Year's Figures of $99,000.

The appeal of the Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. from the city assessment which was to have been heard this morning was settled by a compromise between the parties. The assessment on the main buildings is fixed at $708,000; on the porcelain plant, $26,500 and the land assessment remains unchanged.

The award last year set the value at $650,000, which was increased in assessment this year to $833,000. The total assessment for buildings following the compromise is $734,000 or $99,000 decrease, from this year's figures, and an increase over last year's total of -84,000.

OFFICERS ELECTED WELL BABY CLINIC

Mrs. W. Galbraith Appointed President—Clothing of Children Shows Improvement.

The anual meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies Clinic, was held at the home of Mrs. James Kendry, with a good attendance of members. Reports were given by the Supervisor, secretary, nurse and treasurer. The total number of babies in attendance at the Clinic during the year was 1078, and the nurse responded to 810 calls, of which 353 were telephone calls.

Prizes given by Mr. R. M. Glover manager of the Peterboro Examiner, in connection with the baby contest at the fall fair, stimulated attendance at the clinic. From July 24th to August 21st, 297 babies were registered.

At the suggestion of Mrs. James Kendry and members of the Board, the following resolution was passed, on motion of Mrs. A. Stevenson, and seconded by Mrs. F. C. Neal:

"That this Board acknowledges with much gratitude Mr. R. M. Glover's generous support of the work of the Peterboro Well Babies' Clinic. Mr. Glover not only contributed in the neighborhood of $200 in prizes to be presented in the contest at the Fall Fair, but also helped materially with the excellent arrangements of the tent and furnishings at the grounds, which assured the success of the enterprise."

New Officers.

Officers for 1924 were elected as follows: Hon. pres., Mrs. Jas. Kendry; President, Mrs. W. Galbraith; 1st Vice-Pres., Mrs. A. Mowat; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. R. Harstone. Secretary, Mrs. A. W. Turner; Treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal.

Much regret was expressed at the resignation of the former President, Mrs James Kendry, under whose leadership the Well Babies' Clinic has been so successful.

The Thursday Club has helped in the work by providing six complete layettes during the year, the Home and School Associations have reported several cases that have come under their notice, which have been investigated; the Medical Health Association has supplied milk to needy cases, and the King's Daughters have also reported several cases, and provided many needed comforts.

A noticeable improvement was reported in the appearance of the children's clothing at the Clinic sessions, there being an evident desire on the part of the mothers to keep their children as comfortably clothed as possible, reflecting credit on the mothers and the Clinic alike.

Treasurer's Report.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand at present of $226.78. Last year's balance carried forward was $123.31, and receipts included the following: Major Bennet Chapter I. O.D.E., $50; 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E., $25; Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. $100; Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, the Red Cross Society, $100; proceeds of concert given by the Female Voice Choir, $20.28; Graduate Nurses' Association, $15; from Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. Hazlett, the Misses M. and F. Dickson, $40; grant from city, $700; bank interest, $4.74; total $1200.33.

Disbursements: Salaries, $850. stationery, stamps, etc., $10; expenses in connection with weekly clinics, $113.55; total $973.55.

At the conclusion of the business session, dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

THE MUSICIAN'S ASSETS

The musician's assets are represented by the knowledge and experience he has stored up, the plant he has established (his studio, library, musical instruments, furniture), but most of all his experience and his reputation. Therefore the music worker should regard his every day as an opportunity to store up more and more better reputation through the excellence and outstanding character of his works. The value of his services depends very largely upon his reputation for producing meritorious work.

Reputations are usually accumulated very gradually through hard and serious effort. Sometimes a brilliant talent flashes itself into flame in a few hours. Such things are exceedingly rare. With reputation comes reserve and power, confidence, public respect. Careful musicians consider publicity seriously. reputation comes reserve and power. musicians consider publicity seriously. Newspaper "puffs' are of no value unless there is a constantly growing public appreciation of the real artistic efforts of the musician.

MIRACLES.

Within a wide and shallow bowl
Of gayly painted clay,
A miracle of miracles
Was wrought for me today;

A dozen bulbs, which ,three weeks past
Were fibrous, bare and brown,
Have slowly clothed their funny selves
Each in a leafy gown;

And then, midst pale green sheaths disclosed
For eager eyes to see,
A sealed-up treasure-house of buds
By magic grown, for me!

At last, these silky pods have burst—
The buds are now in bloom,
Whose fragrance feeds my hungry soul
And floods my little room.

The age of miracles has passed,
Not to return, you say?
Not so! My Chinese lily bulbs
Have flowered out today!

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

(By REV. DYSON HAGUE)

There's only one way to show that we have the Christmas Spirit and that is by giving. It's the real joy of Christmas. It's the only true happiness of the Grand Old Season And one of the happiest ways to give is to give not to those who have everything they want, but to those who have little or nothing. Perhaps you read of that freak dinner given in London not long ago where the dinner for each guest cost over $500 Think of it! $500 to stuff people who had everything they needed when not far away there were thousands and thousands and thousands who would have been well fed at 25c a head.

Now, one of the wonderful things about Christmas is that we are all thinking how we can help somebody else. The children's joy —God bless their little hearts—is the present, so carefully hidden, and the gladness of their Christmas surprise. And the brightness that shines in a myriad faces is the light of that unselfish pleasure that always comes to those who are making others happy. Especially at this time we should try to carry out that surprising order of Christ who said: When thou makest a feast, call the poor. One of the favorite stories of that great English philanthropist, Sir John Kirk, was that of a little fellow who had been induced to attend the Mission Sunday School and had come into a very bright and Christian faith. Some one, surely thoughtless, tried to shake the little fellow's trust in the Almighty with the question: "If God loves you, why doesn't He take better care of you? Why doesn't he tell some one to send you warm shoes, some coal and better food " The little fellow thought for a moment and then, as the big tears started in his eyes, he said: "I guess He did tell somebody, and somebody forgets."

Remember this to-day and give. At Christmas time, when everybody is thinking of giving, and the spirit of love and peace that spread from the Manger Babe across centuries of this hungry, weary world, is once more gladdening amyriad or hearts let us pass on to those who have so little a gift that will make many happy hearts. Christmas is really children's day. It's mother's day. But it's also above all, the day of happiness and of hope for the poor. Clear your heart of grudges by all means, clasp hands all round once more, but don't forget that beyond the happy circle of your home and friends, there is a great circle of weary faces and wan, of those who have found in the daily battle of life, the discouragements and disappointments of a poverty that you perhaps know nothing of. Think of them. Give to them. Help them. Awake like Scrooge in the Christmas Carol from the miserly dream of a selfish life and, as you begin to live and think of others, give freely for the sake of Him who at this time became a little child to save us all.

HAS HIGH SINGLE FOR LADIES' PRIZE.

Miss M. Houlihan is leading the ladies for the turkey prize being given for the lady having the highest single game at the Water Street Alleys. Her score for the game is 150.

A FEW COMMENTS HEARD AT THE ALLEYS.

A lot of the bowlers are warming up for the turkey being given for the high three games at the Water Street Alleys and here are a few of the remarks heard by different bowlers.

Dick Lush says: "I guess I'll get that turkey this time, and as I just live around the corner I won't have to pay cartage to take it home."

Horace Ballard claimed he couldn't see anything but that turkey on his table this Christmas.

Harry Dugan was heard singing at the alley last night one of his latest songs, "That Turkey Loves Me."

Al. Parker said that after winning the turkey last year, he don't see why he can't repeat it again this year.

Joe Marsden said he could see himself walking home with that turkey now.

Alex Millers claims that if his hook ball is working good that turkey am his.

FATTENING THEM UP.

Jake Solomon, proprietor of the Water Street Alleys, was noticed this morning walking down Hunter Street, in the direction of the Quaker Oats yards, with a couple of live turkeys attached to a string.

BIGGER RINK FOR HASTINGS HOCKEY

Local Fans Are Set for Real Game--Look Forward to District Honors

HASTINGS, Dec. 18. The local fans are going to be treated to real hockey this winter as the manager of the rink is busy getting everything in shape

Last season the rink was not of regulation size and he has leased more property and intends to move the fences and have larger ice space and also more room for the spectators.

The town has some new blood to try out for places of the team and it looks as if Hastings has a good chance of winning the district honors.

"Old Bones," the grand old horse of the American turf, who has been running since the Atlantic was a pond, is out on the coast for the winter season.

"Old Bones" wants to win enough money this season to pass the record recently set by Zev, the three-year-old champion.

Zev has $293,173.34 and plate to his credit.

"Old Bones" is mighty close to this mark now, and if he pulls down one big purse on the coast, he will go ahead of Zev.

THE TEAM REMEMBERS!

Albert Schoensleben—around Redland Field in Cincinnati they know him as "Al, the milk man"—was a loyal rooter for Pat Morans Reds. He never missed a game. And always he occupied the same seat in the bleachers. No matter how crowded the sections were, the crowds always held Al's place for him. Al died recently. And the Reds erected this monument to his memory.

OULETTE AND WILLIAMS REMAIN IN BELLEVILLE

Positive Statement Denies Rumors That the Indian Was Going to Join the Leafs.

The Belleville "Ontario" says:

With the 1924 baseball season still many months away and a promising hockey schedule to be completed in the meantime, baseball affairs in Belleville are not being lost sight of; far from it. A strong team will be placed in the field, it can confidently be stated. Nothing will be left undone, the Ontario has been given to understand, to have a team here with the necessary punch left under its belt at play-off time to bring home the bacon, in other words the Ontario championship. The boys here are going to make next year "Belleville's year."

It is not likely that Walter Gerow will be manager. Walter has given a lot of time and energy and skill to the game of baseball here. He was on one Ontario championship team and has managed a runner-up, and last year's good team. He is understood to have declared that "some body" else can now have a chance at the glory—and the uncalled-for abuse—co-incident to the managership of a team like the Grand Trunks.

Casting about for his successor the club and its members were said today to have practically settled on Eddie Thomas as next year's manager. At least the players favored Mr. Thomas for the important and responsible post.

Members of the team also said positively that Johnny Williams and Jack Oulette would be here next year Mr. Williams, senior, also told the Ontario that his son would be here. Johny has been sick but will be seen back in town shortly, his father said.

Other changes were rumoured but could not be substantiated.

It all means, however, that 1924 will be a good baseball year for Belleville.

Billy Evans Says

"Eddie Collins makes more hits with two strikes on him than any batter I have ever seen during my long career in baseball," Kid Gleason, former manage or the Chicago White Sox, made that remark to me one day last summer while we were discussing the great second sacker. "He is one of the greatest batsmen in the history of the game despite the fact that his work around the plate hasn't been featured nearly as much as Cobb, Speaker, Ruth, Hornsby and the rest of the stars. Collins works the pitcher to the limit. I dont' believe I am far wrong when I say that Collins makes 75 per cent of his hits after he has two strikes."

Recently in looking over the American League batting averages the remarkable feature of Gleason's statement was made apparent to me. Collins struck out only eight times in 145 games.

Collins seldom hits at a bad ball. American League umpires will tell you that his judgment is uncanny. In a pinch he will take a ball that is only a few inches inside or outside, a ball that most batters would consider good enough to take a swing at. Incidentally he often takes a strike in a pinch, knowing that it isn't the type of ball that he hits best, much preferring to take a chance that he will get an offering more to his liking.

Two strikes don't seem to bother Collins in the least. Most batters prefer taking the healthy cut before getting two down, as they figure the pitcher has a decided edge with the batter in the hole.

Unquestionably Collins works the count to three balls and two strikes far more often than any other player in either major league. It is a tough spot for the pitcher and equally tough for the batter. The logic of Collins, however, is that you only need one ball to hit. Collins, by the way, has a peculiar habit. He chews gum on the field. When he comes to the bat he sticks the wad of gum on the button on the top of his cap. It remains there until he gets two strikes on him. Then it is removed and placed back in his mouth, meaning Collins is all set to go.

The fact that Collins struck out only eight times, despite his penchant for waiting out the pitcher to the limit, is a remarkable tribute to his batting ability.

Two Ottawa Players May Join Olympics.

OTTAWA, Dec. 17—The French paper Le Droit, in its sports column this afternoon said "Hewitt and Mulqueen, directors of the Canadian Olympic hockey team were so favorably impressed with the play of Edwin Gorman and Hibs Milks Ottawa All-Stars team last Saturday that they have unofficially stated that they would invite these two players to accompany the team to France to take part in the Olympic games."

WHO WOULD GET ROYAL OFFICES IN HOUSEHOLD?

Bernard Shaw Would Be Ideal Lord Chamberlain Appointed By Ramsay MacDonald.

PUBLIC INTRIGUED.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press Cable).—If Ramsay MacDonald as leader of a Labor Government becomes premier what will he do concerning those appointments to His Majesty's household which fall within the duty of the head of the government to make, is a question which the public is asking. There are eight such offices ;Lord Chamberlain, Lord Steward of the Household, Treasurer of the Household, Comptroller of the Household, Vice Chamberlain of the Household, Captain of Gentlemen-at- Arms, Captain of Yeomen of the Guard and Master of the Horse. In addition there are six Lords in Waiting.

These appointments are of very ancient origin and spring from the old-time fear that the Sovereign might be surrounded by private advisers opposed to the ministerial policy Such offices in the present era are usually held either by amiable members of the party in power who are more or less non-entities or by aspirants for responsible office who must wait a chance for preferment. The Lords in Waiting take turns attending the King personally. The present holders of office range in age from eighty to fifty years or thereabouts.

License Stage Plays

The curious British constitution provides that the Lord Chamberlain should have the licensing of stage plays under his control. It is a liberal fact that the would-be producer of a new play takes his manuscript to St. James Palace and there deposits it, with the customary fee, for examination by the Lord Chamberlain. The vagaries of the department in ajudicating on plays in notorious.

It is suggested that MacDonald has an ideal Lord Chamberlain to hand in Bernard Shaw. Certainly no body else in the Labor party knows more about stage craft and Shaw himself has suffered as much as any playwright at the hands of previous Lord Chamberlains.

Master of the Horse

MacDonald may well feel perplexed in finding a Master of the Horse especially when the King like everybody else mostly uses motor cars nowadays.

It is quite possible of course that the younger members of the nobility, when a labor government is an accomplished fact, will find themselves of a sufficiently democratic turn to ally themselves with MacDonad's party for some of the more elderly lords areannouncing themselves as ready to give the labor government general support. Lord Haldine. Earl Kimberley, Earl Russell and Earl De La Warr are already avowed Labor party men. Lord Acton and Lord Parmoor are the latest to signify their general assent to labor principles. The Bishop of Manchester, a son of the late Archbishop Temple is another recruit and he will probably be joined by other democratically minded of the spiritual peers.

To Have Peers

Ramsay MacDonald is credited with the intention of raising to the peerage W. S. Royce, member for Holland, Lincolnshire, an expert in agricultural matters, Noel Buxton, member for North Norfolk, C. P. Trevelyan, Newcastle and Arthur Ponsonby, Sheffield.

For his law officers MacDonald has at least three abi, Kings Counsel to draw upon not counting Lord Haldane.

Altogether the possible strength of labor in the house of Lords is already by no means insignificant. Whether the party can produce a cabinet capable of doing steady team work is a matter upon which some of their most friendly critics are most apprehensive.

English Football Association Decline Request of Dominion Association For Next Summer Tour.

LONDON, December 18. Canadian Press. — At a meeting of the International Selection Committee of the English Football Association yesterday afternoon the committee expressed regret that they could not accede to the request of the Dominion Football Association of Canada to send a representative English team to tour Canada next summer. They said, however, that they would give sympathetic consideration to such a project on a future ocasion.

FARMERS' TAXES AMOUNT TO RENT

Income Shrinks While Expenses Remain High—Several Cavan Examples of Township Levies.

CAVAN, Dec. 17.—The Toronto Bank, Millbrook, presented a busy appearance on Saturday afternoon. The Council was in session and the Secretary-treasurers were receiving and cashing checks to pay the rural teachers. Also it was the last day on which Cavan taxes could be paid in at par. There were many Cavan farmers paying taxes, all agreeing That the taxes are excessively high, as is everything else which the farmer has to pay for. One farmer on one hundred and fifty acres was paying one hundred and sixty-nine dollars, another on one hundred acres paying one hundred and ten and all others in proportion. Some were calling it rent instead of taxes.

Foxes Plentiful

Foxes are fairly plentiful through Cavan this season but hunters are more plentiful, the open winter allowing hunters to come out from Peterboro in cars. Sometimes as happened one day last wek there are two or three claimants for one fox.

Two Cavan hunters with their hounds had a fox on the run. In their tramping over hills and through woods trying to get on the trail of a fox, they had previously met, a hunter from town who also, was endeavouring to get a start. He already had a small fox. As the two Cavan hunters were returning home, one of the hounds, saw a fox. The dog which was held by a leash gave a bound and his owner saw the fox eighty yards distant. He shot and staggered it, then released the dog. While he cocked the other hammer, the fox gained another twenty yards His next shot apparently missed it. His hound ran the fox down in two hundred yards and when he, himself arrived there, he found the stranger standing over the carcass of the fox, with the skin already in his pocket, declaring that the fox was his, as it was his dog that killed it but the hunter who shot it was confident, judging by the baying of the hounds that the stranger's dog had not arrived on the scene until fully a minute after his own.

BASEBALL

AMATEURS COST MONEY

Major and minor leagues are bewailing the high cost of amateurs.

"If you think it is tough trying to talk trade to another owner, just go out and talk signing a contract to a college ball player," remarked an owner in Chicago this week.

The collegians have reached the conclusion that they are bang-up base ball material. They have also concluded that they are worthy of a big price. So, trying to get a collegian to sign a contract carries the owner into high finance.

In a way the owners themselves are to blame. Stories of $125,000 paid for Willie Kamm by the Chicago Americans, $100,000 paid for Jimmy D'Connell by the New York Nationals, $75,000 paid for Sam Halo by the Philadelphia Americans, are in a large measure responsible for the attitude taken by the college players. If, for instance, a minor leaguer like Sam Hale is worth $75,000, then a good college player is surely worth $25,000, and that is the sum several are asking for their signatures to contracts.

The major league clubs should not criticize the college player too harshly for, after all they created the situation.

MOTOR OWNERS TO HAVE COPY OP LAW

Synopsis of New Motor Vehicles Act Will Be Distributed With 1924 License Plates.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press). — Concise synopsis of new Motor Vehicles Act which becomes law in province on January 1, 1924, is to be prepared under the direction of the Department of Public Highways and distributed among the motorists of the province with the 1924 license plates. WHAT P.A.A.A. HAS DONE FOR SPORT

Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—Your editorial re Riverside Park unfortunately misses the point of the criticism expressed at the Veterans' meeting of the policy followed this year as compared to last year by the City Council. May I make plainer our point of view?

You agree that the more our youth can be got to play in the open, rather than sit and watch others play, the better it will be for the welfare of the population. We admit with you, Mr. Editor, and with Ald. Phelan, that if Riverside Park were given free use of to all sports, that ideal would not be brought nearer, for the limitation of space and time would not allow of more than a very small portion of the youth of the city to use it for their games. We are prepared to go further and say that some one playing ground will naturally be the home of such sports as are most prominent and will take the greatest gates. We see that this will give a profit for these sports, and from that point we differ. We claim that if those grounds, by their use for sport, return a profit, that such profit should be available to encourage other sports which are adapted to improve the physical welfare of the youth of the city, and which many like to play as well as baseball, but which from their nature can never be spectacular to draw a paying gate. If these sports are to be made available there must be money sunk in them, and it must come from the paying sports or from private generosity as, for instance, in the case of the Examiner road races. Field sports cannot be made to pay here, nor can lawn tennis, etc., until the city grows much bigger, yet they are excellent physical developers and much enjoyed by many young people.

Now in 1922, when the park was leased to the P. A. A. A., we found several useful sport activities started, and a more general interest in many different lines of sport, notably the Girls' Softball League. It was intended to continue these and start new sporting activities especially among the littler fellows in 1923, but the programme had to be curtailed as the City Fathers handed over Riverside Park to baseball generally, it would seem, but to Solomon, Phelan, Craig and Co. in particular. The only branching out in sport this summer, and the only sport encouraged among the little fellows, was baseball.

We have no quarrel with baseball. It is a good game, albeit, hard to Canadianize. Many of our members play it, and many more of their sons do so, and more will continue to do so as time goes on. It has been well served by citizens like Alex, Kay, Charlie Curtis, etc., etc., to whom honest sport and the amateur ideal is sacred, but that ideal is difficult to successfully uphold when the younger players are looking forward to a time when they will be good enough to make the Central Ontario team and may even be good enough to be quietly paid for their services. We do not say whether their opinions on this point are justified by facts, but I do know that throughout the Central Ontario circuit those opinions are held by the younger players. We have nothing against the professional player; he is honest. But that the youth of the land should regard the leading amateurs, whose development he so much admires, as pros. in disguise—dishonest heroes—we greatly deplore. Physical development is dearly purchased at the price of moral delinquency, and we think the Council was ill-advised to even appear to aid and abet such tendencies.

Alderman Phelan spoke of the advertising a city gets by its champion teams, and we think that Peterboro was well advertised by its home brew champion teams this summer, and we are glad to rejoice with these teams and to praise their honest effort. But suppose the Central League team had won out in Ontario. I was talking to a man high up in manufacturing, and he made the remark that one of the best assets our city had was the fact that our population was largely Anglo-Saxon or Western European in origin, and had been mostly well Canadianized where it wasn't Canadian by birth. Now had this summer's Central League team been champions, and had their pictures, their names and records spread all down through the United States and Canada, would the manufacturer looking for a place for a new factory have received this impression? So much for Ald. Phelan's advertising.

The good name of Peterboro is precious to its Veterans, and we would rather that it be known that the City Fathers took all possible care that its youth developed sound minds in sound bodies, that a one-sport town ultimately tends to become a one-horse town is, we think, true.

We do not ask that people be forced to patronize any sport they do not like, much less do we ask that they be deprived of their weekly senior baseball game. Were they deprived of that joy when last year the Park was leased to the P.A.A.A.? But we do object that the youth who does not wish to play baseball, and who does wish to play some other sport shall have no encouragement in that wish, and by reason of his limited means be compelled to play baseball or nothing, since that is the only sport encouraged.

We object to the sort of chicanery by which the Exhibition Board was led in good faith to make a large expenditure in fitting up its grounds so as to provide a big stick to hold over the City Council, that Riverside should be handed over to baseball, and the small profit realized by the P.A.A.A. the previous year and used to provide and encourage less paying athletics, should be diverted to Solomon and Co., who have steadily refused to show their balance sheets. It was a very slick piece of work and showed that Manager Solomon has many other qualifications besides a thorough knowledge of inside baseball—to be sure Ald. Phelan was in the Council to help.

We do not complain that other sports were not fairly used with regard to use of the Park for their games. That is rather an intricate subject; also it is a small one. One park cannot possibly serve the end of encouraging every boy or girl to healthy outdoor sport. We want the fans to enjoy baseball to the full, being persuaded that these same fans are quite willing that some of the profits from what they pay in at the gate of Riverside Park should be used in fitting out other playing fields for the youngsters to play whatever game they like best and to instruct them how best to play it and so get the utmost physical benefit. At the same time may we hope that they will see and agree with our point that physical efficiency is dearly purchased if at the expense of honesty and sound morals.

SCHOOL SOCIAL AT JANETVILLE

Children Acquitted Themselves Well—Rev. Mr. Ross As Chairman Praised Teacher.

JANETVILLE, Dec. 18.—The concert held in connection with the public school of Janetville South last Thursday evening was a marked success from every point of view.

In opening the concert the chairman, Rev. Mr. Ross, remarked that great credit was due to our staff of school teachers all over the country for the deep interest which they are taking in the moral, social and intellectual welfare of the pupils.

"We must remember that we are not paying our teachers for the extra intellectual training, which our scholars receive in preparing for all these Christmas entertainments. And it means a very great amount of extra work for these splendid custodians of the youthful talents entrusted to their care. We have eight teachers on our circuit to whom we are grateful, and of whom we are very proud."

The following is the program rendered by the scholars trained by Miss Richardson:

Social Service

Rev. G. I. Campbell of the Social Service Department of the Methodist Church arrived in Janetville on Saturday evening, and give the Y.P.S. one of the best entertainments of its kind, in the form of an illustrated lecture, aided by lantern slides.

On Sabbath Mr. Campbell preached morning and evening at Janetville, and at Mount Horeb in the afternoon. The offering for Social Service work will amount to nearly $80.00.

YOUNG FARMERS DEBATE LIQUOR

Advocates of Government Control Win Decision Over Prohibition Defenders.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 18.—The first open social evening and debate held by the South Monaghan Y.P.F.O. was held in the U.F.O. hall on Friday evening.

There was a splendid crowd present, and everyone enjoyed a good programme given by the young folks.

Possibly the most interesting item on the programme was a debate: Resolved "That Government Control of Liquor is better than Prohibition." The affirmative was ably taken by Edwin Hutchison and Charlotte Barnard, while the negative was upheld by Geo. Morrison and Connie McConnachie. Strong points were brought out on both sides, and the subject was thoroughly debated.

The judges who were Harry Campbell, Ronald Deyell and Ernest Anderson, gave their decision in favor of the affirmative.

After the debate the remainder of the evening was spent in group singing and playing games, etc.

It is hoped that many of such social evenings will be held during the winter months and these debates are putting the young people in practice to meet the Indian River club in Peterboro January 8th, when they will debate against that club on their first engagement in the debating league.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

"It's daylight, folks, awake!"

The next riddle that the Riddle Lady asked in Riddle Land was this. See if you can guess it as quickly as Nick did.

"There is a chap I know well,
Who travels through the skies.
He sails along from light to dark,
And he is wondrous wise.

"He is so wise he's lost his hair
From thinking this and that.
As he rolls 'round up in the air;
And he is bald and fat.

"Bald and fat he is, sir.
Yes, he is fat and bald.
Another Humpty Dumpty,
I've often heard him called.

"When he gets up he calls down,
'It's daylight, folk, awake!
The day's begun, roll out of bed,
Get dressed, for goodness sake!

"'And feed your pigs and chickens,
And milk your brindle cow.
And give your horse a bag of oats,
Ere he goes out to plow.

"'And all you birdies wake, too,
And ope your sleepy eyes.
And all the bugs and beetles,
And flowers and butterflies.

"'And all the squirrels and rabbits,
And fishes in the pool,
And all the little girls and boys
Who have to go to school.'

"He peeps in all the windows,
He hates a sleepy-head!
And if perchance he finds one,
He turns a fiery red.

"But mostly his complexion,
Is golden, shining yellow,
Now if you've no objection,
Please name this jolly fellow."

"Who is it?" asked the Riddle Lady.

"The sun!" cried Nick.

"I was just going to say that," said Slow, "but I thought I'd wait awhile."

"Dear, dear, dear!" said the Riddle Lady. "It's just fellows like you and your brother, Sleepy Head, that make Mister Sun cross. Why do you always wait awhile?"

"I don't know," answered Slow. "I guess it's just habit."

"That's just what it is," declared the Riddle Lady. "And if Nick doesn't care, I'm going to give you the prize, for he doesn't need it. It's an alarm clock.

ROYAL CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Christmas-tide shopping has attained such proportions and there is so much ceremony and custom wrapped up in the scrupulous giving of presents to relatives and even distant connections that it is of special interest to know that this is one of the strongest customs of the Royal Family and is due practically the initiative of the late Prince Consort who was deeply imbued with the spirit of the Festive season.

Indeed the husband of the late Queen Victoria introduced a new note into the Court Christmas which in the early life of Her Majesty was more marked by sumptuous repast and post-prandial libation than by anything else. A plain speaking chronicler tells us that the last Christmas spent on earth by King William IV. was celebrated in "much feeding and guzzling."

With the observance of the family Christmas by the royal father and mother however and their unfailing remembrance of their children and friends, Christmas shopping became an important part of the royal ceremonies.

Queen Victoria insisted on personally supervising the smallest detail and took a keen interest in the whole proceeding, so much so, that the royal entourage regarded the ordeal with some feelings of anxiety especially as the good Queen advanced in years, for a moment's consideration will enable anyone to realise what an enormous undertaking such a shopping expedition became.

Her Majesty personally made up the long list those who were to be honored with the royal favor and then at great pains selected the actual gifts with the orders for which the tradesmen of Windsor were always favored.

Wonderful changes have taken place in this particular since King George came to the throne and while the appropriatiness is retained much of the labor is got rid of by the methods of His Majesty which are prompted by economy and efficiency.

For instance, it had been the custom in court circles for years to allocate a sum of money for gifts to other European monarchs, which were called "courtesy gifts" and also to some of the reigning Princes of small Germanic states which had blood ties with the British Royal family. Some of these were in due time swept away by the Great War but even prior to 1914 King George had substituted a personal letter for these costly reminders at the same time diverting the money so saved to a fund specially set up by His Majesty—his own personal gift Fund for the Poor-out of which the poor of Windsor and the East End of London receive every year a substantial gift of meat and coal.

Our King's personal gifts are limited strictly to the immediate Royal Family and are carefully selected from the stores by the Monarch himself. His procedure is much the same as that of most any individual. He goes to the shopping district accompanied by one of his equerries and visits certain stores favored with his custom. Notice of his intended visit is usually telephoned to the establishment beforehand and a varied selection of gifts will be ready on his arrival.

These are carefully gone through and it is well-known that the King gets value for his money, for he is eminently a business man with a wonderful fund of common sense. The gifts are paid for in cash always.

On arrival at Buckingham Palace the presents are packed and His Majesty himself writes a personal note to the recipient. Mostly he favors the useful gift. Thus his grown-up sons will receive something useful in the smoking line and the gifts are by no means costly. The giving of expensive presents is not now in favor. An exception however is made in the case of his gift to the Queen. This always takes the form of some beautiful jewel to add to her majesty's collection of gems which is already large and wonderful.

The gifts for the royal servants, many of whom have been in the service of the Royal family for many years, are usually simple useful objects which are personally chosen by the King as also are presents intended for the little band of old retainers at Balmoral and Sandringham who are never forgotten by the King.

Unlike the King, the Queen makes her Christmas shopping a labor of love. Her Majesty just drops into any store informally and casually, no notive having been given of her intended visit. Latterly Princess Mary has accompanied the Queen on these pleasant shopping expeditions and is known as a specially keen buyer. The Queen is very particular that all of her gifts shall be entirely of British manufacture and makes pointed inquiry on this when buying.

The Prince of Wales and his brothers are quite unconventional in their Christmas shopping. They go out and purchase just whatever gifts strike their fancy. A custom of the heir to the throne is to buy little gifts upon which he will have his crest placed while in buying something suitable for those sperial personal friends numbered among his close acquaintances. The Prince will devote a deal of time and trouble and will visit several shops in search of what he requires. The Duke of York is not so fastidious. The King's second son, it is not generally known, has a little workshop of his own in which he makes many useful little objects some of which are given as presents and needless to say are much appreciated.

Princess Mary's Christmas shopping into hitherto been done under the guidance of the Queen. Now, of course, she can exercise her own choice and has full scope for her flair of selecting articles that will please the recipient, a most difficult knack not possessed by many people.

The Dowager Queen Alexandra has a selection of possible gifts sent down to Sandringham from which she chooses the presents for her beloved grandchildren and personal friends. Her gift to her royal son and daughter-in-law is always the same—books.

Christmas time with the royal family is essentially an occasion for family reunion and the gifts reflect the thoughtfulness of the King and his family for those around them.

Of all the host of Christmas shoppers who throng the great emporiums of the Empire at the festive season it is superfluous to say that none is more kindly or considerate than the members of the Royal Family who adhere steadfastly to the happy tradition inaugurated in the reign of Victoria the Good.

ZANA VAUGHN,
With the Rex Stock Co., at the Grand to-night, in the laughable comedy, "Twin Beds."

LAMP SHADES.

Some of the newest shades for bridge lamps are made of Japanese paper which is figured and colorful and is a change from parchment.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

The Rex Stock Company's second offering of the present Peterboro run the hilariously funny comedy, "Twin Beds," was a triumphant laughing success at the Grand last night and Rex and his crew gave a capital performance. Every playgoer knows the plot of "Twin Beds" it was written for fun purposes only and has a wealth of bright lines and a series of complications that would make a wooden Indian laugh. There is one mixup after another until the audience is almost exhausted by its own merriment.

The Rex Company is seen at the best in this attraction for it gives most of the members of the company a chance to shine. Rex is Harry Hawkins and the role of the husband who has got tired of having his home turned into an all night restaurant, fits him thoroughly. Miss Zana Vaughan has a splendid part as Blanche Hawkins one in which she has ample scope to show her ability. Miss Hazel Williams, however scores the biggest hit of the night as the slangy Signora Monti, a part that might have been written for her, so effectively does she play it She was responsible for gales of laughter. W. Yule, too arises to new heights in the very funny part of Signor Monti the roaming tenor whose arrival in the wrong flat causes all the trouble is Bertie Leslie scores in the part of Nora, the maid and Ethel Van Order is equally successful as Amanda. The comedy is attractively staged and the whole presentation is a credit to the Rex organization.

For the first three days of next week with a matinee at 3 o'clock on Christmas Day the Rex company will present "Cheating Cheaters."

AT THE CAPITOL.

ALICE BRADY AT CAPITOL WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

Alice Brady will be seen in her latest production, "The Leopardess" at the Capitol tomorrow and Thursday. This is a drama of the jungle and of society and tells a thrilling story of a girl lost in the wilds and forced to live with savages and her rescue. Many exciting scenes on land and sea are shown.

The producers of the film that chronicles on the silver screen the story of "Java Head," have departed only in minor details from the tale that Joseph Hergesheimer wove about the fortunes of the sea captain of Salem and the Chinese princess whom he brought to his staid old home as his bride. The minute word pictures in which Hergesheimers work abounds are necessarily lacking in the filmed version, but the atmosphere of the old fishing town of Salem, in the day when women wore voluminous skirts and fringed shawls and coal-scuttle bonnets, has been reproduced with faithful care. There are the old houses and the old-fashioned people, quiet and composed, driving about in open barouches, with prancing horses and careful old drivers, entertaining their friends in the old-fashioned way. The Manchu princess, remote, and exotic, moves among them with her carefully-painted lips, her flat, glistenjng hair, her little dainty feet. In her room, she smokes her long opium pipe and she makes proper Oriental obeisance at the feet of her sister-in-law when she arrives from China.

Leatrice Joy plays in excellent fashion the part of the Chinese wife. Taou Yuen, and Jacqueline Logan is Nettie Vollar, the dark-haired girl of Salem whom the hero, Gerrit Ammidon, loved before he sailed away and met his Chinese princess. Nettie's characterization is played with softer effect than in the book, and, unlike the written volume the pictured story tends to keep sympathy for the Chinese wife in the foreground. Her part is an appealing one, and when she finally realizes that her husband loves the white girl, and takes the drug that kills her, the interest of the audience wheels away from the triumphant lovers to rest with the dainty huddled figure in its bright silks.

Raymond Hatton has the role of the dope fiend, Edward Dunsack, back from the Orient, impregnated with its vices and disease, his sick mind reaching out to the proud Chinese lady.

It is an odd and interesting picture, away from the beaten path, picturing the tangle of curious life in another forgotten period.

The comedy is a Ben Turpin mixup, with the cross-eyed hero getting into difficulties galore.

AT THE ROYAL.

Gene Stratton-Porter's novel Michael O'Halloran' scores a hit. Clean, cleverly produced comedy drama with inspiring theme.

The Gene Stratton-Porter production "Michael O'Halloran," offered at the Royal Theatre, is a screen version of Mrs. Porter's novel of the name.

It might well be said that "Michael OHalloran' is one of the foremost human interest picturizations of the year.

True Boardman, who has the role of "Mickey," the fascinating little newsie, is the new boy star of the picture, his clever interpretation of this important and unusual character although as we understand it is his first starring vehicle, has done much to bring him fame within his grasp.

J. Leo. Meehans direction of the picture is superb and, for even those who have read the book there is a different visualization that only the camera can find.

It is the story of a little newsboy who adopts a crippled girl, cares for her tenderly and is instrumental in ridding her of her sad affliction. Woven into this as a heavier theme of a society couple. The wife, a social butterfly, ignoring her children the; father's time taken up with business cares and the tragedy which finally leads to a reconciliation

A very capable cast was presented in support of Boardman, Ethelyn Irving, his seven-year-old leading lady, who plays the part of the crippled girl, has clearly brought out the character of "Peaches." The balance of the cast inclures such well-known players as Irene Rich, Charles Clary, Claire McDowell and William Boyd.

The comedy "East Bonnets' is great. It reminds the reviewer of the Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew comedies. A real story and genuine hearty laughs. A half-hour western feature and Canadian Moose hunting scenic completes a well-balanced and pleasing program.

AT THE REGENT.

QUILTING PARTIES ARE THING OF PAST.

"Time was," as the illustrated history books would say, "when every American town and village had its quilting parties during the winter months." But times have changed since grandma was a girl, and the only patch quilts seen today are those in antique shops, historical museums or treasured as heirlooms by the descendants of the first families of the land.

An old Salem quilt plays an important part in the story of the latest William Fox production, "Times Have Changed," which stars William Russell. The quilt is given to the niece of the owner as a wedding present. When the family heirloom is loaned by the husband to a friend in New York a series of dramatic incidents develop in which the quilt has an important role. This picture brings out numerous comedy characterizations which should delight all the Russell fans.

The accidents which befall the quilt are as many and multicolored as the patches in the quilt itself. It is stolen, diamonds are hidden in its homely folds, it is found and lost, placed on sale and sold. It is a cork tossed hither and thither whither the ocean of life deems best to cast it.

"Times Have Changed" is by far the best Russell picture to be announced for the Regent Theatre, where it will be shown, starting today. Mabel Julienne Scott plays opposite the star. The picture was directed by James Flood.

TURKEY BUYERS FEW IN COUNTRY

Offer Only 16c a Pound Live Weight—Farmers in a Quandary As Price Drops.

KING'S WHARF, Dec. 18.—The weather is very changeable and one hardly knows whether to expect summer weather or storms. The recent heavy rains, however, were very welcome and there will be no scarcity of water for the winter. The fine weather lasting so long will be a great let-out to the farmers as they won't have so long to feed their stock and every body has more stock, horses and cattle, than they really intended to have, but being unable to sell any they had to winter everything.

The Lucas brothers, Joseph and Burt, are in this vicinity pressing hay and there is a large amount to press this year.

Turkeys Cheap

It seems to be a hard year to get rid of turkeys, the dealers don't seem to want them at any price. There are a number of large flocks around here and the people don't know what to do with them as they are only 16c. alive and only one dealer wants them at that.

School Closed

There are a number of cases of measles and scarlet fever here now and Dr. Earl, of Omemee, made a trip through here last week and ordered the school here, S. S. No. 13, to be closed till after Christmas.

Another new sawing outfit has come into this locality. Mr. A. Collins, of Ops, who has an up-to-date outfit, has secured a large number of jobs.

HUERTAISTS CLAIM SEVERAL VICTORIES

Federals Deny Alleged Success of Rebels and Obregonists Predict a Speedy End to Rebel Force.

MEXICO CITY, December 18 (Special to The Examiner). — Revolutionists have evacuated Puebla, the War Department announces.

Federal forces hae occupied Almaza and Lucas Gonzalez.

Adolfe de la Huerta's press bureau claimed to-day that his rebel troops were completing a circle around Mexico City, says a despatch from Vera Cruz.

The headquarters of General Guadaloupe Sanchez have reported the capture of Cuautla, less than 50 miles south of the capital.

Rebels have occupied Tlaxcala, 60 miles east of Mexico City, they claim.

As for the west, the De la Huertaists say they have taken Iguala, eighty miles from the capital. They also claim the capture of Santa Lucrecia.

Deny Success.
The only semblance of success achieved by the rebels on the east front was when they marched into Puebla, which was voluntarily evacuated by the Federals as part of a pre-arranged plan, according to official advices from Mexico City delayed in transit.

Obregonists are predicting a speedy end to the rebels once a general attack under the personal direction of the President is launched.

STARVATION LOOMS AFTER EARTHQUAKE

BOGOTA, Colombia, December 18 (United Press). — Starvation loomed to-day in the wake of earth convulsions and volcanic eruptions which wiped out three towns on the Ecuadorean border with a loss of several score of lives on Saturday.

The quakes are continuing, but with diminished intensity, and the population of the volcanic region devastated by the shocks are kept in a constant state of terror.

There is no bread to be had, little food of any kind remains, and what is left is threatened since pillaging has started.

To make matters worse, there is not enough food to feed the police who are maintaining order in the stricken area, and these must be withdrawn unless food can be sent from the outside.

The devastated zone lies away from the railroad, and all communication with the shaken villages is by mule back, over tortuous mountain paths.

TIERED FROCKS.
Tiered frocks are frequently shown in shaded chiffons and crepes, with rhinestones or large beads outlining each tier.

BADGER FUR.
Badger fur, being light and fluffy and durable, is shown in combination with soft wools and tweeds in sport coats and suits.

FOREIGN GUNBOATS READY FOR ACTION

HONG KONG, December 18 (Canadian Press). — The flotilla of foreign gunboats in the harbour at Canton, where a tense situation has prevailed since the recent threat of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, South China leader, to seize the Customs funds, apparently is preparing for eventualities.

Some of the warships lying off Shameen, the foreign section of Canton, have been cleared for action, and French sailors from the cruiser Jules Ferry have landed at Shameen and are stationed in the old French Post Office Building.

VIOLIN-VALUE
How do you value your musical instrument; by its market value or by the effect you get out of it? At a concert, three young ladies were awaiting in breathless expectation the appearance of a well-known violinist, and filling in the time with excited conversation as to their own experiences. They were evidently violinists themselves and had learnt to play the principal pieces in the programme, besides playing in professional or amateur orchestras. But some of their ideas were not quite what they should be. "Do you know," said one of them, "I played on a £4,000 Strad the other day! Some friends of mine had this and an Amati as well. The Amati only cost £700, but wasn't it comic, the people themselves preferred to play on the £700 one!" She had not realized that market value is fixed by many things besides intrinsic value and artistic effect.

ASQUITH DECLARES LIBERALS WILL NEITHER HELP CONSERVATIVES NOR HAMPER LABOR IN NEW PARLIAMENT

"Our Party Not a Horde of Mercenaries to Be Moved From Camp to Camp At Word of Command," Said Former Premier —Will Not "Move a Finger to Prolong Disastrous Stewardship of the Government.

SAFE SITUATION TO TEST LABOR.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The Liberal party, through the leaders, H. H. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George, yesterday made its position clear with respect to the Conservative Government, or whatever other Government that takes up the reins of power after the reassembly of Parliament. The Liberal party will form no alliance with other parties and will have nothing to do with any manoeuvre such as has been suggested by Lord Birkenhead for keeping Labor out by maintaining the Conservative Government in power. "No fetters, perfect freedom," were the watchwords Mr. Asquith enunciated at Tuesday's meeting for the guidance of the party.

Balancing Power.

"Some people," Mr. Asquith observed, "seem to think that a great parliamentary party like ours can be treated like a horde of mercenaries, and moved from camp to camp, backwards and forwards, at the word of command. If we understand our business, it is we who really control the situation."

Mr. Asquith went on to declare that the days of the present Government were numbered, and that the Liberals would not move a finger to connive in prolongation of the Government's "disastrous stewardship."

Mr. Lloyd George endorsed the attitude taken by his former chief, saying: "I am in complete agreement with the policy laid down by Mr. Asquith."

Take Natural Course.

These pronouncements by the Liberal leaders mean that affairs are left to take their natural course when Parliament reassembles.

Mr. Asquith prefaced his declarations by some satirical remarks about the Conservatives having publicly branded him as a "back number—an extinct volcano—an effete and discredited dotard."

Remarking that if ever a Labor Government was to be tried in this country it could hardly be tried under safer conditions—meaning that being in a minority of the whole House, a Labor Government could not pass extreme measures—Mr. Asquith proceeded to give an important opinion on a question which has been exercising the minds of the politicians lately—namely, whether a Labor, or other, Government would possess an unchallenged right to dissolve Parliament.

Prerogative of Crown.

He declared: "The power to dissolve Parliament is the prerogative of the Crown, but that does not mean that the Crown ought to act arbitrarily. What it does mean is that the Crown is not obliged to take the advice of the Ministry to put the country through the turmoil of a general election if it could find other Ministers able to form a Government."

Thus, in Mr. Asquith's opinion, Labor, on succeeding to office, would have no right to resort to dissolution in the hope of consolidating their power through a stronger mandate from the country, but that, in the event of the Labor administration suffering a parliamentary defeat, it would be within the province of the Crown to summon the Liberals to power.

Significant Visit.

A significant incident illustrating the change in the position of affairs, with the prospect of the advent of a Labor Government, occurred yesterday, when Sir John Bradbury, of the Reparation Commission, who is in Great Britain on a consultative mission relative to the appointment of British financial experts on the Reparation Commission's committee of inquiry, went to visit and consult with J. Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor leader, at his Scottish home at Lossemouth. Treasury officials, when questioned, affected complete ignorance of this visit, which, however, was fully confirmed last night.

Record of Impotence.

The result of the present Government's appeal to the new House of Commons for an expression of confidence was a foregone conclusion, continued Mr. Asquith. "Their record is an almost unbroken one of impotence and humiliation. At one of the most critical times of all history for the future of Europe they have allowed the whole year to be wasted, and worse than wasted, and they have reduced this country to a cipher in the council chambers of the world."

After declaring that the Liberals would not raise a finger to save the Baldwin Government, Mr. Asquith continued:

"Through the accidents and anomalies of our imperfect electoral methods, Liberalism has a substantially smaller and Labor a substantially larger share of representation in the new House of Commons than either could have obtained under a rational or really democratic system. Although we in that House are innumerical inferiority to both our competitors, neither the Tory nor the Labor party have a chance to reclaim or obtain even a short lease of office unless it abandons for the time being the principal position on which it fought the recent election. Are we not then entitled to say our policy is the only one which the electors have not decisively and derisively rejected? From this it follows that it is we, if we really understand our business, who really control the situation."

Car Righted Self But Killed Driver

MOOSE JAW, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—A. E. McKibbon of Moose Jaw was instantly killed in a most peculiar manner near Vanguard, Sask., on Monday evening.

McKibbon was found by people driving along the road sitting behind the wheel of his automobile—dead. The windshield on the car was smashed, as was also the top. The car was right side up and in the middle of the road. Investigation showed that the car had turned completely over once, and McKibbon had received a blow on the head from which he died.

FATHER SHOT AT WEDDING PARTY

Threatened Wife in Search For Liquor--Boy Grabbed Gun to Defend Her.

SUDBURY, Dec. 19.—Mery Sarazin, 53 years of age, farmer, was shot and killed at his home near Markstay early Tuesday morning by his young son Emile, aged thirteen.

The weddingof Sarazin's daughter Clara to Henri Valliquette had taken place Monday afternoon and after the young couple had departed on their honeymoon the festivities continued to late hour. After the last of the guests had departed, Sarazin began to search for more liquor and got the notion his wife had hidden it on him. He threatened her with a gun, demanding that she produce it and she screamed to her two boys, aged thirteen and sixteen, for assistance. The younger lad picked up another gun and it was in some way discharged, the charge entering the father's right leg and severing an artery.

He bled to death before medical assistance could reach him. Provincial police made an investigation and an inquest will be held, but no arrests have been made.

FENCE COMPANY IS FACING CHARGE OF FALSE PRETENCES

Maurice D. Pendergast Spoke in Defence of the Company Yesterday.

SARNIA, Ont., Dec. 19—Maurice D. Pendergast was on the stand yesterday for the defence in charge against the officials of the Pendergast Fence Company of obtaining money under false pretences. His evidence was largely concerning the business methods of the firm, its hopes and its failure and the reasons contributing to the latter. He denied any attempt to defraud, and stated that he was now without a home and resources. But he cherished the hope that he would be able to some near time to refund all moneys to the creditors. His connection with an American company which had helped finance the Canadian company, and which placed an agent in Sarnia factory to see that their orders were filled first for the American company had prevented local orders being filled on schedule.

Then business became bad, when the output failed to reach the anticipated 2,000 tons in 1922. Money for fencing was used for various things which he considered all right. It was the method of all mail order houses. He had drawn only about half his salary in 1922 because he thought the firm needed the money. His daughter had not drawn her salary in full as secretary.

Austin C. Smith was also on the stand. His evidence being much of the nature of that given by Mr. Pendergast.

REPORT ROUT OF OBREGON FORCES AT SAN MARCOS

Revolutionists Announce Repulse of Federal Troops Abandoning the Materials of War.

ACTION UNDECIDED.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press)—According to revolutionary headquarters here the first phase of the fighting at San Marcos was in favor of the revolutionary forces who, with reinforcements, repulsed the Federal troops, who abandoned machine guns and war materials.

The action has not yet been fully decided, but the belief was expressed this afternoon at general headquarters that all danger had passed as the rebels were routing the Obergonists. Nothing is known here as to the losses sustained in the fighting.

General Belmar, federal commander of the garrison at Puerto Mexico, arrived here yesterday having surrendered to the revolutionists Monday. In an interview General Belmar said he had not joined the rebel movement because the only information he had of the situation was that Vera Cruz was in the hands of the revolutionists. Now that he had learned of the growth of the movement, he said, he would offer his services to the rebels.

TUBERCULIN TESTED COWS, SOLD FOR HIGHER PRICES

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 19.—The value of tuberculin-tested cattle, as compared with those which have not been tested, is reflected at the auctions being held in Western Michigan this winter, according to Melville B. McPherson, supervisor of Vergennes Township, a member of the State Board of Agriculture.

"Cattle outside of Kent County and which have not been tested bring from $10 to $15 less than can be obtained for Kent County cattle which have passed the test," he said.

Raisuli Again Reported Dead

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The Daily Mail's Tangier correspondent sends the announcement of the death of the notorious Moorish chief, Raisuli. It is suspected, according to this despatch, that Raisuli was poisoned.

Muali Ahmed Raisuli, brigand chief, and former Governor of Tangier, has had a picturesque career, and his death has been reported several times. Recently he announced his submission to Spain and gave his promise to keep the peace.

Raisuli's chief claim to fame grew out of his kidnapping of Ian H. Perdicaris, an United States citizen born in Athens.

Old Spanish Bank Closes Its Doors

PORT VENDRES, On the Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 19.— (Canadian Press)— The Banco De Castilla of Madrid, on Monday morning posted a notice on its doors announcing that it had suspended payments until the courts had decided to grant it an order to continue operations. The bank is one of the oldest in Spain. It has been doing a large business among the agriculturists and also the grandees.

The notice created considerable excitement and lines of depositors gathered outside the doors. They were unable to enter, however.

During the day rumors spread throughout Madrid that heavy defalcations had been discovered. The censorship did not permit the newspapers to mention the suspension of the bank, and telegraphic and telephonic messages concerning it were suppressed.

HUNGARY'S WAR DEBT, OBSTACLE TO LEAGUE LOAN

Austria Given 20-Year Moratorium—Hungarian Premier Objects to the Immediate Payment of Reparations.

Reconstruction Plan.

PARIS, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press)—The problem of reparations stands out as the sole obstacle in the way of launching a financial program for the reconstruction of Hungary under the auspices of the League of Nations.

The special committee of the Council of the League, which is sitting with Count Bethlen, the Hungarian Premier, and representatives of the Little Entente in an endeavor to reach an accord on details yesterday approved the recommendation of the Financial Committee of the League that when the proposed Hungarian loan is floated Hungary shortly afterwards should pay up to ten million gold crowns yearly on the reparation account. Count Bethlen was quick to point out that this would put Hungary on a different basis from Australia, whose reparations payments were waived for 20 years. He said he doubted if he could ask his people to accept such a reparations burden.

Seek Compromise.

The Financial Committee of the League will meet again today and try to reach a compromise and the reparations payments may be scaled down. Hungary also will be asked to put aside 7,500,00 gold crowns annually as amortization for the loan.

The special Hungarian Committee of the Council of the League has adjourned until Thursday. The reparation problem will be handled at a special annex to the reconstruction project.

Meantime an agreement was reached on the text of the second protocol, which provides the machinery for the loan, internal reforms and the form of control by the League.

Invited to Rome.

Count Bonin Longaire, Italy's representative on the League Council, yesterday invited the Council to hold its meeting next March in Rome, saying the Italian Government and people desire to extend their hospitality to the Council.

WHITE STAR CHANGES

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Following the recent announcements of the Cunard company's increased sailings to Canada the White Star Line announces that commencing in March next the liners Cedric and Celtic will sail at Halifax en route to New York. This will mean an increase of White Star sailings to Canada in some cases, to three weekly.

MUSSOLINI HAS NOT DECIDED TO HOLD ELECTION

Closing of Parliament Until Spring Had Been Interpreted By Public As Election Prelude.

MUCH SPECULATION.

ROME, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press)—Premier Mussolini dropped another bombshell in political circles yesterday when in a letter addressed to Minister of Public Works Carnazza he stated, with reference to the holding of new elections, that he had not decided to consult the country. At the time of the closing of Parliament by royal decree on December 10, it was freely predicted that he would ask for a decree of dissolution as a prelude to a general election.

Both the newspapers and the leaders of the various political parties were preparing for a new election. Some members of the Chamber of Deputies already had gone back to their home to see the voters. The whole country seemed to have settled itself down to a pre-election state, with the holding of caucuses and conference. Political discussions daily were being recorded in the newspapers.

Personnel Unchanged,

As the situation stands the recent closing of the parliamentary session did not affect the present personnel of Parliament. The old deputies are still in office until a decree is promulgated dissolving Parliament and calling for another election.

"It is certain,' says the Giornale D'Italia, "that the announcement closing the parliamentary session put the country in a pre-election state of mind. The Government must stabilize its platform, and then political parties must adjust themselves accordingly."

Adjourned Till Spring.

In some political circles the opinion prevails that Premier Mussolini has never mentioned anything about dissolving Parliament. It is the belief there that he merely closed the present session and intends to call it together again next Spring, when the King will open the deliberations with a speech.

On the other hand, there are still predictions of a coming election, in which there is talk of a probable coalition of the minority parties, including some of the parties of the Right with the Fascists.

The total value of commodities imported into Canada during the twelve month period ending with Nov. 30 last was $908,279,332 as compared with $752,254,587 in the twelve month period ending November 30, 1922.

URGE PEDESTRIANS TO KEEP TO LEFT.

Would Reduce Number of Accidents on Highways, Autoists Claim.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 19.—In an effort to reduce the number of accidents to pedestrians on the public highways of this state, the Pennsylvania Motor Federation is urging publicity for the recommendation of the American Automobile Association that persons on the highway, especially at night face the traffic by walking on the left hand side of the road.

The national association has reached the conclusion after a study of the situation that most of the cases when automobiles strike pedestrians at night are due to the driver being partially blinded by the headlights of approaching cars and, swinging to the right failing to see pedestrians It is contended that if persons walking on roads would face the traffic they would be better able to avoid being struck and also would be seen much sooner by the drivers of cars approaching in the opposite direction.

Defeat of Royalists in the Recent Election Was the Signal to Republicans to Remove King—Assembly to Decide His Future.

GIVEN A PENSION.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—The Greek nation, which in recent years has suffered so many dynastic changes, is today again without a King and under the regency of the aged Admiral Coundouriotis, who filled a similar role in 1920.

The suddenness of this development from the victory of the Liberals and Republicans at the recent elections has astonished even the Greek people, accustomed as they are to recurring political convulsions.

According to the Athens press, the King's absence will be regarded as "leave," pending the future decision of the National Assembly. But the general belief is that when the King and Queen depart for Bucharest today, another King will have disappeared for good from the rapidly diminishing number of European thrones.

Defeated at Polls.

The Revolutionary Cabinet, prompted by the decisive defeat of the royalists at the polls, served notice of his temporary dismissal on the youthful monarch who had no alternative but to accede. The Allied and Balkan diplomats made representations on behalf of their Governments against the expulsion of the King, but too late to save the situation.

Former Premier Venizelos, who is in Paris, has again been invited to return to Greece to undertake the Government. His reply is not yet known, but it is believed he will not accept unless a united call comes from the whole people.

According to latest advices the situation remains outwardly calm, but great anxiety for the future prevails, although the tone of the royalist press is comparatively moderate.

Demanded Deposition

The commander of the army at Saloniki and the commanding officers of several of the garrisons and the fleet sent telegrams to the Government demanding the deposition of the Glucksburg Dynasty as a national necessity brought about by a chain of misfortunes inflicted on Greece through the instrumentality of that dynasty. The Cabinet met immediately, but decided that it would not be possible to accede to these demands, which would constitute an unjustifiable act of violence and resolved upon the milder course of asking for the king's temporary withdrawal.

The British cruiser Calypso arrived in Greek waters yesterday.

Depart for Bucharest

ATHENS, Dec. 19.—George II King of the Hellenes, who succeeded his father, King Constantine, on that monarchs abdication, has been requested by the Government to withdraw from Greece, temporarily at least, but whether he will be permittd to return depends upon the national assembly. Accompanied by the Queen, who was Princess Elizabeth of Rumania, he will depart from Athens today for Bucharest.

In an official statement concerning its action, the Government explains that it considered it advisable for the king to leave Greece until the national assembly had reached a final decision respecting the regime best befitting the country.

RYAN CONFESSED TO F. BRUNSKILL

How He Started His Career of Crime When He Was Sixteen.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 19. —The beginning of the spectacular criminal career of Norman "Red" Ryan, held here for the Canadian police, was an incident on a country road near Toronto when the bandit was sixteen years of age. While riding on a motorcycle he was run down by a farmer. The accident enraged him and he fired at the farmer. He was then sentenced to three and a half years and released after he had served two years and nine months. He then started his career of crime. This was part of the confession which Ryan made last night to Frank Brunskill, Chief of Minneapolis Police. Ryan told the Chief that he had cleaned up almost two hundred thousand dollars in crimes. He said his plan to rob the bank in Pittsburgh this fall was frustrated when he read in the newspaper of the killing that day of the bandit in front of the bank. In less than three hours Ryan and his pal Brown left town.

He declared that he walked into a bank in Cleveland and before holding up the cashier he asked a woman wheeling a baby in a carriage to have a seat and wait until he carried out the job.

MANY BRITISH TROOPS STATIONED AT PESHAWAR

LONDON, Dec. 19.— (Canadian Press.)— Fifteen thousand British and Indian troops, including the infantry, cavalry, the field artillery and aeroplanes, are being held in readiness at Peshawar, on the Afghanistan-Indian frontier ,for a dash to Kabul should such a move become necessary to save members of the European Legations and other Europeans from a massacre by the excited Afghan population.

So far the attitude of Amir of Afghanistan continues scrupulously correct, but opinion is growing that he will not be able to restrain the passions of his fanatical subjects.

Threats are being made daily by the agitators against the Legations.

FRENCH TROOPS WANT TOYS FOR CHRISTMAS

LONDON, Dec 19. — (United Press.)—The French troops occupying Dusseldorf demanded that the city provide them with a number of wooly lambs and other toys ,according to a government report.

When the Dusseldorf authorities refused, the French confiscated what they wanted in the way of Christmas toys from the larger department stores, telling the proprietors it would be charged to the reparations account.

REPAIR DAMAGE BY EARTHQUAKE

(By Layrence S. Haas).

BOGOTA, Colombia, Dec. 19.— (United Press). — President Nel Ospina to-day assumed the personal charge of the measures to relieve the stricken population of the earthquake zone along the Ecuadorian border.

The President authorized the immediate expenditure of $10,000 for the more urgent cases and instructed the army to aid in caring for the hundreds of homeless and injured. Latest reports here placed the total dead from the disaster in which four towns were completely destroyed at 400, with hundreds more dangerously injured.

Among the injured is a Provincial Governor, Senor Tulcan, who was hurt while fleeing from the earthquake zone.

The devastated region includes one of the richest agricultural zones of Colombia, and the property damage is described in the latest reports as very great.

LARGE SUM NEEDED TO RECONSTRUCT CITIES IN DEVASTATED AREA

TOKIO, Dec. 19.— (Canadian Press.)—Faced by the proposal that 702,977,000 yen ($251,488,500 would be necessary to reconstruct the earthquake devastated cities of Tokio and Yokohama, the majority party in the Japanese Diet has unanimously resolved that the restoration budget must be reduced twenty per cent.

A political crisis may develop over the situation The majority party has also resolved to abolish the Tokio Restoration Board.

It was intended that the huge sum be spent within six years from the fiscal year of 1924. Heavy expenditures were to be made in the coming year but the Government did not intend to begin work on a grand scale until 1926.

Framers of the budget have expected to raise a loan to cover reconstruction expenses.

TWO DOGS SAVE MASTER'S LIFE

Dragged Him From Bed to Floor to Waken Him When Building Was on Fire.

MONTREAL, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—By dragging their sleeping master from his bed to the floor, two dogs yesterday saved the life of E. Guay, 60 years old, who would have perished from asphyxiation had he not been awakened by the fall and thus enabled to make his escape.

Guay was sound asleep in his room on the second storey of a biscuit factory at which he is employed as a night watchman, when he was rudely awakened by being dragged from his bed. He found the room full of smoke and his two dogs tugging at his night clothes. Hastily donning a pair of trousers, he made his way to the street, followed by his faithful friends.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Cheese Production High in the District — Cheese Board Loses Another.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 19 — At an adjourned meeting of the patrons of the Campbellford cheese factory, it was decided to break with the local Cheese Board and to affiliate with the Co-operative Association. This action was taken after H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, had addressed the gathering on behalf of co-operation.

Other factories in Seymour Township, including Woodlands and I. X. L., have this same question under advisement. The factory at Stanwood left the Board and joined the co-operatives early last summer. There were 17 factories associated with the local Board at the beginning of the season, and there was a gradual falling away, until only seven were represented at the final meeting some weeks ago.

Seymour's Record.

There are 14 factories in Seymour Township, and the total revenue of these during the season just closed equalled 25 per cent. of the assessed value of the township. Farmers in this vicinity declare that the dairy cow is all that stands between them and insolvency.

A number of young friends of Miss Eva Martin, bride to be, gathered at her home on Tuesday evening, and spent a social hour. During the evening the Mission Circle of the Methodist Church presented her with half a dozen orange spoons. Miss Martin made a suitable reply. Miss Eva Martin, Campbellford.

Dear Eva,—Your friends of the Mission Circle of hte Campbellford Methodist Church feel that we cannot alow this opportunity to pass, without expressing in some measure, at least, our appreciation of your worth as a friend, and of your valued assistance and advice in our work. It goes without saying that we shall miss you from our meetings and also in the social circle, where your genial manner and winning ways have endeared you to so many of us. Kindly accept this little gift as a token of our esteem and regard for you, and may it serve to remind you of your girl friends of the Mission Circle of Campbellford Methodist Church.

Signed on behalf of the Circle,
S. Keir.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MAN SERVING TERM IN JAIL GAVE TIP

Red Ryan Was Not Given Away by Woman But on Information From Man in Ontario Jail.

TORONTO, Dec .19.—(Canadian Press.)— It is stated this morning that it was a man now serving a term in an Ontario jail who was responsible for the capture of "Red" Ryan and the rounding up of Art Brown. Although Ryan in an interview a few days ago blamed a woman for his capture and the death of Brown, it transpires, according to later information, that it was through Ryan's continued correspondence with a woman in Toronto that the secret of his whereabouts was discovered.

Before being sent to Kingston, Ryan was intimate with a girl in Toronto and during his time in the penitentiary she received letters from him. Shortly after his departure she struck an acquaintance to an erstwhile actor and it is claimed that some of the much wanted hold-up men gathered at her house and planned robberies, among them being the hold-up of bank messengers some months ago.

Since going to jail it was learned from this man in a roundabout way that Ryan had been in Toronto for a visit .Knowing the habits of the woman he gave the police addresses where she might be found. With this information the police obtained some letters the woman had received from Ryan, one giving his address as "care general delivery, Minneapolis." It is claimed that this information led to Ryan's arrest.

BRITON HUNGERY FOR ROAST BEEF.

Christmas Pilgrimages Have Already Started of Men Returning to Historic Fare.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(Associated Press).—Just as the Yankee living in foreign lands day dreams, as Christmas approaches, of turkey dinners that are not to be for him, so the Englishman far from home, hungers for roast beef. Most of these alien dreams go unfulfilled, the dreamers contenting themselves with the thought that one of these Christmases they will return to the old family fireplace or radiator, and eat to their heart's content. But there are other exiles, fortunate of place and pocketbook, who can obey the annual impulse to go home for Christmas. Their numbers seem on the increase.

The British Isles are the focal point for numbers of Englishmen and Scotsmen who hit the homeward trail from Canada, from India, and South Africa and the other overseas parcels of Empire as the Yuletide comes nigh. This year the homecoming Britons are so numerous that special excursion ships are being run up from South Africa to accommodate them. Three such steamships will arrive at English ports just a few days before Christmas.

Trans-Atlantic liners always find the winter lull in traffic enlivened a little at the holiday season by Americans hurrying home from Europe just in time to get in on the big eating, and Europeans coming back from America. This year is no exception. The Christmas pilgrimages have already begun. Among those who left England this weekend were several of the American students at Oxford. There the Christmas vacation is long enough to permit the Americans to spend a month with the home folks, before returning to their rounds of reading and rowing and teas and tutors.

DAIRYMEN HAD A SUCCESSFUL SEASON'S WORK

Meeting of Northumberland Branch of Eastern Dairymen's Association Reported One of Best Years Since the War — Interesting Speeches.

NEW GRADING LAW.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

WARKWORTH, Dec. 19.—Dairymen in the Campbellford district have closed one of the best years that they have had since the war, according to the report of Instructor John a Murray submitted at a largely attended meeting of the Northumberland branch of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, held here yesterday in the village hall. Director Alex Hume occupied the chair and the speakers from outside were G. G. Publow, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, J. L. Irwin, cheese grades at Belleville, and H. Sterrett, of Brighton, who is the district representative. The Association nominated Richard Honey, of Percy township, director for the coming year in succession to Mr. Hume, and also, by a vote of 35 to four, approved of the Standard Dairy Act which has been in force for the past two years.

Receipts Total $622,721.

There are 26 factories in the district over which Mr. Murray has jurisdiction. The output from these factories for the year totalled 2,666,363 pounds of cheese and the average price received was 19 cents. This means that the milk delivered at the factories by the patrons brought them $622,721 in cash. The output this year was 258,891 pounds in excess of that of last year. The average yield of milk per cow was 3,827 pounds. The price received for cheese was two and a half cents more than in 1922.

Mr. Murray said he found all the factories anxious to turn out a good grade of cheese and to do that it was necessary to engage expert makers.

Turnips as Fodder.

Mr. Murray believes that it is not good policy to feed turnips to dairy cattle as to do so taints the milk and the effect is seen in the cheese.

On this point Richard Honey took issue with him. Mr. Honey believes that no harm results if the turnips are fed in moderation. He has been using this feed for years and has had no trouble with his sales.

Mr. Publow told the association that I was perfectly safe to feed turnips to cows immediately after they were milked as this gave them a chance to absorb the volatile oil in the roots before the next milking. Director Hume stated that the dairymen around Campbellford had for some years been convinced that turnips should not be fed to dairy cows.

The New Grading Law.

Mr. Irwin in his address dealt with the new grading law. The system was working out well, but it would take some time to develop it properly. He gave some practical advice on the handling of cheese so as to secure a high grade. It should be well colored and finished and should fit the boxes. Cheese men in this district should get better receptacles for their produce.

Every factory next year will be given a registered number by the government so that it will be possible to trace low grade cheese to its source and to keep in touch with the makers. Twenty per cent. of the cheese put on the market is too green and all cheese should be held in the factory for at least ten days.

Next year Mr. Irwin intimated, cheese pot properly cured will be held up by the graders for a week or ten days and with it the entire shipment from that particular factory.

Against this proposition W. S. Nelson protested, claiming that it would be an injustice to patrons as the price might drop while the cheese was in storage.

There were 1,329,300 boxes of cheese graded at Montreal this year, and of these 92,886 boxes were under grade. Eighty per cent. of the defective cheese came from 13 per cent. or 17 of the factories.

Mr. Irwin announced that a demonstration on the grading of cheese will be held in Campbellford in January. There is, he added, too much second and third grade cheese going to Europe, and if Canada is to hold her place in the market there must be some improvement.

Nominating a Director.

At the conclusion of Mr. Irwin's address, Mr. Hume called Mr. Publow to the chair and the election of a director was then taken up. There were only two nominations, William Stewart and Robert Innis placed Mr. Hume's name before the meeting, while Mr. Honey's sponsors were John McCubbin and Peter Sherman. A standing vote was taken showing 20 for Mr. Hume and 20 for Mr. Honey. This nomination was confirmed at the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association to be held in Kingston on 6th January.

Mr. Hume's Record.

The honour of this position appears to pass on alternate years from the two gentlemen who were named for it yesterday. Percy and Seymour Townships vote solidly against each other, the members from each upholding their favourite son, and when the meeting of the Association is held at Campbellford Mr. Hume wins, but when the contest is shifted to Warkworth Mr. Honey's friends turn out and elect him. This has been the result for a number of years. Both gentlemen are prominent dairymen, and never lose an opportunity to advance the cause of the industry. During his term of office this year, Mr. Hume was instrumental in having a grader located at Belleville and also put up a fight for the grading of cheese at the factories. Those who know him best say that all his life he has worked for the good of the trade.

Mr. Publow's Address.

Mr. Publow, in his address, called attention to the fact that New Zealand is making a strong bid for the cheese market of Britain. Twenty-five per cent. of the cheese made in Canada is under first grade. It is true that Canadian makers secured at London first and third of the three prizes offered for the best cheese, but this fact had been less advertised by the Canadian press than would a hockey game won by a team from this country.

The great advantage in the independent grading instituted by the Government this year is that it is made without regard to market conditions. The factories that produce under grade cheese are either insanitary or they are improperly

The intergrade cheese may be due to the fact that milking machines and other dairy utensils are not kept perfectly clean and the factory may not be sanitary. Good piping should be put up and cleaned once a week. The very fact that the price of cheese was higher this year than in 1922 does not justify leaks. Complaints are received from the old country that Canadian cheese is too dry, that is that it has not been sufficiently cured. New Zealand cheese is kept in storage for at least 14 days Mr. Publow said there is talk of a law to be passed at the next session of Parliament making it compulsory to keep cheese at least 10 days before putting it on the market. While he does not believe in such enactments as a rule he is inclined to the opinion that some such legislation is necessary. It had been found by investigation that in seven groups of factories, seven to the group, all but 32 shiped cheese every week right from the hoops.

Supplemental Feeding

District Representative. Sterritt advised the farmers to pay more attention to the appearance of their cattle, so that they can sell cows at from $80 to $100, before they are aged when they bring 2 1-2 cents a pound for canning. These cows should be replaced by young stock.

Mr. Sterritt believes that sweet-clover has proved a boom to dairymen but for the feed to supplement pasture nothing is equal to corn ensilage. A patent silo will cost $300 but a home made one can be put up for half that amount and do just as well for holding summer feed. He advised the holding of agricultural courses in the district during the winter.

Dairy Act Upheld

A vote was then taken on the Dairy Standard Act passed two years ago by the Drury Government and it was endorsed by a vote of 35 to 4 after Mr. Publow had explained the object and operation.

Some of the cheese boards in the district have voted to ask the Legislature to amend the Act so as to leave its enforcement optional with factories but Mr. Irwin told the Examiner that this is not necessary as the law already contains such a provision.

After Mr. Honey, the new director, had thanked the members for his nomination and promised to do his best for the industry, the meeting adjourned.

Miss Allen's TESTED RECIPES No. 42

Nebraska French Fried Onions

(Below is the favorite recipe of Mr. William Jennings Bryan whose permission we have to print it from the Stag Cook Book)

Take a Bermuda onion—any other large onion would do—cut it into slices through the rings so that each slice will be made up of a large number of whole rings. Then break the slices up into separate rings, drop these into a thin batter and fry them as you fry French Fried Potatoes. Each ring looks like a little doughnut. I find that the dish is universally praised.

Batter

2 egg yolks
¼ cupful sweet milk
¼ cupful pastry flour
½ teaspoonful salt

Beat the yolks light. Add the milk, the flour and salt sifted together, beating it in with an egg beater.

You will find that Crisco frying gives these just the right crispy brown.

A STRICT WARNING TO ALL TRAPPERS

Not to Trap or Kill in Any Way Otter or Beaver Out of Season.

TORONTO, Dec. 19.— Having given the Ontario trappers and fur traders full freedom of the operation in the otter and beaver season, from Dec. 15. to March 31, the Provincial Government it is understood contemplates a drastic action in the cases of fur men who deliberately continue to take these fur animals after close of the open season. The punishment for such infringement of department regulations in future is to be, it is understood, no less than the cancellation and refusal to renew licenses.

Until recently trappers were allowed to take but 10 otter and beaver during the open season, regulation, however, it was stated, that was not by any means lived up to. With view to saving to province immense revenues that it lost by illicit killing and disposition of the furs. Hon. Charles McCrea, amended regulations so that trappers might take all they could in the open season, but that the open season must positively close on March 31.

Now the department is taking a view that, having been generous with trappers, they in turn must deal fairly with the government.

WARSHIPS PLAN BIG MANOEUVRE.

New Phases of Combat Proposed For American Fleet.

LOS ANGELES Dec. 19.—(Associated Press).—Manoeuvers of such magnitude as to constitute a mimic war, rather than a sham battle, will test existing conceptions of defense affecting the Panama Canal when the United States fleet begins its operations for 1924 at midnight on Jan. 3, according to naval officers here.

Prominent among the new phases of combat expected to enter into this "war" for possession of the canal will be the influence of dirigible aircraft on surface manoeuvers at sea. The Shenandoah, the navy's new giant dirigible, will remain aloft throughout the manoeuvres, supported strongly by squadrons of combat craft by day, and ascending above the clouds at night.

Eighteen first-line battleships, 72 destroyers, 300 planes of all types 50 submarines and hundreds of fleet auxiliary craft will combine to make the canal defense manoeuvers the most extensive yet undertaken by the American navy.

One feature of the "hostilities" will be a landing expedition, to utilize all available marines, who will launch an artillery and infantry attack against the United States army forces defending the canal.

The battle fleet, under Rear Admiral Samuel S. Robison, will open the operations with a surprise attack against the Pacific side of the canal, which will be defended by a scouting fleet under Vice-Admiral Newton McCully.

There will be an air problem for both sides the Pacific force using catapulted planes for local scouting, and the Atlantic force sending out plane fleets from its aircraft carriers, the Langley and the Wright. Submarines also will be used in the defense of the canal

The first use of aircraft fog and smoke screens in such operations will take place at Panama when, in a combined air attack on the canal, the army will interpose an aerial screen.

The land and sea attack will simulate in many ways the Allied assaults on Gallipoli during the war.

Radio "fans" who picked up WTAM on December 12th, heard the birdies sing even though it was a dark and stormy night.

Eight little yellow Rollers each took a turn before the microphone and "strutted their stuff."

The birds were furnished by exhibitors at the International Roller Canary Show, held in Cleveland the week of December 10th. All were prize winners in some branch of Roller Canary-ing.

Vancouver Premier, judged to be the world's champion singer was one of the "artists." Another was Lohengrin, 1922 champion, who left the show to become first canary of the land as a gift to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. Whiz Bang Billie, a comer in bird circles was another of the vocalists.

Some of the birds took readily to the microphone. Others had to be coaxed to pull out the tremolo stops and warble.

WTAM would like to hear from the "fans" who heard the birds.

ORDER ALLOWS BROADCASTING

Listening In Is Expensive In Germany, and Broadcasting For Amusement Was Prohibted.

BERLIN, December 19 (Associated Press). — Listening-in is expensive in Germany. The Government does not permit anyone to have a machine for receiving wireless who doesn't pay a fee of 25 gold marks and obtain a permit from the police.

The receiving machines now on sale in German shops average in price from 300 to 400 gold marks.

Until the middle of October the Government regarded broadcasting with such suspicion that it was prohibited for amusement purposes, and the public was not permitted to have receivers.

For some time the Post Office Department which controls wireless operations has had considerable income from a service called "Blitzfunk," which was supplied to banks and commercial concerns throughout the republic and the desire to retain this income has apparently interfered with general permission to establish receiving stations.

Preparations are being made to supply hospitals, cafes, and factories with operas, concerts, speeches and new reports.

President Ebert and Minister of Posts, Dr. Hoeffle, attended the formal opening of public broadcasting, which was also attended by a large delegation of Berlin newspapermen and widely heralded in the press as a new development in Germany's technical progress.

LATE HOURS AND THE CHILDREN.

School principals in a number of Ontario cities have been calling the attention of parents to the fact that the indulgence granted many children in the matter of late hours is reflected in a marked falling off in the efficiency of the pupils.

The Examiner does not know to what extent the conditions complained of in other places exist here, but there are indications that Peterborough parents are just as careless about this matter as they are elsewhere.

It will be perhaps timely during the Christmas holidays for parents to give a little thought to the amount of liberty their children enjoy, and to consider whether or not some restriction in this respect might not be an excellent thing for the young folks, both from a health and from an educational standpoint.

The old-time curb on the exuberance of the children may have been too tight, but it had its advantages.

What is needed now perhaps is a happy medium that will not cut all the joy out of young lives, but that will not allow the pursuit of pleasure to take first place—where it seems to be now.

RIVERSIDE PARK.

The Examiner has no desire to maintain a controversy over the proper policy to pursue in connection with Riverside Park, for, in the first place, such a discussion is at present unseasonable, and in the second, there is little chance of any real good being done by a prolonged argument over this question.

A correspondent who signs himself "Veteran," however, seems to think that it is the duty of the City Council to constitute itself into an agency to collect from such sports as may be able to finance themselves funds to carry on other sports that are not self-sustaining.

The Examiner does not believe that any such responsibility should be thrown upon the Aldermen.

Their duty is simply to administer Riverside Park in the best interests of the community generally.

How that can best be done or what policy will benefit the most people is a broad subject.

"Veteran's" view apparently is that the sports that are most generally patronized should be charged enough for the use of the grounds to enable the people who want to play lawn tennis, etc., to indulge in such amusements without cost to themselves, and that the Council should act as a censorship board to watch over the amateur standing of the city's athletics.

What do the Aldermen think of that proposal?

STANDARDS OF LIVING.

We commend to our readers the following article taken from the Nov. 10th issue of the Commercial & Financial Chronicle, New York:

Economists are engaged in a search for the root of our domestic, commercial and financial troubles. While countless reasons are offered for our disjointed affairs, it is constantly maintained in certain quarters that we must preserve what some are pleased to term our "American standard of living.' This standard no one finds it easy to define.

All are agreed, however, that it is much "higher" than that of our forefathers. Only a cursory examination of our social life discloses that many of our former luxuries have become necessities. The measure of truth in this claim is comparative. The social structure compels many expenditures that were unknown in former years.

Yet the compulsion is social, and not personal or individual, in many cases.

Plain living is not antagonistic to high thinking. Simple pleasures are often more enjoyable than the more complex. Allowing the "spenders" to set the pace for a "standard of living" will always keep many a "nose to the grindstone."

Let us consider a few of the conditions in which we find ourselves. Begin with education. It is the common claim that the bread-winner must have sufficient wages, salary or permanent income, to "educate his children."

But what is this "education?" Our universities are crowded to suffocation; their courses of study expanded to an unheard-of degree. Huge endowments are sought; enormous State appropriations demanded. Does any sane view of our social life require a university education for every son and daughter?

We come down the scale and find that colleges and high schools are miniature universities asking and receiving tax moneys never before appropriated; while private institutions of a preparatory character are more numerous than ever before save a time before "public schools." Passing still downward to our common schools, we find them doing work unknown in the early days, expanding their studies, combining their agencies, seeking new buildings, more apparatus, larger teaching forces, and, of course, more money. The question here is, are we as a people in a social sense getting full value received in educated men and women, in studious and helpful lives, in character that devotes itself to spiritual things, in contentment with things as they are and loyal support of Government as it is? Or, on the other hand, is this educational vision one that breeds discontent, induces undue striving after the flesh-pots, inculcates a love of intellectual strife, rather than domestic quietude and spiritual aspiration?

All this questioning is not directed to a curtailment of educational activities, but towards their consecrated direction to a "love of learning" for its own sake and the use of knowledge that it may insure personal happiness regardless of so-called inequalities in the physical conditions of living. For no "standard of living" in a free country can ever be established. To attempt it is tyranny.

To seek for it is futile. Education itself is a preventative so long as the individual has freedom and initiative.

Commerce forbids it. What a dollar will buy is comparative—for one it buys meagre necessities, for another trifling frivolities. Yet we have come to believe that in business, in the vocations and avocations of life, we must each have what the others have. If we cannot earn or make a fortune something must be done for us, presumably by the Government. If a neighbor has a car, one must be secured even if the home is mortgaged. If one firm grants vacations, all must.

We have come, in our common, every-day life, to want the best and most of everything. High wages, of course higher than war-time—for "life is advancing," and we have escaped the decadence of old world centuries. We are never satisfied.

Today is not complete in itself unless tomorrow is to be better. Pleasure for everybody and everybody for pleasure.

Observing men in the Middle West can be heard to say—"Oh, the East is prosperous—but the rest of the country is 'black'!" And in the next breath say—"But things are changed—the truth is the farmer does not work as he once did."

Then will follow stories illustrative of changed conditions. The farmer has his automobile, a very serviceable part of his equipment, but too much "the boys" use it for joy-riding and for nightly transportation to the village movies.

His "hired help" have been inoculated with the eight-hour-day virus and begin late and quit early. He "gets more" for most products he sells, but pays more for practically all that he buys.

He is himself disposed to have the best and most of everything—complains of the price of wheat, but buys bread sent out by the truck load from large city bakeries. And so the story runs.

In consequence of increased desire and limited buying power he is disgruntled and dispose to carry his complaints into politics.

Blessings that civilization spreads broacast along our way are not beneficial if they merely create unsatisfied desires. Some of the greatest scholars, statesmen and spiritual types we have known emerged from humble surroundings into lives of patient toil and thought, and in success never forgot their early training. The young man and woman who would be truly great may become so without special education or inherited wealth, for greatness lies in service. The family that lives and works within itself need not fear the social climber, for this often ends in strained finances and an ignoble fall.

Poverty is hard to bear, but is no disgrace. Riches do not make the man.

Education that does no more than confer degrees for knowledge attained is misplaced. Ever seeking for something "higher," something that is the fad or fashion, something that gives hectic pleasure rather than gentle joy, distorts our social life, disorders the natural economics of our commerce and puts our business and financial endeavors upon tilted foundations. We want to begin at the top of the ladder and are unwilling to ascend from the ground.

Take this thought in all its bearing and will it not explain much of our complaining over "inequalities," over contrasting "standards of living," over rich and poor, over capitalist and workingman?

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

So far nobody has suggested a tag day for the benefit of the policemen.

White River can't be kept off the map even in a December of unusual mildness. Witness the fact that the thermometer dropped to 24 below zero up there this week.

And while White River reports 24 below, Owen Sound comes along with a boast of ripe strawberries.

Western Ontario points report a drop in the price of anthracite. That, the cheaper cost of turkeys and the mild weather should make Christmas this year one to remember.

Some people have put off their Christmas shopping in the hope that the police would quit their jobs. And apparently others have chosen Sunday night as the best time to do t[illegible]rs.

The Progressive party is to be formally launched on January 3rd. It is to be hoped its platform will not be as easily departed from as are most of the New Year resolutions.

Belleville Intelligencer: Peterborough is rated as a progressive city, but its right to this classification is seriously threatened by the blundering manner in which the matter of police salaries was handled. It is reasonably safe to predict that a similar situation could not develop in Belleville. We don't carry economy to the point of failing to provide for our Police Department.

As a contemporary sees it, the only people who read Dickens' "Christmas Carol" at this time of the year are the folks who do not need to read it to get the real Christmas spirit.

So far municipal candidates have fought shy of announcing any platforms. They'll probably come along after nomination day.

Tommy Church is spoken of as a likely starter in Toronto's municipal campaign. He must be trying to show that there is nothing in the "They-can't-come-back" theory.

They say Henry Ford will have a rattling good platform of he decides to run for President.

MARY GARDEN SEEKS LEAP YEAR HUSBAND

Says 14,000-Mile Tour Has Failed To Find Him.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Mary Garden still had her eye out for a Leap Year husband when she landed in Chicago to take her part in grand opera. The horoscopes all ordain it, she said. Marriage in 1924 is assured. It's just a question of who the husband shall be. And Mary confessed that a tour of 14,000 miles over the best territory this country has to offer, just completed, has failed to turn up the man.

"Qualifications?"

"Oh, he must be Anglo-Saxon, speak English, and be a gentleman.

"Never Latin," Miss Garden exclaimed.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—Sales for the day were 1,745, and the receipts were 1,737, and this made a slight inroad on last week's carry over. The run yesterday morning was exceedingly light, being 264 cattle, 128 calves, 200 hogs and 221 sheep butchers among the frist stuff, and buyers were congratulating themselves on having bought in last weeks' market. Commissioner men were off the market early, and the market had a holiday appearance.

The exporters bought 350 steers and 11 bulls on Monday, and do not expect to do anything further this year. The bulls cost 4 to 5 cents a pound, and the steers $6 to $7.50 a cwt. A few choice heavy steers were bought on Monday for domestic purposes at 7½ cents, and loads of medium weight butchers were taken at 6¾ cents. One choice load of butchers were good enough to bring over $6.35 a cwt. For a choice baby beef, 11 cents a pound was paid, and one extra good butcher's cow made 5 cents a pound. Most of yesterday's offerings did not class above the medium grade of butchers, and these were selling steady. A lot of common held over cattle are offering a shade higher than last week.

A demand for Christmas veal made a strong market for calves yesterday, and the right kind of a calf would have brought up to 13 cents. Good medium calves were 10 cents and over, and some good one went at 11 to 12 cents. I. N. Armstrong, of Thornbury, sold four good calves through Quinn and Hisey. Three brought 12 cents and one 13½ cents.

Lambs were no better yesterday, and the top for light lambs were 11 cents, and only a few fancy ones would sell higher than this. There are too many heavy lambs, and the prices for these run from 10 to 10½ cents for the ewes. Choice sheep are bringing up to 7 cents a pound.

Hogs firmed up 25 cents a cwt. on Monday and were steady yesterday at 7.75 a cwt. bid for the thick smooth f.o.b.

PRISONER AND HANGMAN, FELLOW PASSENGERS.

Unknown to Each Other, Ride Together to Execution.

BOSTON, December 19. — A Canadian Pacific train, Boston bound out of Montreal, was the scene of a weird little drama of life the other day.

In the smoking compartment sat Brodeur, a handsome young Frenchman bound for Sweetsburg to be hanged.

Not 15 feet away from the calm young man who smoked his pipe, indifferent to the prison official to whom he was shackled and to the stares of the crowd gathered at the way stations, was Ellis, the Dominion's official hangman.

Neither was conscious of the other's presence, and fate, to add just another twist to the queer circumstances, had the Pullman porter unwittingly aid the execution by carrying the unusually heavy bag of the hangman, in which reposed the noose.

The law of the Dominion, which says that a crime should be atoned for on the place where it occurred, was the cause of this incident, for Brodeur, in the heat of passion, had killed a man in a fight over a girl.

RYAN "DOUBLE CROSSED" BROWN TOLD ON "PAL" WHO HELPED HIM

Proved to Be What Police Call "Cheap and Contemptible Crook" in Disclosing Clue to Whereabouts of Man Who Imperilled Life For Him.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 19. "Red" Ryan is held up as a cheap and contemptible crook by the Minneapolis police, if what they say is true, and there are corroborative circumstances that leave little doubt it was this trapped convict that handed his pal, Art Brown, to the executioner. It was the outlaw who pretended to be so shocked when he saw his dead companian lying in the morgue who gave the first tip about Brown's girl, and where to find her. Of course, the robber was unnerved by the shock of the bullet he had just received and the trying battle through which he had passed Friday when Supt. Frank Brumskill sweated him in his cell, but all he had to do to give Brown a chance to get out of town was to keep his mouth shut, and he didn't. Brown's body at the morgue, being visited by morbid crowds, is the tangible result of that double-cross he handed the out law pal of whom the beaten crook whines so loudly. And Detective Meehan, who shot "Red' and then slew the man the crook betrayed, said this of Ryan to-day:

Ryan Just Like the Rest

"These killers are not so terrifying when you confront them on an even footing with a gun. Ryan is just like the rest of 'em. When I shot him at the post office it was just a slight wound, but he gave up and pleaded not be shot again. His gang usually shoot again when they see their victim only wounded and he thought I was going to give him the same mercy these outlaws show others, but that's not the policeway, so we handcuffed him and brought him in.'

And here is the evidence that "Red' double-crossed the man who but an hour ago, had risked his life to try and rescue him as he was brought bleeding from the post office. Though Brown knew it was a dangerous job with so many armed detectives standing around, he took the chance in spite of this, and "Red' an hour later at the station told the chief where he could probably find Brown.

Gave Girl's Name

After a preliminary talk, Ryan told the chief his outlaw friend had a chum that he thought lived in St. Louis place, and that her name was Adams. He could not remember her name, but her yellow hair was the thing that fixed the identification. St. Louis place is two miles from the police station. An hour afer "Red" was taken, the police waggon crowded with armed men rushed to St. Louis place. "Red" evidently did not know the girl had moved since he and Art met her when they were in Minneapolis about Nov. 1 to rob the St. Paul Bank.

But this was enough. This dash in the dark by the police waggon at 9.10 Friday night, fixes the blame for betraying Art Brown on "Red" The taxi driver who drove Brown unconscious of his connection with the shooting a block away, to keep the love tryst with Miss Adams, did not go to the stations with his suspicions until Saturday morning, when he read the story of the battle in the paper, and for the first time concluded that his fare of the night before might have been the escaped robber.

How Girl Was Located

Meantime the police had found the girl had moved from St. Louis place since the robbers first made her acquaintance. They could not locate her home, but they did find that she was employed at the Minneapolis Athletic Club. The rest was easy, for they had her surname, and the report of her fine head of golden hair.

Then it was that she refused to believe her lover was a robber, and told the police frankly that he was to phone her Saturday night and call at her home, and she would be glad to have them there and prove Art Miller, as she knew the outlaw, was not a bandit, but a nice, polite automobile salesman, who would not harm a child.

So the slab in the morgue was the reward Brown earned for the last battle in which he engaged, which was to say, his pal, "Red" Ryan. No wonder the convict shuddered when he walked into the morgue and looked on his dead friend's face.

Canada's Phthisis Deaths Decreases

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Canada leads Great Britain and the United States in low tuberculosis death rate. Canada's deaths from all forms of tuberculosis for 1922, in the nine Provinces, numbered 7,559, a decrease of 135 deaths over 1921. The rate per 100,000 for 1922 is 84.4, a decrease of 3.2 deaths per 100,000.

Canada has spent in sanatoria, built or building, $11,000,000. Canada probably spent last year for the treatment of tuberculosis $5,000,000. Every death decrease means a decrease of five open affective cases in the community.

LINDSAY MONEY IN OIL BUBBLE

Peddler of Bogus Stock Returned to Old Town to Let Good Friends in on "Good Thing."

LINDSAY, Dec. 19.—As a result of the exposure of the gigantic flotation of bogus oil stock in Texas, and the imprisonment of several of the promoters of the fraudulent enterprise, a number of Lindsay men have suddenly realized that they are among the army of "easy marks" who fell victims to the glib-tongued agents who preyed upon the people.

Some time ago a former resident of this town, but now in the United States returned to the old haunts and unfolded a story of wonderful returns from investments in Texas oil stock. He professed to be on "the inside," and was prepared to give his Lindsay friends an opportunity of becoming wealthy. Visions of easy money loomed up before them, and before many days the promoter had succeeded in separating quite a number from their hard-earned money.

It is stated on good authority that the amount of money invested in Texas air by Lindsayites would run into the four figures. The agent departed in great glee and assured his victims that they would get quick returns. Months passed with no word from the Texas oil fields. The investors never gave up hope, however, until word came that the bubble had been pricked, and that the oil proposition was nothing but a collosal steal. A large number of young ment are included among the local victims.

Young Peoples' Societise Hold Regular Meetings —Good Programmes.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 18.—The regular meeting of the Young People's League of the Methodist church was held Monday night. The president was in the chair. At the beginnin gof the meeting Miss Verna Sanders was appointed to fill the late William Hore's place as captain of the "Lions" in the contest. The devotional part was then taken up, after which the minutes were read and approved and other business transacted. It was decided not to hold a meeting next Monday, it being Christmas eve and the 4th vice-presidents will take the fifth Monday instead for their programme. The programme part of the evening was taken charge of by Howard Fairman, 3rd vice-president "Citizenship" department. 1st, piano solo, Arthur Collinson and an encore. Reading, 'A Friend to Man,' by Mr. S. A. Maguire. Instrumental duet by Daisy Rowe (violin) and Esther McDonald (guitar) with an encore. The topic, the writer of the hymn "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Scriven came to Canada when a young man and taught school in Port Hope. He was well educated and made special use of it. He moved to Bewdley and spent a great part of his life there, often speaking on the streets in Port Hope, to the people, as they came into town on Saturday, about the salvation of Christ. Scriven was drowned in 1886 and was buried in the Pengilly cemetery, about one and one-half miles from Bewdley. About 33 years after some people started a contribution for a monument, which was subsequently erected.

The Young People's Endeavour in the Presbyterian church was held on Monday night. The first topic, Christian Brotherhood, was taken by Miss Hazel Atkinson. The address, "An Evening With Longfellow," was given by Mrs. G. A. Kingston. A duet entitled, "Excelsior," words by Longfellow, was sung by Mr. Wiglesworth and Mr. W. Henson. Then came a social hour and the following programme: Piano duet, Miss Locke and Miss Meiklejohn, a solo "The Village Blacksmith" (Longfellow) by Mr. W. Henson, and a reading, "Willie's Passion," by Miss Gladys Meiklejohn.

TOM TEEPLES MAY LOSE HIS HAND

As a Result of a Shot Fired By An Unknown Person From Behind Ambush.

SUDBURY, Dec. 18.— Tom Teeples is in Sudbury hospital, where one hand may have to be amputated to-day as a result of a gunshot wound, received at home, three miles from Turbine, last night. Complaints had been made to the Children's Aid Society that Teeple's children, boys of three and eleven and a girl of fourteen, had been so ill-treated that they had often slept in the woods. Last night Teeples appeared at Turbine in a badly weakened condition from the wounds. Teeples is said to be a returned soldier. His wife is not living with him. His explanation is that while crossing a field a shot was fired at him from the woods nearby.

MORE THAN 100,000 RADIOS IN CANADA.

Broadcasters Number 38, and Government Puzzled How to Help Them.

OTTAWA, December 19. — There are over a hundred thousand radio users in Canada, and the problem before the Department of Marine, which supervises this service, is how to assist the broadcasting stations upon which the receiving sets rely for their service.

At the beginning of last year the broadcasters numbered 63. Early this year the number fell to 26, but at present it is 38. It is figured that over $2,000,000 is invested in receiving sets, the manufacture of which has developed into a profitable business.

As broadcasting is the life of this form of entertainment, ways and means of encouraging it are frequently considered but no conclusion has been reached.

In Manitoba the Provincial Government aids broadcasting through the telephone system, and the Dominion Government refunds to the Province half of the license fees collected.

Notes From Santa Claus

BY SANTA CLAUS

TOYLAND, North Pole, Dec. 19.

Dear Boys and Girls: As I sit here at a brand new little desk that some boy or girl is going to get for Christmas, Midgets are running back and forth in front of me as busy as can be.

One of them borrowed a wheelbarrow from the Toy Land workshop and he is carrying big alphabet blocks to be packed in big boxes.

Another, who is fond of all animals, is in charge of the elephants, dogs, cats and camels that are moving into Noah's Ark.

My goodness! What was that noise?

Excuse me a minute while I help the Midgets pick up a whole load of rubber balls. The bottom fell out of the cardboard box that held them.

I wish you could see all of these balls. One of them has a picture of a teddy bear on it. My, but it looks cute! And another has letters and numbers on it. The letters spell "C-I-R-C-U-S," and that's just about what you can have with this ball, if you get it.

For the tiny tots I have made little bead boards. It's fun to push the beads back and forth and it's also easy to learn how to count as you push them.

Over in the corner of this big toy room is a great pile of flat boxes. Each one is a game of some sort. I'd like to tell you about every one of them, but that would spoil the fun of finding out for yourself on Christmas morning.

I'll tell you all about the express wagons, kiddie cars, roller skates and sleds tomorrow. Sincerely,

SANTA CLAUS.

BRITON ENTERS U.S. BUT LAW BARS WIFE

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Dec. 19. — (Associated Press).—One of the sad consequences of the United States restricted immigration law is the case of Stanley Light, who with his wife and child recently returned from America. Light gave up his job here, sold his home and with his family went to New York to join Mrs. Light's parents. His brother and the latter's family went along.

The brother and his family were admitted, but the immigration officials barred Mrs. Stanley Light as a native of South Africa, the quota for which had been exhausted. Mrs. Light was born at Cape Town of English parents, but has lived in England since she was four years old.

Kellogg's Bran is Guaranteed to give relief BECAUSE IT IS ALL BRAN!

Relief from constipation, whether it be mild or chronic, will follow the regular, every-day eating of Kellogg's Bran. We have thousands of letters from former sufferers who tell us that the natural "bulk-action" of this wonderful cereal product has given relief they have not known for years. We guarantee that Kellogg's Bran will free the system from constipation because it is ALL BRAN—not a composition in which bran is added. If constipation is to be permanently relieved, you must eat ALL BRAN—that's why your physician will recommend Kellogg's for constipation.

Constipation creates toxic conditions which poison the blood and every organ of the body. It slows you down mentally and physically, and creates sick headaches, nausea, bad breath, pimples—finally, in many cases, leading to Bright's disease, diabetes and other dreaded illnesses. You must fight constipation with Kellogg's Bran regularly if you want health!

You'll say Kellogg's Bran is really delicious—it has a nut-like flavor that appeals to the most fastidious appetite. Eat it as a cereal, sprinkled on hot or cold cereals or cooked with hot cereals, allowing two tablespoonfuls of bran for each person. Be certain to eat at least two tablespoonfuls each day; as much with each meal in chronic cases. Kellogg's is delicious made into muffins, macaroons, raisin bread, griddle cakes. Recipes in every package. Kellogg's Bran is served by leading hotels, clubs and restaurants in individual packages. It is sold by all grocers.

CHURCH BAZAAR PRODUCED $150

Women's Auxiliary of Norwood Anglican Church Held Successful Social.

NORWOOD, Dec. 18.—The annual bazaar and tea of the Women's Auxiliary of the Anglican Church was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 15th, and proved a decided success. This sale was one of the daintiest of the season's list. There was a plentiful supply of goods in the different booths all neatly displayed. The candy booth was in charge of Mrs. Harte and Miss Lois Cuffe and ready purchasers were found for the candy, which was done up in very attractive ways. Some was in boxes, some in pretty little containers, while others were fixed to represent bunches of grapes, carrots, tc.

Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. K. G. Thomson and Miss E. Cuff were in charge of a booth where every kind of apron could be procured.

The many useful and beautiful articles in the fancy work and plain sewing booths were the admiration of the ladies whose wants were attended to by Mesdames Fenton and Grover, assisted bw Misses Charlotte Beamish and Leonie Fenton.

The tea tables were well patronized and the ladies were kept busy serving their patrons. There was also a Christmas Tree, where five and ten cent presents could be obtained.

The proceeds amounted to about $180.00.

Mrs. Robinson, who has for a number of years lived on the boundary near the "Old Maids' Corner," suffered a stroke last week and was removed to the Nicholls Hospital, Peterboro.

Mrs. Robinson had been living alone since the death of her husband a few years ago and was found by one of her neighbors after she had been stricken.

Dwelling Burned

The dwelling house of Mrs. Jno. Wildman on her farm about two miles east of the village was burned on Monday morning while they were out at the barn milking.

Mr. and Mrs. Leach have a host of friends, who will wish for them a happy and prosperous married life.

STRANDED RUSSIANS WANT TO ENTER U.S.

CHERBOURG, France Dec. 19. —A numerous body of Russian refugees headed for the United States, has come as far as this French seaport only to find the emigration quota full, and no immediate hope of entering the land of promise.

The band, upon leaving Russia, went to Poland and stayed several months until compelled by the authorities to move on. Constantinople was the next stopping place, but there also they were regarded as undesirables, and sent away. Now, to the number of 200, they have reached Cherbourg and some of them are planning to try to hold until next June, when new quotas will be operative. In the meantime they are receiving charity.

Living Dead Man Plays Lead in Weird Martial Tangle in Which Are Nights of Ghoulish Horror

Placed Body of His Friend in Blazing House to Simulate Evidence of His Own Death--Ran Away With Pretty Secretary.

INNOCENT VICTIMS

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Dec. 19.—Edward J. Sailstad has come back from the grave to add still further and brand new complexities to the age-old "eternal triangle."

No novelist ever unraveled a more weird plot than the one wherein Sailstad, debonair young inventor and former resident of a phonograph manufacturing concern here, has played the "lead."

Bit by bit, it slowly has been unfolding itself since that night three and a half years ago when a man's charred bones were found in the ruins of Sailstad's summer cottage on Nebagamon Lake.

The climax was reached with the arrests at Napa, Calif., of Sailstad and his confidante, pretty Dorothy Anderson, once his secretary, with whom he fled from the specters of that night of ghoulish horror.

Innocent Victims

Other characters in this strange drama are Sailstad's former wife, who, believing him dead, has married again, and her present husband, Ross R. Richardson.

They are the innocent victims. Sailstad's unexpected "resurrection" has broken up their home.

The law decrees them no longer man and wife. So Mrs. Richards, or Mrs. Sailstad, is looking to the courts for a divorce from Sailstad to enable her to resume her wedded bliss with Husband No. 2.

Shortly before dawn on the morning of Aug. 26, 1920, neighbors discovered Sailstad's cottage in flames.

At first no doubt existed but the man who had "perished" was Sailstad.

Balk Insurance Payments

Yet little by little, contrary theories came to light. Insurance companies held up payment of policies totaling $62,000 made out to Mrs. Sailstad.

A federal court jury returned a verdict in Mrs. Sailstad's favor. The insurance folks, however, carried it to a higher court. Only a partial settlement has been reached.

Nearly a year and a half after her husband's "death," the "widow" married again.

Detectives, dissatisfied with evidences of the "death," continued their investigations. Recently they reported having definitely established that the body discovered in the burned cottage was not Sailstad's.

Instead, it was that of his friend, Allen McPhee, who had died just a few months before, they said.

Sailstad, according to confessions authorities both here and in California say he has made, admits stealing the corpse from its grave and "planting" it in the blazing pyre to simulate evidence of his own death.

Impending financial ruin and infatuation for Miss Anderson, who before she became his stenographer had been an actress in Chicago, prompted his act, he declares.

Immediately after the fire, Sailstad and the girl took flight. First, they went to Duluth. Then to St. Louis, Kansas City and Dallas, Tex.

Like Roving Gypsies

Since then they have roamed practically all over the country, with the restlessness of escaped criminals.

"It was hell," says Sailstad. "I was afraid to read the papers—afraid I would go crazy unless I tried to forget.

"It seemed like everyone was watching us. We thought every stranger carried a warrant.

"There was that constant dread of arrest. We wanted to be on the go—just anywhere."

In Business

Their infatuation grew, they lived solely for each other. The girl learned the business at which Sailstad made his living—repairing typewriters and sewing machines. They were together constantly.

"Crooked, narrow little streets appealed to me," continues Sailstad. "Perhaps it was because I felt safer in such a place that I like San Antonio best.

"I opened a typewriter shop there. Business was good. We were happy.

"Then a storm came and wiped out the business. It seemed like the hand of providence warning us to move on.

"We went to Mobile, Ala. Later, there were several excursions into Mexico. At last, we reached southern California."

Sailstad became fatalistic. He felt his apprehension would be just a matter of time. Sometimes, he saw it as a positive relief.

One night he had a terrible dream. The next day they were arrested. Someone had recognized them. They were traced by their roadster.

Now the suspense is over. Sailstad and Dorothy are glad.

They face trial on arson charges. But still they see happiness ahead. Some day they hope to begin life anew, as man and wife.

BACK FROM DEAD. RAN AWAY WITH HIM.

SAFE INVESTMENT

It is a peculiarity about readers of that wonderful farm and family journal, The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, that they do not look upon the $2.00 subscription as an expense, but as a safe investment which yields them huge dividends each year. They will tell you, and we do not doubt it, that each issue contains money-saving and money-making ideas which would pay the subscription price over and over. Considering the value and the remarkable qualities of that great national journal, it should be a difficult matter to find a single home where it is not known and read regularly.

And now, heaped upon the phenomenal value already contained in the journal itself, the publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star are giving free to each new subscriber who remits in time, and to present subscribers who renew their subscription for another year, a most beautiful picture entitled, "The Wonderful Heroine." The reproduction of the orginal masterpiece in colors has been done to perfection. In size the picture is 18 x 24 inches, on rich, heavy paper.

The life story of the Wonderful Heroine has been printed in booklet form and a copy can be obtained cost free by any of our readers who send a postal card to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal.

HOW FAKE OIL MEN SWINDLED

Don't Class Him With Promoters Who Are Honest in Their Intentions.

WITHIN THE LAW.

FT. WORTH, Tex., Dec. 19.—Within the law!

That typifies the attitude striving effort and blunted psychology of the crooked oil promoter.

He is to be enterly differentiated from the legitimate non-bellowing operator who never advertises in pages of lurid promises.

Nor is he to be classed along with that group of promoters who are honest in their intentions.

The crooked promoter has no dealing with the latter two. He hates them for being honest.

And they in turn naturally regard him with intensified loathing for dishonoring their business.

First and foremost, the crooked promoter who greatly outnumbered his honest competitors in the big Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma fields, was out for himself.

Knew No Geology

In a majority of cases, as substantiated by government investigation, when he first became a promoter he knew nothing about oil whatsoever nor the manner and means by which it is obtained.

In other words, he was a greenhorn—an inexperienced yokel—who foisted himself off upon the public by subsidized news accounts in promoter-owned publications, as a bona fide oil expert.

His primary and sole interest was to sell stock—and do nothing else but sell stock—in a company of his own creation with never the thought of actually producing oil.

By hook and crook, lying statements and overdrawn promises the crooked promoter advertised and circularized his "sucker lists" stating any and all manner of roseate inducements to part the prospect from his investment contribution.

Doesn't Want Oil

Bearing in mind, all the while, that the crooked promoter is not out to get oil at all you next find him out on undeveloped, unproven territory—or "wild cat" acreage, as it is called.

Perhaps from his stock sale campaign he has sold $1,000,000 worth of shares, certificates, titles or whatever else he calls them.

He wants to keep within the law. And at the same time he wants to stay crooked.

Hence you find him sinking a well on the "wild cat" land, down to whatever depth he vaguely promised he would sink it.

But having made virtually certain before operations were begun that the "hole" would come in dry," he pays the driller a few thousand dollars for his work and then uses the balance of the million for his own purposes.

Such tactics were the rule and not the exception during the peak of the oil boom days.

They were permitted under the state law of Texas where no blue sky statute was in effect at the time.

Use Legal Kinks

Promoters operated under what was known as a declaration of trust.

This legal instrument gave them absolute power over the money of their investors. They could drill for oil under its terms, or go hunting for elephants if they so choose, under its broad and drastic powers.

Any show the crooked promoter made of trying to produce oil was one of pretense entirely.

Drilling a well on land which he knew was non-oil-bearing constituted in his mind discharge of obligation to his stockholders. He kidded himself into believing that he was playing a game, and that if the public was big enough fool to play with him, it would continue to be stung.

Destroy Oil Wells

If he drilled wells, as he said he would, when advertising, the government couldn't read his mind and see that he planned his wells on territory which he knew beforehand would come in dry.

Instances are on record in cases still to be investigated where wells, which actually did start to produce, were squelched by being pushed down to salt water levels.

Had they "nursed" them along, as the saying down here goes in the oil fields, they might have become paying propositions.

Fake promoters promised that dividends in their companies ranging upward from 100 per cent.

Paying "Dividends"

Hence their reason for snuffing out small wells that accidentally were struck.

Profits received from such a well when distributed over a list of 5000 "suchers" might probably be a few cents each.

That would quickly knock out the promoter's chances. But sometimes he did pay big dividends, for the purpose of baiting on additional victims.

Money for the dividends distributed by crooked promoters was not received from oil sale profits, but from sources as faked as the promoter himself.

Yes, he promised rivers of oil. But instead came rivers of tears and tea-cups of oil.

METHODS USED

Stockholders' Protective Association

Without any legal authority, the "association" would attack some probably legitimate oil concern. It would send notice to the firm's investors that the concern was unsound. For a fee of $5 or more, the "association" formed to protect stockholders would look after the investors' interests.

Fearful of loss, 90 per cent of the investors came through with the fee. The "association" would then wait about a year and send out a stereotyped report on its findings.

Usually, this report contained nothing of value, and at most, cost the "association" two cents for mailing. Big margins were thus made.

Further trickeries practiced by fake oil stock promoters and brokers are explained in Gibbons' next article.

COUNCIL IS ADAMANT REGARDING SALARIES OF THE CITY POLICE

Will Not Pay Any Salaries Until Judgment is Handed Down—Alderman Phelan Would Reduce the Force—Mayor Taylor Calls For Its Reorganization.

SPECIAL MEETING

That the City Council will advance funds for the payment of the police force only after a dicision has been handed down by the Court of Appeal, was the decision reached at a special meeting last night.

The meeting was further featured by a declaration from Mayor W. H. Taylor that he feels the police department should be reorganized and a statement from Alderman Hazel Phelan that if the City succeeds in its present suit and he is returned to the Council next year he will make it his duty to advocate a material reduction of the police force. The Manufacturers' Association was criticized by some Aldermen for its stand in regard to the police salaries, and Alderman Crowe suggested a referendum on public opinion regarding the Council's stand in reference to the police commission.

There were present Mayor W. H. Taylor; Aldermen Robert Morrison N. Phelan; Joseph Crowe; E. M. Turner; W. Stocker; M. McIntyre; W. T. Holloway; J. W. Meyers; J. O. Fife and M. J. Maher City Solicitor Joseph Wearing, G. N. Gordon K.C., M.P., and F. Adams, city treasurer were present in an advisory capacity.

"I feel the police department should be reorganized and reformed and there will be a greater degree of efficiency in it and a greater degree of confidence by the public in the department," declared Mayor Taylor in announcing the object of the meeting. The lead, however, was not followed up, and nothing further was said throughout the meeting as to reorganizing the force.

Mr. Gordon remarked that there was apparently a concurrent movement of 14 men to sue the city and force it into a difficult situation immediately on Judge Ward giving his decision. Nevertheless, he thought, the members of the police force are giving daily service to the city and if the Police Commisston have retained more men than necessary, the men are not responsible for that. He therefor, suggested that the city council consider the paying of those men out of funds levied and not expended. "All this campaign of stampeding the city council and people" he said, "was simply a campaign promulgated by so-called friends of the police, and the police themselves were innocent of it. They were ill advised in going into the action when they might very well have awaited the issue of the Newhall case. If there is any fault it is not the fault of these men, but of the Board of Police Commissioners who kept the men on the force. There is no doubt the Commissioners feel they have a responsibility resting on them, but their ideas as to the number required on the force differ from the majority of the council."

Mr. Wearing concurred in Mr. Gordon's summing up of the case. He advocated paying the men the money accrued to them since they sued, but not the amount on which they entered action.

Alderman McIntyre "Why not let the whole thing stand till we get the decision?"

Mr. Wearing: "There is a lot of feeling in the city that it is not the mens fault. I think they were ill-advised. I feel there was an attempt to get the city by the scruff of the neck and make it pay."

Mr. Wearing said the chief of police also might be paid the money accrued to him since he entered action.

Alderman Crowe asked whether he was to understand that the police men had sued the city, and Mr. Wearing recapitulated the events of the last ten days since action was entered by the individual policemen.

Should Be Generous

Alderman Holloway said if the opinion of the public was followed the Council would pay the men. "I think it would be foolish to consider the chief's salary in any way because that was the grounds of the action, but I think we should be generous enough to pay the staff who are not responsible for the position they are in."

Alderman Stocker declared against paying the force at present. "I say 'sit tight.'"

Alderman Crowe: "It looks as if pressure is being brought to bear from the Manufacturers' Association in passing resolutions as to what they would do if they were the city council. I don't feel like taking that."

"They didn't pay the men this morning, although it was reported that was their intention."

Alderman Crowe: "They are making it appear we were not capable. I think we can do our duty just as well as they can. We can attend to this business ourselves."

Alderman Turner said he had not changed his conviction that the men should be paid, and introduced a resolution to that effect. It was rejected in the form in which Alderman Turner presented it, but was later adopted with modifications.

Alderman Stocker countered with a motion for no action.

Alderman Phelan said he had every sympathy with the individual men, but in view of the fact that the council had held back the money so long he thought it should be held until a judgment is given by the court of appeal.

Alderman Crowe suggested that the resolution be amended so as to require payment after judgment is received.

Alderman Maher proposed that the men be asked to withdraw their suit against the city and assign their pay to the Mayor and council who would make arrangements for an overdraft pending the decision. He would let the chief's case stand.

Alderman Meyers: I am a member of the Manufacturers' Association and attended their meeting on Saturday. They had a resolution as much as saying the situation was the fault of the city council, and I objected to it. They changed it to read that it was owing to the controversy."

Alderman Maher said the resolution should be so worded as to protect the dignity of the council.

Alderman Phelan: "I was up to Toronto and heard the appeal, and I can practically assure the Council that we are going to win the case. Three judges spoke very favorably towards the city and finally the fourth acquiesced. That was the concensus of opinion of all the lawyers there."

Remarking that his attitude has been that if the council own the case it would pay the policemen as a moral obligation, Alderman Phelan said he did not think they should be paid until the matter is decided. If elected next year I will endeavour to see that the force be reduced materially, as I think there is no doubt that there are too many policemen for a city this size."

Alderman Crowe thought too much faith should not be put in the city having won its case until the decision is handed down.

Alderman Turner's motion, seconded by Alderman Morrison, was carried. It read: "That when a decision is given by the Court of Appeal in the case of Newhall versus Peterboro the city treasurer be instructed to pay the members of the police force, except the chief constable, their salaries from December 1 up to the end of the year in accordance with the amount of their salaries as framed by the Board of Commissioners of Police, and to take the amount required for this purpose from the unappropriated funds and appropriations that have not been fully used, as the policemen have given their services to the city and its council desires to ensure proper protection for the citizens, without prejudice to any suits in the courts."

By-law for Sewers

A bye-law for the construction of sewers on Monaghan road and Princess street receive its three readings and was passed.

Wanted Referendum

Alderman Crowe said there are no by-laws on the list for the voters on January 1 and suggested it would be a good idea to take a plebiscite as to whether the people are satisfied with the way the city council has handled the police situation. This could be done at very little, if any, cost.

Alderman Phelan: "I think that would be a good idea. It would not have any legal effect, but it would show the feeling of the people."

Mr. Armstrong: "It requires a by-law to submit a question."

Mayor Taylor: "We can't have that put through now."

This being the last meeting of the present council His Worship wished the members of the council a happy Christmas. He hoped all the Aldermen whose terms expire would return next year.

GERMANS PROVIDE POOR IMMIGRANTS

Adopted Countries Do Not Agree With Persons From the Fatherland — Many Complaints.

LEIPZIG, Dec. 10 (Associated Press).—Germany's enforced emigration apparently results in many persons getting into lands where they are not contented. German papers abound in letters from emigrants who are dissatisfied with their new homes and warn their fellowcountrymen to exercise greater care in choosing a land for adoption.

Most of the complaints are clearly from men of the middle-class who have had experience as clerks, salesmen, teachers and accountants. Artisans and farm workers are not numerous among the grumblers.

In fact, most of the letters urge that only artisans and men experienced as farmers try their hand in South America, Canada and the United States, and Germans are warned to select a land where they will not have to compete with negro labor and other workers whose living standards are below those of Germans.

Brazil is commended by many correspondents to the German press as a place where emigrants can soon earn enough on coffee plantations to buy land of their own. Argentina is less favorably mentioned because of the keen competition of the Italian farm workers who are satisfied with a lower wage than a German can live on in the style he desires.

One correspondent writing from Mexico warns his countrymen not to be fooled by rosy pictures of that country. An artisan writing from Chile says it is hard for German mechanics to compete in that country with artisans from Spain, Portugal, Italy, Dalmatia and Syria who are contented with very low wages.

But these communications from disillusioned emigrants who clearly expected to find sudden wealth and an easy lot beyond the sea do not discourage thousands of others in Germany from making preparations to leave the fatherland. They will go nearly anywhere. Half the population in Germany wants to go to the United States. It stands to them as symbolical of the dollar. But the fares Americaward are beyond their reach.

LIZARD SKIN.

Smart pumps of patent leather or sueds are trimmed with lizard skin.

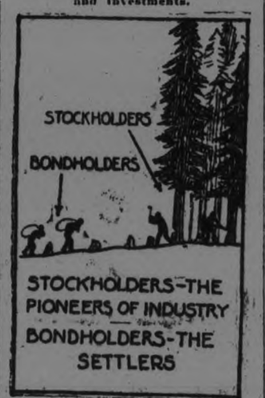
MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



High income taxes are driving rich men out of stocks into tax exempt-bonds. We may become a nation of bondholders. What does this mean to the average man—

Stockholders are the pioneers of industry, while the bondholders are the settlers. Stockholders are builders. They are partners in large scale productions, which has resulted in reduced costs of living.

Bondholders buy a mortgage on property, which stockholders have already built, thus providing the stockholders with more capital to go ahead again. If they fail, the bondholders foreclose and take over the property of the stockholders.

Since there is more risk in holding stock, only the man with a surplus can afford to be a stockholder. The rich man is the logical one to take that risk, yet he is not likely to, when he has to pay 50 per cent of his profits in taxes.

Consequently, high surtaxes are tending to drive rich men's money into tax exempt bonds, where it pays no income tax. Unless the men with small incomes will risk their savings in pioneering, there is likely to be but little progress, and the cost of living will rise.

The income which a man believes his dependents need should be the basis to determine the amount of life insurance he should carry.

One of the most common questions is "How much life insurance should I carry?"

The answer is simple. How much income do your dependents need?

Naturally the needs of one family are not the same as another. It all depends on the scale of living. Consequently, in taking out life insurance a man should figure on having enough to furnish an income to his dependents which would maintain them at about the same scale of living as that to which they are accustomed.

If a man thinks his family needs an income of $100 a month, he should be carrying about $20,000 in life insurance, because $20,000 invested at 6 per cent will net $100 a month.

Probably $20,000 looks like a lot of money, but it is not the principal that counts, it is the income.

RADIO NEWS

The manner in which your set is wired has a great deal to do with its success or failure. A few minutes of extra time spent on making good connections in the wiring will pay dividends later on in the satisfaction you will get from your radio set.

The reason for this is due to the fact that the amount of current picked up by the receiving antennea is so small that it can be measured only by delicate instruments. The resistance of the receiving antennea and the wiring of the set must therefore be as low as possible or the feeble current which is received will be cut down and the volume of sound reduced a great deal.

Connections made by wrapping one wire around another, or securing a wire around a binding post are all right for experimental purposes. The corrosive action of the air upon the wire will in time form a film of oxide on the surface of the wire which will greatly increase the resistence of the connection, and for this reason you should solder all connections on the set if they are to be permanent. Soldering makes a mechanical protection that will prevent this action.

Solder does not make as good an electrical conductor as the wire itself does and for that reason you should plan out the wiring of the set so that a long single wire can take the place of a number of short wires soldered together. In every hookup there are a number of connections that are common and can be connected with a single wire. For example the wire can be run from the ground binding post to the binding post on the grid variometer, through that to the binding post on the filament rheostat and to the negative B and positive A binding posts. In this way you can sometimes run halfway around the set with one wire, with good contact on all the instruments and no soldered connections. This will often decrease the resistance of your set very materially.

LAW ATTRACTS YALE GRADS

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Law leads all other professions and lines of endeavor with Yale alumni. Eighteen per cent of Old Eli's grads are engaged in its practice. And next to it comes banking, accounting and insurance. The university is represented today by 21,778 living graduates and 8177 non-graduates, the 1923 alumni directory reveals. These are scattered throughout the world.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: The terrible lashing which the ministry is receiving at the hands of believers is one of the most extraordinary features of the age. First, the evangelical ministry went wrong and then their people. They have between them got things turned upside down all right but a more foolish, and pitiful, sight a true humble-minded Christian could not be invited to weep over. Modern infidelity otherwise known as Higher Criticism amongst ministers, and as a disgust with nature and God's plan of creation amongst their followers, has broken out, as they say of the bubonic plague, in two spots. First, the ministry, sworn to protect the Bible and the faith of the people, have declared that a large part of the Bible is just bunk, and that Christ was just a man like the ministers themselves (God help Him!) Then their people thoroughly satisfied with themselves and disgusted with God's plan, decided that everything was wrong but themselves, and that God's plan of allowing people to misuse His gifts, and then punishing them for it, was silly. "The objects that are misused should themselves be removed, and we call upon God to stop making alcohol. Some do."

This idea of substituting the removal of the article instead of the punishment for misusing it was introduced by women when they got the franchise, and was borrowed by them from the nursery. When a child is behaving badly we snatch away the prize—balls or the rattle—and then give it a spanking as well. That's Prohibition. You take away one of God's gifts to man, and then run the people in gaol whether they well deserve it or not. That's the nursery.

So that all things considered it is doubtful if is doubtful if the ministry is any worse than their people. But between the two religion is wrecked and faith in a future life abolished. Now watch what will come of it. Since the weak go to the wall when the row begins, and since these ministers and their followers are the weakest things on earth, just watch them going—kerplunk! — up against the wall. The effects will be so far reaching that it will be just as if Hell itself was let loose. Don't you hear them smashing things? Get ready, O, my sisters, to howl and cry with fear. Get down on your knees and beg forgiveness of that God whom you have insulted. Scream with terror. Moan and cry with fear, for I can tell you in the words of your friend, the infidel Bob Ingersoll, that since you would not prize uprightness, and the fear of God, ye will reap your reward from him who like yourself, despises God.

HE'S 100, SO HE RETIRES

HULL, Eng.—Isaac Posthill, 100 years old, has just retired after a century's service as an agent for a firm of drapers here. He daily walked seven or eight miles in making his rounds. Last July he was knocked down by a tram car. A cut in his head was stitched and he went back to work the following day.

"Hunger Hurts"

(By CARL D. GROAT)

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (United Press).—"Hunger hurts."

That slogan in German—"Hunger tyt weh"—has been passed along to the green police of Berlin to guide their actions with food rioters. And, they bear in mind when they have to deal with ragged devils, whose stomachs gnaw with emptiness.

That's why the casualty lists generally run, "two wounded," or "one dead and a few wounded," instead as one might suppose, "scores dead and hundreds wounded."

The green policeman is, for the most part, a patient soul and rather obliging. Now and again his temper gets the better of him when he gets too many jibes.

He will use his rifle or his bayonet when he gets too hard-pressed, but for the most part he shows an appreciation of the situation of the hunger rioters. He is cold and firm in a pinch, but he hears too much from shivering, hungry housewives, from unemployed men and boys, not to realize that most of the food riots are the urgings of an empty stomach and an empty purse rather than "communistic activities."

The police form human chains as a rule, pushing the crowds back slowly but surely. Now and again the crowds get too threatening.

Then there is the sharp call, "Strasse frei"—clear the street. It generally acts like magic, especially when along with the green policeman rigs his rifle for action or draws his bayonet for use as a dagger. The green policeman's orders are to fire first into the air, if it is necessary to resort to shooting.

If that fails to disperse the crowds he can then cut loose.

But, all in all, the green policeman is a decent fellow.

And, his instructions warn that "Hunger tut weh."

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

HEMORRHOIDS

Stays, corsets or any clothing which by compression tends to draw, push downward or displace the organs of the abdomen, aids in producing conditions favorable to hemorrhoids. This may be avoided by wearing garments suspended from the shoulders. It leaves the waistline largely unconfined and the body free, as nature intended. Muscles or organs unconfined or released from compression will soon reassert themselves and natural health will result.

A large percentage of women stand in an incorrect posture. If mothers were properly educated in such matters, they could aid their children in assuming a correct posture, bringing to development a normal chest, natural waistline and strong, self-sustaining abdominal muscles.

This would prevent to a great extent the unnatural position of such organs as the stomach, intestines, kidneys and liver, which for time untold have been deranged and pushed out of true position by waistline pressure. In fact, the condition in which many women in middle life find themselves, on account of this (enteroptosis), brings about misplacement of the abdominal organs and causes headache, dizziness, backache, biliousness, constipation and irregularity in defacation, often the primary cause of piles.

Another important preventive is to change your diet occasionally, to get the necessary food elements that will insure a good blending of fine and coarse foods. Don't eat the same kind of food every morning for breakfast.

One of the best prevention habits, if you are subject to attacks of piles and varicose hemorrhoidal veins, is careful toilet of the perineal region. Cleanliness will accomplish wonders.

Don't eat everything you can think of and expect your digestive tract to acquiesce cheerfully. Taking frequent physics to aid in preventing piles is bad practice. Few realize that the digestive apparatus is under a sensitive nervous control and does not tolerate unphysiologic treatment.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

PORK

Pork, if well cooked and carefully combined with other foods, is not as indigestible as we ordinarily believe.

Plan the meals thoughtfully when pork is the meat and enjoy the deliciousness of this much maligned meat during the winter months.

Irish or sweet potatoes, cabbage or cauliflower, oyster plant, turnips or stewed tomatoes. The Irish potatoes should be mashed, plain boiled or baked or roasted with the roast. The sweet potatoes should be baked or candied.

Apple sauce is the time-honored accompaniment for roast port and is most acceptable with pork in any form. Apples can be used in the salad if sauce does not accompany the meat.

The salads should be simple but piquant. Pork is a fat meat, even the lean of it, and a tart touch is needed. Shredded cabbage, apple-celery-nut salad with a light dressing, grapefruit with a plain oil dressing, or a tomato jelly combine well. The salad of course depends on the vegetable chosen. For instance, a tomato jelly should not be used with stewed tomatoes, nor shredded cabbage with cooked cabbage or cauliflower.

The dessert should be light if the pork was in the form of a roast, but could be rather substantial if pork chops were the meat. Steamed fruit puddings, fruit whips or gelatin or a fruit pie with one crust offer a good choice.

This menu may suggest other combinations:

Tomato Bouillon
Stuffed Pork Chops
Candied Sweet Potatoes
Apple Sauce
Creamed Cauliflower
Combination Salad
Prune Whip Tea

The creamed cauliflower brings milk into the menu.

The salad is interesting and tart enough for the pork without hurting the cream sauce.

The dessert, being made with white of egg, adds the needed protein to a menu lacking in it.

The soup and tea furnish the necessary dissolvent.

Stuffed Pork Chops

Two cups stale coarse bread crumbs ½ cup shelled chestnuts, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, warm water to make moist.

Order chops cut at least one inch thick. Allow one for each person ot be served.

Chop nuts coarsely and mix with bread crumbs, salt and pepper. Add water and mix with a fork. Cut a pocket in each chop, from the outer edge into the bone. Fill with dressing and pin the edges together with toothpicks. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Put in roaster and bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

Combination Salad

One large head of lettuce or two small heads, 1 green pepper, 2 stalk celery, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons oil, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice or 2 tablespoons vinegar.

Cut lettuce in halves or quarters. Remove seeds and white fiber from pepper and mince. Mince celery. Mix salt and pepper and slowly add the oil, stirring with a fork. Add vinegar and lemon juice slowly and beat until the mixture is thick. The ingredients and bowl must be very cold. When ready to serve add the minced pepper and celery and pour over the sections of lettuce. Serve at once. The lettuce should be carefully drained after washing and crisping. Any water clinging to the eaves will spoil the dressing.

A TIRED PERSON'S RIDDLE

Four legs and one foot.

"Sleepy-head ought to guess today's riddle!" said the Riddle Lady with a smile, "or any of the tired people."

Nick and Nancy laughed. "It must be a very easy riddle if sleepy people can guess it," said Nancy. "Mostly you have to be wide awake, don't you?"

"Yes, indeed you do!" said the Riddle Lady. "The only reason I said that was, not because the riddle is easy, but because it's about a sleepy subject. Listen! This is the riddle:

"Four legs and one foot,
Always stay where I'm put,
Two sides and one head,
Don't like butter but like a spread;
Hate water of all things,
But I am jumping-full of springs;
Alarm-clocks really make me sick,
But I dearly love a tick;
Have no time for oils or plasters,
Yet I roll around on casters;
Not young, I'm old and stayed,
But each day I am newly made;
Never sleep, night or day,
Yet a bed-room's where I stay;
Never ill! It's been my pride!
Yet oft the doctor's at my side;
Never flew in any weather,
For all I bear full many a feather;
Never suffer from the cold,
But put on woolens when I'm told;
If night-mares come, it's been my boast,
I tie them to my hitching post;
If I receive a gift of lace,
I put it in my pillow-case;
I'm soft as down, yet hard as lead,
I am just anybody's ——"

"Bed!" shouted everybody in Riddle Town so loudly that the question-mark chimneys nearly tumbled off the houses.

The Riddle Lady put her hands over her ears, but quickly took them away again, for she had seen some-

Sleepy-Head and Little-Boy-Blue and Hi-Diddle-Dumpling John were sound asleep. Yes, sir! And snoring! There they were, all three of them, curled up on the grass in spite of the fact that "Keep Off" signs were posted everywhere.

At that minute Little-Boy-Blue's mother came hurrying along. "Where's Johnny Blue?" she asked. "He didn't come home from the pasture-lot and I've been worrying."

And then Sleepy-Head's mother came and Mrs. Dumpling came and they all carried their children home.

"Who gets the prize?" asked Nancy after they had gone.

"Everybody!" answered the Riddle Lady. "Because everybody but the sleepy heads guessed. A good-night's sleep. That's the prize. The best in the world!"

IODINE TERMED GOITRE BARRIER

Cleveland Expert Urges Health Body Ask Preventive, Not Surgical Methods.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 19.—Michigan people are spending more money in Cleveland to have goitres cut out than they are paying at home to prevent the disease. That action on the part of Michigan might be excusable were it not for the fact that it now is clearly demonstrated that goitre is almost entirely preventable by the simplest and most inexpensive of public health measures.

That is the charge that a celebrated Ohio physician made against the good sense of the people of Michigan in an address before the third annual conference of health officers and public health nurses here. Dr. O. P. Kimball, whose researches, in association with Dr. David Marine, have set health officials at the job of goitre prevention in every part of the country, told of his surveys in Cleveland, Warren and Akron, O., and of the remarkable results achieved by the administration of small quantities of iodine in the drinking water of school children.

That work has been the inspiration of similar efforts in several of the larger school systems of Michigan. Dr. C. C. Slemons, health officer of Grand Rapids, in the discussion that followed Mr. Kimball's address, told of the administration of iodine to the school children in his city by the use of little chocolate candy tablets containing a minute portion of the drug. Flint, also reported a similar public health activity. The cost of the little tablets was reported at about 14 cents a pupil every year.

No Bad Results

Observation upon more than a quarter of a million cases, Mr. Kimball said, proved that the treatment was wholly without bad result and its efficiency in preventing a large percentage of cases of goitre is now estzblished.

Intelligently directed, financially supported public health work can contend effectively with any disease. The reason many diseases still are rampant is that the health promoting agencies have not attacked the problem of their eradication. Dr. W. A. Evans, professor of public health in Northwestern University, gave this encouragement to the Michigan health officials and public health nurses. He showed them by statistics that the span of life during the 50 years since the Michigan Public Health Service was established, has been increased from about 33 years to between 55 and 58 years.

In one respect, however, he said, little progress had been made. The so-called winter diseases, the diseases of the respiratory organs, still take heavy toll of life. Pneumonia still is as deadly as it was 50 years ago, he said. Health officials are doing nothing to control pneumonia, and in many sections it is causing more deaths than any other disease.

Must Face Tasks

Mr. Evans told some of the observations of health authorities in Chicago. In some population groups, he said, pneumonia caused 15 times as many fatalities as occurred in othe groups of like size from the same cause. This was apparently because of racial differences and of the differing modes and environments of life.

In Chicago the vicinity of the stockyards has the highest death rate from pneumonia. Bad housing and congestion of population appeared to be the factors effecting this, the doctor said. In the newer sections around the outside of the city and in the districts where the houses were further apart and consequently enjoy better conditions of light and air, pneumonia fatalities are fewer.

"But public health efforts have not controlled pneumonia because public health officials have not set themselves to the task," says Mr. Evans. "We are better equipped to solve this problem now than we were when we undertook to stamp out tuberculosis."

A FORGOTTEN MASTERPIECE

Antwerp.—An old picture entitled, "Jesus Baptized in the River Jordan," was sold here the other day. A carpenter bought it for only a few francs. Along happened an art critic. He discovered it came from the brush of Rembrandt in 1640. He pronounced it worth at least 2,000,000 francs. But the carpenter refuses to listen to any of the numerous offers he has received.

CONJURING FOR CHRISTMAS

No member of a Christmas party is so welcome as the guest who has the ability to perform a little sleight-of-hand and there a re a number of simple feats of conjuring well within the powers of the youngest amateur. The amateur conjuror should, however, bear in mind that it is not advisable to show the same trick twice to the same audience because ther is a possibility that the secret may be discovered if it is shown a second time. The performer should try over his tricks in private before presenting them as a little practice will ensure a neat performance.

Mysterious Dessert

The conjuror picks up an apple, places it on an inverted glass and covers it with a paper cone. When he lifts the core, the apple has changed to a reel of cotton and the paper is shown to be empty. This trick should be performed while seated at the table. The apple is prepared beforehand by cutting a piece out of the end opposite the stalk; the cavity so formed should be large enough to conceal a reel of cotton. This prepared apple with the reel inside, can be placed among other fruit on a dish. The conjuror picks up the apple taking care not to expose the hole and places upon an inverted glass so that it may be clearly seen and with the concealed reel uppermost. The cone is made from fairly stiff paper and placed over the apple. When the cone is lifted the sides are slightly pinched and the apple is brought away inside the cone leaving the reel of cotton in view. While attention is drawn to the reel the conjuror allows the apple to slide out of the paper into his lap, and immediately opens the cone to show that the apple has disappeared. A large walnut may be substituted for the reel of cotton if desired.

An Envelope Trick

A large envelope is shown empty, sealed, and marked by a member of the audience so that the conjuror cannot change it secretly. Several slips of paper are then shown and the performer asks his audience one at a time to name their favorite magazine. He writes the names on the slips of paper, folds the slips and drops them into a hat. A lady is asked to take one of the slips out of the hat and to read out the name on it.

The conjuror then opens the empty envelope and takes from it the front cover of the chosen magazine.

As a matter of fact, although the envelope was shown empty at the beginning of the trick, the cover of the magazine was there all the time. The envelope is prepared as follows: Take two foolscap envelopes exactly alike and from one cut the address side with the flap. Slip this into the other envelope, thus making a double front. Tear the cover off any magazine, fold it and insert it between the two envelope fronts, then stick the two flaps together by moistening the gums of the flap on the real envelope and sticking it to the other flap. The envelope can be shown at quite close quarters and will appear empty; it is sealed in the usual manner and when the conjuror opens it he simply tears off the end and takes out the magazine cover. The envelope should be crumpled up and thrown aside out of reach.

But how does the conjuror know which magazine will be selected? That is very simple. As the conjuror writes down the names called out, he writes the same name on every slip so that the lady who draws is bound to choose the cover in the envelope. If the conjuror is clever he will pretend to be doubtful about the spelling of one of the names and this will remove any suspicion in the audience that he is writing the same name on every slip.

The Match Trick

Ask a friend to stand a match upright on the table cloth without any visible means of support. If he cannot do it ask your friend to shut his eyes while you count five. Then raise the cloth place a small drawing pin on the table head downwards, replace the cloth and stick the match on the pin.

Power of the Press

To place the (Insert name of newspaper) in such a position that you can stand on it, and Smith can stand on it, and yet neither you nor Smith can touch each other. Placed the newspaper beneath a closed door. Then you on one side and Smith on the other, can each stand on it, but neither can touch the other because of the intervening door.

To Makes Smoke Rings

Take a cigar box, knock one end out and stretch tightly over this end a piece of white paper. In the opposite end bore a round hole about half inch diameter. Then fill the box with smoke by burning brown paper in the front of the hole which has been bored. Now hold the cigar box in a horizontal position and tap the paper-covered end gently. Smoke rings will issue from the hole in great numbers.

Clever Thought Reading

This trick is certain to produce a great deal of amusement if well worked. Commence by offering to read the thoughts of any one present. Having decided on the victim, a lady for choice, take a sheet of paper and tear it into small pieces and hand one of the pieces to everyone in turn leaving the lady whose thoughts are to be read until the last. She naturally holds out her hand when you come to her. Offer her a piece of paper and then withdraw it saying: "You thought I was going to give you a piece but I wasn't." Thus will you have read her thoughts!

Have Them on a String

Announce that you can tie a man up with two pieces of string each one a foot long in such a way that he cannot get free even with the use of a knife or a pair of scissors. To prove your ability to do this you invite your victim to kneel down, and while he is in that position you tie his right wrist to his right foot and his left wrist to his left foot. You can then put a pair of scissors in front of him and ask him to cut himself free. He cannot move either hands or feet; in fact the only movement he can make is the one that he will make if he tries to get hold of the scissors—he will fall over and in that position be helpless.

End Corns

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. Stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in clear liquid and in thin plasters. The action is the same.

PETERBORO WOMEN TO HAVE A VOTE IN LOCAL MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Nearly Five Thousand Enfranchised Women May March to the Polls If They So Desire—Most of Them Will Likely Stay at Home and Get the Family Dinner.

At the municipal elections this year, nearly five thousand women in Peterboro will have a vote. And that is almost three times as many women as have heretofore had the right to a voice in the election of civic officials. Up to date, some 1300 women of Peterboro, those who were assessed as tenants, owners or for income, had the municipal franchise. This year will see some 3520 added to the list, making a total of approximately 4820 women who may all vote, whether, up to date, all those who had the right to do so, have voted, in municipal matters, is a question. It is said, by advocates of feminine enfranchisement, that the use of the ballot is a sacred duty which should not be overlooked by its possessor. Women have always, more or less, been burdened by that word 'duty.' About the easiest way to get a woman to do anything is to put it up to her as a 'duty,' and she usually succumbs to the fatal fascination of the word.

It is rather difficult to arrive at an idea of the number of men voters in municipal matters, but an approximation of the total reveals the fact that the women will register just about forty per cent. of public opinion this year, when the votes of wives of tenants and owners have been added to the list. In other words, they have nearly one-half of the say in matters of civic government and administration.

It is rather interesting to read some of the arguments pro and con that were advanced by the advocates and contestants of the franchise for women in the olden days. An atmosphere of blue ruin and moral degradation impregnated the works of those who vowed that giving the vote to women would result in a race of creatures springing up similar to the Amazons who conquered their male companions and ruled by right of might in a certain mythical period of the world's history. On the other hand those who favored the vote for women looked forward to a Golden Age, an era when all crime and disorder would be banished, when politicians would no more flourish in dark and devious ways, and when everything would run smoothly and above board. Vice, drink, lawlessness, nastiness of every sort would disappear from the face of the earth under the benign influence of the woman, wielding the vote.

Neither of the two disputants has proved to be right. There are those who say that the world is better, others who claim it is gradually going to the dogs altogether. A gentleman who evidently sat on the fence between the two schools of thought made the assertion at that time that women were like men in their modes of thinking. He said that they rarely saw eye to eye with each other, any more than the masculine sex, and that the old see-saw game would still be kept up by the votes of a certain type of thinker in the women's ranks automatically blotting out the votes of a group of another persuasion. Like the lady who declared that there was no sex in the soul, when breathed into man and woman alike by the Creator, probably the ballot also lacks the element of sex. The personal bias of mind of the one making the cross probably influences the selection, in the case of Darby and Joan alike.

There is a little oddity in the law that is gradually extending the franchise on the distaff side. The law, which the famous Mr. Bumble declared so long ago was "a fool, madam", evidently considers that a married lady possesses more common sense than her unwedded sister.

Although all and sundry ladies may have a say in the matter of who shall govern the country in Federal matters, and in Provincial matters, they exercise the right of choice also, municipal affairs still hedge themselves about with a barrier past which an unmarried lady cannot penetrate, that is, the majority of unmarried ladies. If a woman constitutes the head of the household in the way of being a responsible tenant or owner, or is assessed for income, she has been able to vote for some years past, but the number of these ladies has not been overly large. Now, women whose husbands are owners or tenants may vote, and over thirty-five hundred of them in Peterboro will have their first say in municipal elections this year.

These ladies are making their initial bow to the public in an atmosphere of expense. Their presence in the ranks of the righteous voter entails the necessity of supplying sixteen more polling places than were in use before, with a consequent increase in the cost of polling the municipal vote.

CANADA'S WHALE CATCH

Q.—What was Canada's whale catch in 1922–

A.—Canada's whale catch in 1922 represented a fairly successful season, over 400 having been caught.

THE BATTLE OF HILL 70

Q.—When and where was the battle of Hill 70 fought–

A.—The battle of Hill 70 was fought on August 25, 1917. The hill is a low ridge of slag heaps among the coal mines of Lens near Vimy Ridge. From August 15 to 25, the Canadians fought to wrest the hill, with its maze of trenches and dugouts, from the Hun; "Wild flights of shells passed, and repassed over the ridge, barren and filthy with the relics of death. Then the Canadians came. The ridge seemingly was empty again, for the men who had taken it had sunk down into the deep dugouts, while the o usted foe pitched heavy shells, that came howling across the waste, towards them. And very quiet, under the crescent moon, lay the Canadian dead."

URBAN VERSUS RURAL POPULATION

Q.—What is the urban and rural population in Canada–

A.—Canada's census returns show that the population is divided equally between city dwellers and country dwellers. The total urban population is given as 4,352,773 and the rural population as 4,435,710. In Prince Edward Island the rural popularion is as high as 78 per cent of the whole, and in Saskatchewan 71 per cent. In only two provinces—Ontario and Quebec—is the rural population is smaller than the city population. The total rural population of the three Prairie Provinces is given as 1,252,753 as compared with 849,042 in the census of 1911.

"THE RELATIONS OF THE JESUITS"

Q.—What are the "Relations of the Jesuits–"

A.—The first chapter "Relations of the Jesuits" was written, in 1632, in the shape of a report by Pere Le Jeune, to the Provincial of his order. The forty volumes of the Relations des Jesuites are a mine of graphically told, and carefully accurate, information about the white people, and especially the Indians, in old French Canada.

Madame Zattiany explained in the simplest language she could command the meaning and the function of the ductless glands. The more intelligent among them looked gratified, for the painless achievement of fresh knowledge is a pleasant thing.

Madame Zattiany went on patiently: "These glands in my case had undergone a natural process of exhaustion. In women the slower functioning of the endocrines is coincident with the climacteric, as they have been dependent for stimulation upon certain ovarian cells. The idea involved is that the stimulation of these exhausted cells would cause the other glands to function once more at full strength and a certain rejuvenation ensue as a matter of course; unless, of course, they had withered beyond the power of science. I was a promising subject, for examination proved that my organs were healthy, my arteries soft; and I was not yet sixty. Only experimentation could reveal whether or not there was still any life left in the cells, although I responded favorably to the preliminary tests. The upshot was that I consented to the treatment——"

"Yes? Yes?" Every woman in the room now sat forward, no longer old friends or rivals, affectionate or resentful, nor the victims of convention solidified into sharp black and white by the years. They were composite female.

"It consisted of the concentration of powerful Rontgen—what you call X-Rays—on that portion of the body covering the ovaries——"

"How horrible!" "Did you feel as if you were being electrocuted?" "Are you terribly scarred?"

"Not at all. I felt nothing whatever, and there was nothing to cause scars——"

"But I thought that the X-Rays—"

"Oh, do be quiet, Louisa," exclaimed Mrs. Tracy impatiently. "Please go on, Countess Zattiany."

"As I said, the application was painless, and if no benefit results, neither will any harm be done when the Rays are administered by a conscientious expert. My final consent, as I told you, was due to the desire to regain my old will power and vitality. I was extremely skeptical about any effect on my personal appearance. During the first month I felt so heavy and dull that, in spite of assurances that these were favorable symptoms, I was secretly convinced that I had forfeited what little mental health I had retained; but was consoled by the fact that I slept all night and a part of the day; had suffered from insomnia since my duties at the hospital had ended——"

"But surely you must have been nervous and terrified?" All of these women had seen and suffered illness, but all from time-honored visitations, even if under new and technical names, and they had suffered in common with millions of others, which, if it offended their sense of exclusiveness, at least held the safeguard of normalcy. They felt a chill of terror, in some cases of revulsion, as Madame Zattiany went on to picture this abnormal renaissance going on in the body unseen and unfelt; in the body of one who had been cast in the common mold, subject to the common fate, and whom they had visioned—when they thought about her at all—as growing old with themselves; as any natural Christian woman would. It was not only mysterious and terrifying but subtly indecent. Mrs. Vane drew back from her eager poise. Almost it seemed to the amused Mrs. Oglethorpe that she withdrew her skirts. Drama was for the stage or the movies; at all events drama in private life, among the elect, was objective, external, and, however offensive, particularly when screamed in the divorce court, it was, at least, like the old diseases, remarkably normal. But an interior drama; not to put too fine a point on it, a drama of one's insides, and especially one that dealt with the raising from the dead of that section which refined women ceased to discuss after they had got rid of it—it was positively ghoulish. Drama of any sort in this respectable old drawing-room, which might have been photographed as the sacrophagus of all the Respectabilities, was extremely offensive. And what a drama! Never had these old walls listened to such a tale. Mrs. Vane and others like her had long since outgrown the prudery of their mothers, who had alluded in the most distant manner to the most decent of their internal organs, and called a leg a limb; but the commonplace was their rock, and they had a sense of sinking foundations.

Madame Zattianty, who knew exactly what was passing in their minds, continued placidly: "Almost suddenly at the end of the fourth or fifth week, it seemed to me that an actual physical weight that had depressed my brain lifted, and I experienced a decided activity of mind and body, foreign to both for many years. Nevertheless, the complete re-energizing of both was very slow, the rejuvenation of appearance slower still. Worn-out cells do not expand rapidly. The mental change was pronounced long before the physical, except that I rarely felt fatigue, although I spent many hours a day at the relief stations."

She paused and let her cool ironic glance wander over the intent faces before her. "Not only," she went on with a slow emphasis, which made them prick up their ears, "was the renewed power manifest in mental activity, in concentration, in memory, but that distaste for new ideas, for reorientation, had entirely disappeared. People growing old are condemned for prejudice, smugness, hostility to progress, to the purposes and enthusiasms of youth; but this attitude is due to aging glands alone, all things being equal. They can not dig up the sunken tracks from the ruts in their brain and lay them elsewhere; and they instinctively protect themselves by an affection of calm and scornful superiority, of righteous conservatism, which deceives themselves; much as I had assumed—and learned to feel—an attitude of profound indifference to my vanished youth, and refused to attempt any transparent disguise with cosmetics."

Intentness relaxed once more. Twelve pairs of eyes expressed at least half as many sentiments. Mrs. Vane gazed at Mary Ogden, whose insolence she had never forgotten, with indignant hostility; Mrs. Poole, who always dressed as if she had a tumor, but whose remnant of a once lovely complexion indicated perfect health, maintained her slight tolerant smile; its effect somewhat abridged by the fact that the small turban of bright blue feathers topping her large face had slipped to one side. Mrs. Goodrich looked startled and gazed deprecatingly at her friends. Mrs. Lawrence's eyes snapped, and Mrs. de Lacey looked thoughtful. Only Mrs. Tracy spoke.

"Wonderful! I feel more like Methuselah than ever. But it certainly is a relief to know what is the matter with me. Do go on, Mary—I may call you Mary? I only came out the year you were married—and you cannot imagine what a satisfaction it is to know that I am younger than you—were once. I've never done any of those things one reads about to keep looking young except cold cream my face at night, but I've often felt as if I'd like to"——

"Do stop babbling, Lily Tracy!" exclaimed Mrs. Vane, who, however disgusted, was quite as curious as the others to hear the rest of the tale. And Mrs. Goodrich said softly:

"Yes, go on, Mary darling. I am sure the most thrilling part is yet to come. You see how interested your old friends all are."

Madame Zattiany moved her cool insolent eyes to Mrs. Vane's set visage. "The time came when I knew that youth was returning to my face as well as to the hidden processes of my body; and I can assure you that it excited me far more than the renewed functioning of my brain. The treatment induces flesh, and as I had been excessively thin, my skin, as flesh accumulated, grew taut and lines disappeared. My eyes, which had long been dull, had regained something of their old brilliancy under the renaissance of brain and blood, and that was accentuated. My hair"——

"Do you mean to say that it restores hair to its natural color?" demanded Mrs. Tracy, who had been plucking out bleached hairs for the past year. "That would"——

"It does not. But my hair is the shade that never turns gray; and of course my teeth had always been kept in perfect order. I should never in any circumstances be a fat woman, but the active functioning of the glands gave me just enough flesh to complete the otter renovation. My complexion, after so many years of neglect, naturally needed scientific treatment of another sort, but that was still to be had in Vienna."

"Ah!" The exclamation was sharp. Here, at least, was something they knew all about and systematically discountenanced. "Do you mean that you had your skin ripped off?" asked Mrs. Ruyler.

"Certainly not. The skin was simply softened and reinvigorated by massage and the proper applications."

They were too proud to ask for details, and Mrs. de Lacey, who was stout, glanced triumphantly at Mrs. Ruyler, who was stouter. "You mean, Mary, that one has to be thin for this treatment to be a success?"

"That I cannot say. I really do not know what the treatment would do to a stout woman of middle or old age. The internal change would be the same, but, although additional flesh can be kept down by medicaments and diet, I doubt if there would be a complete restoration of the outlines of face and neck. A woman of sixty, with sagging flesh and distended skin, might once more look forty, if the treatment were successful, but hardly as young as I do. I was particularly fortunate in having withered. Still, I cannot say. As I told you, many women of all ages and sizes took the treatment while I was in Vienna. But they are too scattered for me at least to obtain any data on the results. I knew none of them personally and I was too busy to seek them out and compare notes. . . . But with me"— She leaned back and lit a cigarette, looking over her audience with mischievous eyes. "With me it has been a complete success—mentally, physically"——

"Yes, and how long will it last?" shot out Mrs. Ruyler. She was as strong as a horse and as alert mentally as she had ever been, and her complete indifference to rejuvenation in any of its forms gave her a feeling of superior contempt for all those European women who had swarmed to Vienna like greedy flies at the scent of molasses—no doubt to undergo terrible torments that Mary Zattiany would not admit. But her objective curiosity on the subject of youth was insatiable and she read everything that appeared in the newspapers and magazines about it, not neglecting the advertisements. If she had sent for a facial masseuse she would have felt that she had planted a worm at the root of the family tree, but the subject was unaccountably interesting.

Mary Zattiany, who understood her complex perfectly, shrugged her graceful shoulders. "It is too soon to reply with assurance. The method was only discovered some six years ago. But the eminent biologists who have given profound study to the subject estimate that it will last for ten years at least, when it can be renewed once at all events. Of course the end must come. It was not intended that man should live for ever. And who would wish it?"

"She let her cool ironic glance wander over the intent faces before her."

"Not I certainly," said Mrs. Ruyler sententiously. "Well, I must admit it has been a complete success in your case. That is not sayin I approve of what you have done. You know how we have always regarded such things. If you had lived your life in New York instead of in Europe—notoriously loose in such matters—I feel convinced that you would have never done such a thing—exhausted or not. Moreover, I am a religious woman and I do not believe in interfering with the will of the Almighty."

"Then why have a doctor when you are ill? Are not illnesses the act of God? They certainly are processes of nature."

"I have always believed in letting nature take her course," said Mrs. Ruyler firmly. "But of course when one is ill, that is another matter"——

"Is it?" Madame Zattiany's eye showed a militant spark. "Or is it merely that you are so accustomed to the convention of calling in a doctor that you have never wasted thought on the subject? But is not medicine a science? When you are ill you invoke the aid of science in the old way precisely as I did in the new one."

Fortuna Vowed She Never Would Ride Again and For Seventy Years She Has Kept Her Word

FORTUNA LOMBARDI

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 14.—Seventy years now has Fortuna Lombardi kept her vow.

Seventy years has she shunned travel in all forms.

Seventy years ago—back in the early fifties, when she was only 8—Fortuna arrived in New Orleans, a little Italian immigrant girl.

Three months she and her parents were at sea in a storm-tossed sailboat, out of Genoa. Thrice they were near death.

Still trembling with fear she walked down the gangplank at the old cotton press, down on the levee.

Sure Was Scared.

And the first human being her eyes fell upon was a swarthy colored mammy, whose glistening white teeth and gleaming eyesballs were topped by a flaming red hankerchief.

The little immigrant girl had never seen a colored person before. She got down on knees and raised her childish hands in supplication to the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Believing her life in danger, she promised, if it were spared, she never would travel again.

Today, nearing 80, Fortuna still sells fruits in the Louisville & Nashville Railroad depot. Seventy years she has sold it there.

Aristocratic Customers.

She has seen uncounted thousands of trains come and go. The Mississippi River, with passing steamers, is in plain sight. Street cars clang by her stand.

But Fortuna never has ridden an inch on any of them. Daily she trudges up the levee to her fruit stand. Nightly she walks home.

As a young woman, she married Guiseppe Lombardi. When he died, she was left with five children. Two since have died. Two have married.

For 41 years she has supported herself and a remaining paralyzed son. Seven decades of Orleanians have known her only as Mary. And that's all.

She has sold fruit to Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft And she sold it to General Diaz of her own native Italy, to Marshal Foch, to Jefferson Davis and to the soldiers of three wars—Civil, Spanish-American and World.

Owns Her Home.

"I'll never starve. I own my little house. I don't owe anybody a cent," she says.

"I even bought my tomb in old St. Louis Cemetery. No, I ain't making a poor mouth.

"Men are good to me. There was President Jefferson Davis when we were fighting the Yankees. He bought a whole basket of fruit.

"Men are good, and God is good. I ain't complainin'. I go to St. Mary's Church and say my prayers to St. Mary.

"And God and the blessed Mary are taking care of me. I kept my promise."

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. J. Moss were married in Oakwood, Paulding county, Ohio, Dec. 19, 1859. Mr. and Mrs. David Hurrel were married in Cadiz, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1860. In October of 1850, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Prall stood before a travelling minister in the western part of Nebraska and became man and wife. Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Stratton are the "newlyweds" of the quarter. They were married just a "short time ago," in 1863.

A NOTED CRIME DONE BY ACTORS.

Clara Phillip's Terrible Deed Was Committed Nearly Two Years and a Half Ago.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 19.—(United Press).—When Clara Phillips, the "lady blacksmith," hammered her way into notoriety by beating to death pretty Alberta Meadows on lonely Montecito drive, she upset the entire country with the brutality of the crime and apparently set in motion a malign influence that has dogged the footsteps of nearly a dozen persons connected with her subsequent trial, escape, flight and recapture.

Clara's bloody deed, committed nearly two years and a half ago, according to any sensible construction had nothing to do with the misfortunes of those connected with her case. But the fate which has been that of so many concerned with the affair, during such a short period, has at least been startling enough to be of interest.

Counsel Dropped Dead

William Herrington, Clara's counsel, who so ably defended her at the trial, dropped dead in the home of a friend shortly after the murderess' dramatic escape from the county jail.

Albert Tremaine, father of the girl Clara murdered, was arrested twice and convicted on the second hearing. He is now serving a term in prison for grand larceny.

Al Manning, chief criminal deputy in the sheriff's office at the time of the Meadows murder, and "Bob" Couts, deputy sheriff, both of whom assisted in unraveling the crime, were ousted by Sheriff W. I. Traeger soon after Mrs. Phillips, escape.

A Spring street merchant, whose name was linked with Clara's dash for freedom, and who was questioned by the district attorney, was arrested recently and convicted of bootlegging.

Mrs. Gene Biscailuz, wife of Under-Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz, who made the trip to Honduras to bring back the fugitive hammer wielder, suffered an acute attack of malarial fever shortly after her return and has never fully recovered from the illness.

Another Death

Deputy Sheriff John Cowan spent many days seeking Mrs. Phillips. He dropped dead a few weeks ago from heart failure.

Lola Bonnot, actress and Billy Moody, friend of Mrs. Phillips, both of whom testified at her trial, the former for the state and the latter for the defense, ran into marital squalls soon after the trial. Each is now divorced.

Jailer Robert E. Cronin, who had charge of the county jail at the time Mrs. Phillips was incarcerated there, lost his position when the civil service commission substantiated charges preferred against him by Sheriff Trager.

And the center of it all, Clara Phillips, attractive, fascinating in a cruel Amazonian way, languishes in San Quentin prison, serving out a life sentence. Clad in the blue prison uniform, she aids in the humble duties of the penitentiary life, almost forgotten by the world that followed eagerly her sensational career.

CHARGE OF CRIME AGAINST POLICE.

Japanese 'Quake Refugees Say Police Organized Themselves Into Robber Bands.

TOKIO, Dec. 19 (Associated Press)—Some terrible dramas were enacted "behind the scenes" during those days of terror in the first week of September after Japan's most destructive earthquake. Details of some of them are beginning to leak out through complaints of victims and investigations of police.

Thousands of police left their posts to look after their families or were unable, because of conditions, to reach their posts. Volunteer police, organized by local communities to patrol the streets until the military could take over the work, in many instances, ran amuck or organized themselves into robber bands and robbed and murdered scores of refugees.

Many such incidents took place in the suburbs, refugees trying to get away from the burning cities of Tokio and Yokohama being the victims. A number of individual cases also have been reported and the police are making a large number of arrests. On the other hand, the police are being charged by publicists with the murder of some 40 members of a labor union at Kameido, an eastern suburb of Tokio.

Members of mobs that went wild say they were instigated by the police and gendarmerie who started rumors that Koreans were responsible for the fires which started after the quake. Meanwhile the police and the gendarmerie are trying to shift the responsibility from one to the other with the result that the facts are difficult to obtain.

LOVED IN VAIN, CHOOSES TO DIE.

Young Mother, Sued For Divorce, Attempts to Poison Self and Baby Girl.

DETROIT, Dec. 19.—Because her husband had begun divorce proceedings against her and turned a deaf ear to her frantic appeals for "another chance," Mrs. Harry Richardson, 1939 Elmhurst avenue, tried to kill herself and her two-year-old baby, Janet, with poison.

"Harry, Harry, I'm crying, crying," she wrote in a letter to her husband, just before she took poison. "Please, for God's sake, a little pity, for I know I'll die if you don't." In the letter she enclosed a birthday card: "To the Best Husband in the World."

Suffering from the five poison pills she had taken, and carrying her baby in her arms, Mrs. Richardson was found in Twelfth street by friends and taken to a nearby drug store where first aid was given. She was taken to Providence Hospital, supposedly in a dying condition, but today had recovered sufficiently to tell a tale of domestic strife and hopeless love for her husband.

Not Always Happy

"I won't live without him," she cried. "If I can't have Harry, I don't want to live. We have been married two years and we have not always been happy, but I have loved him so—and now—now he has started to divorce me.

"We had some trouble about a week ago at his mother's home. He struck me and they said I went after him with a knife. Then everything was all right and we settled down. All the trouble was about his being out so much at night and not saving money. I've always wanted a home of my own so much—and I've worked ever since we were married. But we always had to live with people—I could never have a home of my own."

There was trouble Tuesday night and Wednesday morning Mr. Richardson told Mrs. William Brundle, with whom the Richardsons lived, that he was not coming back, but was going to get a divorce.

Couldn't Rest

"They served the papers on me Wednesday afternoon," said Mrs. Richardson, "charging me with extreme and repeated cruelty to him—imagine! I may have scolded him but I loved him too much to be cruel to him. After that I couldn't eat or sleep. I went to where his mother works."

Mrs. Richardson says she appealed to her mother-in-law.

"She came down here and followed me, hung onto me and cried," said the elder Mrs. Richardson today, "but I have washed my hands of it, and I told her so."

When appeals to her mother-in-law failed, Mrs. Richardson tried to reach her husband, but could not. Sunday night she was alone in the Brundle home.

"They had gone out to church," she said. "I sat there thinking what happened to women who were divorced. I looked at Jane, and I said, 'What's the use?' So I got the poison.

"I ddin't want to make trouble for the Brundles, so I took two pills in the house and forced another one into the baby's mouth. Then we went out. I carried her. Outside I took three more and gave her another one, but she spit it out because it was bitter, and began to cry. I walked along Twelfth street."

Mr. and Mrs. Brundle met Mrs. Richardson on the street.

"Laura, I've taken poison—I'm dying," said Mrs. Richardson, and pitched forward into Mrs. Brundle's arms.

Babe Recovered

Before she left the Brundle home, Mrs. Richardson had telephoned her mother-in-law, telling her what she had done, and the police were seeking Mrs. Richardson when Mr. and Mrs. Brundle found her.

Little Janet was none the worse for her experience this morning, but called for her mother repeatedly.

Mrs. Richardson's maiden name was Irene Crawford, and her home was in New York. Richardson could not be located today.

MR. J. J. SOLOMON REPLIES TO VETERAN

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—A correspondent in your paper last night who signed himself "Veteran," whose sportsmanship is such as to cause him to withhold his name from his letter, and whose small ness can be judged by his failure to come out in the open, has made some very uncalled for and uncharitable statements in regard to baseball in Peterboro, and particularly about myself. To his benefit I may point out to him that I was merely the manager of the Peterboro Ball Club this season. My duties were to run the team on the field, and I had no position on the executive or nothing whatever to do with the handling of the club's finances. "Veteran" can get information on these points from Mr. Walter Oke, the president of the club, or from Mr. F. E. Convery, the secretary, and before launching out on such an attack should have made some effort to get his facts straightened out. However, from a man cowardly enough to hide behind a pen name while he slanders the good names of fellow-citizens, ordinary courtesy cannot be expected.

Since I became a resident here some years ago I have tried to do something for baseball in Peterboro, and if the conditions now are compared to those at that time, it will be seen that I can say, without boasting, that I have done something. I was responsible for the rebuilding of the City League, the entrance of Peterboro into the O.B.A.A., the formation of the Central Ontario League, and the organization of the East Peterboro League, and I have done what I could to get baseball going strong throughout the whole district. My efforts have been recognized outside of Peterboro, and it is unpleasant to be stabbed in the back at home.

"Veteran's" display of malice, however, may be the boiling over of an individual who has tried to put over another summer pastime in Peterboro without any conspicuous success, and may be inspired by a little jealousy over the strides that baseball has made here.

If he actually hopes to do anything for athletics in this city, however, he cannot succeed by the dark alley tactics he is following. The cause of sport in Peterboro will not be helped by attacks of this kind, which destroy harmony, breed distrust and develop a spirit of hostility that cannot be smoothed over even by such a wordy diplomat as "Veteran," who bravely snipes away under cover.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—People may like or dislike it, but the fact remains that with the coming of the auto and a swift means of escape, daring crimes have greatly increased in number. With that increase has come the increase in number and equipment of police. In fact, the public is now demanding that a standing army of Provincial police be established to protect business. In the old days an odd arrest for petty larceny or drunkenness was about all there was. A burglary created a sensation. But the auto has changed all that. Criminals are now as swift and bold as the eagle. Criminals are of two kinds, and the psychology of crime shows a striking contrast between them. There is the high-class criminal who recognizes that life is a running fight between him and the police, and he matches his wits against them. When caught and tried he has no feeling of malice against policy, or judge and jury. If he gets a fair trial he is satisfied, and almost always acknowledges it with gratitude even when sent to the gallows. But there is another kind of criminal who wants to have his own way and ride roughshod over the public. He is called in France the apache and in America the thug. He is cruel and merciless, knows no code of honor and seeks to put the world under his feet. He does not appreciate justice, for he has no sense of it himself. He is mad with self-will and vanity, and, of course, poses as a sort of Christian and social service artist. But the chief point about him is that there must be no way but his way. He is hated therefore as no other creature is hated, and when shot, is thrown into the pit like a mad dog. The other form of bandit is actually respected by the police, and even by the public. He plays the game fairly. He regards the game of life as a system of robbery anyhow, and he is not very far wrong. Even people's private rights as free men and women are not now respected and they are the basis of society. When they go all goes, and the bandit has been quick to note the change. He says if ministers can forswear their vows to protect the Bible, and citizens laugh at liberty and impose their iron heel on their betters, what need is there for him to walk straight. And why should he? Let some of that class that rifles people of their rights answer that. It is one of the chief causes of the spread of crime. This is surely a terrible Christmas with a broken Bible and a despised Jesus. Truly a little education has been a most dangerous thing.

IBEX.

MANY SHIP RADIO STATIONS WRECK RADIO CONCERTS.

Quiet Hours Have Been Provided For Amateurs During Evening Concerts

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 19.—Relief from interfering radio mediums whether it is broadcast stations operating on almost the same wave lengths, howls from neighborhood receivers, or code telegraph slipping over into the broadcast band is being sought not only by the individual fans having to deal with this interference, but also by such notably influential organizations as the National Association of broadcasters and the American Radio Relay League.

One of the first to recognize the necessity for unified regulation of radio traffic, the A. R. R. L. advocated "quiet hours" voluntarily for amateurs during evening broadcast period and has since assisted the Department of Commerce in carrying out regulations providing for more harmonious air conditions.

In view of this timely assistance in behalf of the broadcast listener whose cause is being championed by the National Association of Broadcasters, Paul B. Llugh, its executive chairman, has written the League Headquarters at Hartford, Conn., as follows:

"The wholesome co-operation which the amateurs comprising your League has given, in giving radiophone broadcasting the right of way for a specified limited period and doing so voluntarily, has gone far toward causing the radiophone listener to respect the amateurs."

This fact is upheld by many listeners who have mastered the code or who have had pointed out to them by radio telegraph operators that the majority of interference at the present time is being caused by ship stations transmitting on the broadcast wave lengths. One of them cites from his personal experience in Shreveport, La.:

"I have never heard an amateur signal come in on my radiophone concerts; but I can hear, every night, all sorts of ship stations breaking right in on 300 to 360, 400, 411, 420, 425, 430, 450 and 512 meters. In fact, it was almost impossible to hear Mr. Lloyd George from KOKA, because certain ship stations were constantly calling or working WSA and WCY."

OTTAWA, Ont.—The Canadian MacIntosh red apple, a native of Toronto, first propagated by John MacIntosh, of Dundas County, is the champion dessert apple in the British empire, so the judges at the Imperial Fruit Show, which was held at Manchester, England, recently decided.

Here is a youngster who was given a real outing last summer and when he got home he had added several pounds to his avoirdupois. Now he is wondering if Santa Claus will look him up on Christmas eve. With Rotary, Kiwanis and many other organizations on the job it is a safe bet that Santa Claus will have very little opportunity to overlook anybody.

Two women on the Peterboro market discussing the drop in the price of turkeys. Do they look downhearted? Not if we are any judge of feminine moods. They are simply all het up over the prospects of getting a real turkey for two dollars and fifty cents.

Millions and Movies

THROUGH the medium of slender strips of celluloid an actor appears stimultaneously on thousands of screens in a many different towns. On the same evening, he entertains great armies of film fans who eagerly pay their money to see his performance.

So the movie star commands a king's ransom for a salary, and a fortune is spent profitably, to provide a proper background for his art. The movie multiplies personality—and earning power.

Advertising does the same thing for a merchant or manufacturer. In a single day it takes his message into thousands of homes—to tell folks why they should have his goods and how to get them. Advertising endows him with a thousand voices with which to tell his story.

But the value of advertising is by no means confined to the advertiser. It has a very definite value to you.

A glance through this paper enables you to sift out the things that interest you. Sitting in your easy chair you can compare values and prices. In a moment you can tell exactly where to go for what you want and how much to pay.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y. Dec. 19.—(United Press). —Indications that the bonus measure was not to be allowed to supercede the tax reduction bill without a hard fight encouraged speculative sentiment and prices showed a steadier tone in the early dealings to-day.

Fractional rallies above the low points touched Tuesday were scored by Baldwin, Chandler, Studebaker and other industrial favorites while the general list displayed a good undertone. Stocks continued to show an improved tone through the first hour. When it was seen that no renewal of the selling pressure of the main body of stocks was appearing, operations for the rise were resumed industrial specialties like National Lead, Cuyamel Fruit, Continental Can and May Stores. The oils continued to display marked group strength, a continued reduction in the crude output, together with record breaking gasoline consumption, are finding many converts for the bull side of the oil shares.

THE MINING MARKET.

Generally speaking the mining market has presented a reactionary apearance, practically everything on the board showing a small decline. Stocks which are owned in England are again running into selling, notably Mining Corporation and Keeley The Penny Shares as a group have been weak.

Indian Mines was introduced to the New York curb this morning with an open quotation of 72 to 76 cents. It sold here down as low as 73. We consider the action of the market is entirely seasonal and in accordance with that experienced for many years around Christmas. The purchase of good stocks at the present levels should prove profitable within the next month.

HENRY FORD IS NOT CANDIDATE

Feels That the Country is Safe With President Coolidge.

DETROIT, Dec. 19. — Henry Ford to-day declared he "like a great majority of American people" feels that 'country is safe with Coolidge" and that he himself would not consider running against President on any ticket.

"I believe it is wise and natural thing for people to agree on nomination and election of Mr. Coolidge," Mr. Ford said.

"I am satisfied that ninety percent of people feel perfectly safe with Mr. Coolidge, so why change."

Asked concerning use of his own name in connection with Presidency, Mr. Ford said. "No man has right to say he never will consider public office, nor accept public office. No man can predict his own acts and feelings so strongly as that. In the present situation I am for Coolidge."

Henry Ford's announcement in favor of President Coolidge furnished double barreled sensation to political circles in National Capital. At White House, it was received with undisguised satisfaction and it was said President would send Mr. Ford a personal telegram of thanks.

Among Democrats there was an evident conviction that air had been cleared considerably with respect to nomination of Democratic Presidential candidate in 1924.

TAXES UNPOPULAR WITH MOST FOLKS

Sales Tax Will Go Into Effect at the First of the Year.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—"I am not aware of any intention upon part of the Government to suspend or modify sales tax,' Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs and Excise, said to-day, when asked about reports that new impost might not go into effect in its present form on January 1.

"This department," said Minister, "is preparing to do its duty by collecting tax. The new act was passed by parliament and it would appear that only parliament could defer its enforcement."

Asked about complaints made by Canadian business men who protest that tax will be discriminatory: that it is so complicated as to be hard of collection and that it is difficult to get definite interpretation of some of provisions of act. Minister replied that taxes were always unpopular with most people, and that it was an easy matter to criticize and raise objections.

LOTS OF FOWL LOCAL MARKET

The Noble Turkey Looked Very Much Dejected This Morning.

Although there were only a few carts on the farmers' market this morning, the basket section had plenty of vendors, with a small number of buyers for the fowl that piled the tables. The noble turkey was prominent. Many a lordly gobbler's purple head trailed on the sidewalk as their purchasers lugged them home. Big, hefty birds were in the majority. Prices ranged from 35 cents a pound to 20 cents, with prospects of the lower price winning the day, in view of the big supply and the small demand. It was reported that buyers had been busy among the turkey flocks in the district this week. Prices in turkeys are away below last year's quotations, and quantities away above last year's supply.

Geese were plentiful also, at 25 cents a pound in the basket section, and 23 cents downstairs, where two or three of the carts held a surplus supply. One lone duck was 30 cents a pound, and the dozen or more chickens on view were selling at 20 cents a pound. Eggs were 60 cents a dozen generally, for a limited supply, and one frank lady sold fresh at 55 cents and three weeks' old specimens at 45 cents a dozen. Butter was 38 and 40 cents a pound.

Downstairs, the owner of the solitary bag of potatoes boosted his price by a dime over Saturday's general quotations, asking $1.60 for his spuds. One man had pork at 13 and 15 cents a pound, another sold beef at 10 and 12, with a price of 15 cents on a long beef tongue.

A solitary load of hay was selling for $13, and a few loads of wood ranged in price from $9 and $10, for mixed soft maple and ash, to $10 for a load of stove-length elm.

STAGE FRIGHT TURNS ACTING ROOSTER GRAY.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C., Dec. 19. — The ebony chanticleer that takes the title part in "The Black Rooster" a drama presented by the University of North Carolina's famous playmakers, has turned gray headed.

Frederick Koch, Jr., 10, who has a juvenile part in the cast, and who tamed the bird, is perturbed. At the beginning of the season the rooster did not have a single white feather on its body; now its crest is almost snowy white. Stage fright is believed to have brought about the change in color of the plumage.

NOT ENGAGED TO PRINCE

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Contrary to all rumors, Miss Lois Booth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Booth, is not engaged to Prince Erik of Denmark. Miss Booth said to-day there was no truth in report of her engagement, and if she was engaged she would be pleased to tell her friends.

HENRY W EGRAFF

By Nea Service.

BELLINGHAM, Wash., Dec. 18. Out on the Bellingham Rifle Club range shooting every Sunday is Henry C. Weagraff, aged 76 years, called Sure Pop "Pop."

He used to be "Hank" when he wore a Union uniform in the stirring days of the Civil War and still was "Hank" when he won the national marksmanship championship of the regular army of the United States. In 1882 the yung, little old man proved himself the peer of the nation's army gunners.

Time has not dimmed a pair of eagle eyes that are as sharp and keen to-day as they were 50 years ago. Recently, as a member of the Washington State Rifle Association "Pop" was awarded a medal for his accuracy with the rifle.

The veteran is all alone in the world now, with the exception of "Jerry," his pet airdale, seen in the accompanying photograph.

LARGER GIRTH BETTER FIGURE

Don't Worry About Your Waistline If You Keep Healthy and Feel Young

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Natural womanhood, physically, is coming back.

For proof there are the figures compiled by the department of physical education at Vassar College. They show that, in the last 36 years, girls entering college have shown a trend toward the perfect figure so finely exemplified by the Venus de Milo. Their average weight has increased from 123.8 pounds to 125.8 pounds, but the corseted, confined 22-inch waistline, in the last 10 years, has developed into the free, mobile 25-inch girth of today.

These facts are substantiated by the opinion of Bessie Potter Vonnoh, noted sculptress of beautiful womanhood.

"This larger 1923 edition of femininity is a decided improvement on her predecessor," Mrs. Vonnoh says. "The increase doesn't mean she is becoming coarser or less feminine. She is just reverting to her natural figure, and you can't improve on nature's plan.

Gift of Health

"The modern girl is of the proportion her mother and grandmother would have been had they lived as healthfully as girls do today."

The increase in size has produced no dearth of beautiful models, explains Mrs. Vonnoh. Nor is it necessary any longer to rely entirely upon young girls for sculptural inspiration.

"Some women of 30 and 40 have as lithe figures as they had at 20, just because they dress more sensibly," she believes.

"But a woman must also exercise proper self-control, keep out of the arm chair and be alert mentally, if she wants to retain at 40 or 50 what nature bestowed upon her at 16."

Must Feel Young

Mrs. Vonnoh finds her greatest joy in shaping figures of dancing girls.

"But I could not bring these figures from the clay if I did not myself know the joy of rhythm and the poetry of motion.

"I believe this is the same with all women. They can't put youth into their work, or into their lives, unless they actually feel young. They can feel young only by keeping alive their faith, inspiration, hope, their confidence in others and in their work.

"The minute they become cynical or lose faith they lose youth. Age is the only alternative."

C. G. E. MEETING WAS HELD TODAY

Sale of Control Must Be Approved by the Courts

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—(Special.) —The date upon which the special general meeting of the shareholders of the Canadian General Electric Company will be held for the approval of the sale of control to the General Electric Company will not be decided at the directors' meeting to-day.

Under the Dominion Companies' Act application must be made in the courts and the presiding judge will determine when and where the meeting is to be held.

The first step in the plan is the retiring of the preferred stock outstanding. Preliminary notice has been sent out to the effect that the preference stock will be redeemed December 31.

Following this application will be made to the court and it is likely that the company will appear the first week in January and the meeting be held shortly after that.

BRAVE LOVE

James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, was asked to name his favorite poem, and responded by giving the following bit of fugitive verse written many years ago; the author of which is unknown.

He'd nothing but his violin,
I'd nothing but my song.
But we were wed when skies were blue
And summer days were long
And when we rested by the hedge,
The robins came and told
How they had dared to woo and win
When early spring was cold.

We sometimes supped on dewberries,
Or slept among the hay,
But oft the farmers' wives at eve
Came out to hear us play
The rare old tunes—the dear old tunes—
We could not starve for long
While my man had his violin
And I my sweet love song.

The world has aye gone well with us,
Old man, since we were one—
Our homeless wandering down the lanes
It long ago was done.
But those who wait for gold or gear,
For houses and for kine,
Till youth's sweet spring grows brown and sere,
And love and beauty pine,
Will never know the joys of hearts
That met without a fear,
When you had but your violin,
And I a song, my dear.

JOHN A. McCREADY IS PREPARING FOR ALTITUDE FLIGHT.

He Is Not Afraid Yet He Admits That There Is Lots of Danger Above For Him.

DAYTON, O., Dec. 7.—"God does not wish you to make this flight."

"He surely will punish you if you attempt it.

"You will fly so high you will keep on going, never to walk upon this earth again."

Pleasant thoughts, indeed, for Lieutenant John A. Macready, intrepid flyer from McCook field here, to ponder over way up in the clouds, as he, all alone, soars higher and higher into uncharted realms, fully aware that a single unwise move spells certain death.

Gobs of unsolicited advice like this are coming to the ace of American army flyers, as he prepares for the big job ahead—the breaking of all existing altitude recores.

Laughs Off Fanatics

But Macready laughs at them. And at the warnings from "scientific sources," too. Nothing can deter him from his purpose.

"Just the work of fanatics," he says.

Yet he admits there is plenty of danger ahead and above.

"You have to guard against cold, lack of oxygen and lack of pressure," he tells us. "The last is the worst of all. It becomes noticeable after passing the 30,000 foot mark.

"It slows up all the body's movements. On my last trip (referring to his 34,000-foot flight) I wanted to look at the tachometer. Believe me, it took me some time to make up my mind to do it.

"It probably was 40 seconds before I discovered I was gazing at the air speed indicator. It takes quite a while for a bit of intelligence to seep through your brain, under conditions like that.

"Past 30,000 feet the air pressure is 14.7 pounds a square inch. By the time you get up to 40,000, the scientists figure it simmers down to 2.9 pounds. Maybe, I can find out definitely whether they're right on that point.

"At high level you think clearly but slowly. When I reached the absolute ceiling I floated around for four or five minutes trying to decide how I was going to get down again.

"Getting down below the 30,000-foot level, the normal use of the senses returns. But a feeling of utter fatigue and exhaustion creeps over one. It takes a day to get back to normalcy again."

Macready's trip already is rousing more interest than the world series, a Jack Dempsey bout or a race between two thoroughbreds.

"Can he make it?"

That's the question on every tongue. But Macready is certain he can.

An altitude climb is not a pleasure jaunt.

If you think it is, just glance over this list of articles Lieutenant John A. Macready is including in his wardrobe:

He will wear:

Three suits of heavy woolen under wear.

His regular street clothes.

Another suit of heavy underwear over these.

Then a heavy leather flying suit, feather-lined, sewed over with silk, looking considerably like a mattress.

A pair of heavy army bshoes and a pair of fur-lined moccasins.

Heavy fur mitts over silk gloves.

His head will be covered by a fur-lined flying hood, with only two openings for his goggles.

His goggles will be smeared with a frost-resisting gelatin.

An air line will extend from the hood. Through it he will breathe oxygen when he strikes rarified air.

At 34000 feet, Macready says, one encounters a temperature of 75 degrees below zero.

CAVAN FARMER HAD BIG TIME CHICAGO SHOW

Harry I. Seymour States That Ontario Ranked High at the Big Stock Show.

CAVAN, Dec. 19.—H. J. Seymour, who has just recently returned home from attending the International stock show in Chicago, reports one of the most pleasant trips he has ever had. There were sixteen from Ontario, four girls and twelve young men. Miss Ethel Chapman, assistant superintendent of Women's Institutes for Ontario was the guide for the young ladies and Mr. Merritt Agricultural representative of Wentworth County, looked after the young men. They all met in London and hired a special car from there, arriving in Chicago Sunday morning, Dec. 2nd, and were taken to the Hotel Atlantic, where their rooms had been reserved. That morning they attended the First Methodist Episcopal church and in the evening attended Presbyterian church. Monday morning they went by special train to the exhibition grounds where they were met by the Mayor and given an address of welcome; other speakers were the Manager of the Exhibition and the Chairman of the boys and girls club Congress, then the rest of the day was spent in sight-seeing and that evening they were taken to the theatre, and then on to a banquet held in the Mansion Hotel. On Tuesday they were taken through Swift and Company packing plant and were guests of the Swift Company for luncheon and then visited the Libby-McNeil and Libby canners and packers, then to see the exhibits of carloads of fat steers where some excellent stock of Hereford Shorthorn and Angus were exhibited. That evening they were entertained by Wilson and Company to a high-class programme then to their hotel for the night. On Wednesday they were taken to the Field Museum, then to the Board of Trade, then visited the mail order firm of Sears Roebuck and Company, and were guests there for luncheon. Thursday, Mr. Seymour took a trip into the State of Wisconsin. Thursday evening all left Chicago for Ontario, feeling they had spent a profitable week.

A very pleasant evening was spent in the hall on Friday evening. There were thirteen tables filled for progressive euchre, Miss E. Hunter won the ladies' prize, which was a pepper and salt set, and S. McClaren won the gentleman's and received a necktie. Muriel Howson and Keith Sisson won the consolation prize. Amongst those there were: Mr. and Mrs. George Howden, Miss E. Hunter, V. Hunter, Wes. Wragg, Mr. and Mrs. C. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. A. Elliott, N. Pee, Ray Syer and many others.

Miss Irene Howson, of Peterboro, spent the week-end at her home here.

Mrs. H. Finney spent Friday at her old home in Nestleton.

Mrs. Ida Ray, of Lindsay, is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Douglas.

EACH IN ITS OWN VOICE.

"A fire-mist and a planet.
A crystal and a cell,
A jelly-fish and a saurian,
And caves where the cave-men dwell;
Then a sense of law and beauty,
And a face turned from the clod;
Some call it evolution,
And others call it God.

"A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky,
The ripe, rich fruits of the corn fields,
And the wild geese sailing high;
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod;
Some of us call it autumn,
And others call it God.

"Like tides on a crescent sea-beach,
When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings
Come welling and surging in;
Come from the mystic ocean
Whose rim no foot has trod;
Some of us call it longing,
And others call it God.

"A picket frozen on duty,
A mother starved for her brood,
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who, humble and nameless
The straight, hard pathway trod;
Some call it consecration,
And others call it God."

MALE VOICE CHOIR HAD SOCIAL NIGHT

Gathering at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Chenhall.

The regular weekly rehearsal was held last night at the home of the Musical Director, Mr. Martin B. Chenhall, and was attended by about 70 members. After an hour of musical study the evening was spent in the form of a social night and a fine programme was rendered.

Two visitors to the city were in attendance, viz., Mr. F. W. Colwill, Supervisor, International Correspondence Schools, Canadian, Ltd., from Sherbrooke, Que., and Mr. D. Fantham, Toronto, who is in charge of the work at the new Hydro sub-station. The members gave them a hearty welcome and they replied in words highly commending the choir on their splendid renderings during the evening, and assured the executive that there was the nucleus of a splendid male voice organization present. Their remarks on competition work were very instructive and opportune. The Peterboro Male Voice Choir passed a resolution to compete at the Ontario Musical Festival to be held in Toronto in March, 1924.

The two visitors upheld their reputation in the vocal art by leading off with two beautifully rendered solos, Mr. Colwill singing "The Ragged Vagabond," and Mr. Fantham singing "The Veteran," and "Three for Jack." These numbers were sung in splendid voice and were well received. Other numbers consisted of songs by the following members; J. Anderson, H. M. Niven, H. Rush, H. Flowers, W. F. Skitch, A. Barton, Ald. W. Stocker.

The choir rendered glees during the evening and Mr. D. H. Moore gave a witty and interesting address.

The president, Mr. W. F. Skitch, called for a vote of thanks to host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Chenhall, for their kind invitation to their home and the company heartily responded.

At the stroke of midnight, one of the best social events in the choir's history was concluded.

MONARCHIST HOPE DEAD IN AUSTRIA.

Failure of the Ludendorf-Hitler Coup in Bavaria Showed the Austrian Nobility Have No Hope.

VIENNA, Dec. 19 (Associated Press).—The utter failure of the Ludendorf-Hitler coup in Bavaria to react on monarchist elements here, is looked upon as denoting a steadily decreasing reactionary feeling in Austria.

Indeed, many close foreign observers here are now inclined to look upon monarchism as an old theory. Apparently it is going through the same stages in Austria that it has in other countries where republics have succeeded crowns, and if this is so only sporadic upheavals and occasional plots and demonstrations are to be looked for.

In Austria, at least, there always will be a moderately strong monarchist element, but the men who compose it are not of the type to risk banishment and the probable loss of their remaining estates in a mad endeavor to put some one on a throne.

The members of the young Austrian nobility did not flock to Munich the other night when the great Ludendorf and his right hand man Hitler, former Austrian house painter's assistant, sent out their call for royalists to rally. Even the fiery Oberlanders, those armed irregulars of the Tyrol and Salzburg, failed to rush the border as duly advertised.

Five years of a republic, even though years of vicissitude and uncertainty, have permitted the memory of the Empire's splendor to fade; the mass of the people are becoming either used to or educated in republican principles, and the workmen's organizations have established themselves strongly. The forces of time and events work against a restoration, and the open royalists are broadly confined to the aristocracy, the old bureaucracy who fed idly on the empire, and the Church.

Above all is the money factor. Austria lives precariously on foreign loans while she strives to rebuilt her industries and become self-supporting, and such a situation leaves no room for the luxury of a king and court and its appenages. Her thinking men of all classes constantly preach the gospel of work, of attending to domestic business, and leaving the broil of central European politics and involvements strictly alone.

A REAL RADIO TEST

Last year a party bought a Northern Electric Radio Detector Unit on our Club Offer, and is still using the same Tube Batteries and no added parts. Monday evening he was listening to Crossley Mfg. Co. of Cincinnati, and during the programme it was announced that a cheque was about to be signed for the Harding Memorial Fund, and listeners were asked to try and hear the scratching of the pen on the paper, which was distinctly heard by this party.

This Set is identical with the Set now being sold to Club Members, and which is giving uniformly good results. Price of this Set this year is only $49.50.

Another interesting feature was that the test came from Crossley Mfg. Co., Radio Makers, and Greene Music Co. are jobbing representatives for them in their district.

The above customer was so pleased that he brought in a friend last night, who purchased one of these efficient, inexpensive outfits.

Up Bobbed Pearl White's Astonishing Husband

An Affectionate Pose of Pearl and Her Hero Husband Before the Divorce.

How "Broadway's Bad Boy," the Dancing, Fighting, Handsome Hero, Was Lost and Found and Lost Again After Adventures That Would Shame a Movie

"I TELL you, Mr. Morrissey, this guy can dance!"

Will Morrissey, one of Broadway's favorite sons, and a leading lion of the famous Lambs Club, spared a bored yawn for the little man in the brown derby, who insisted on taking up Mr. Morrissey's time with another one of those cock-and-bull yarns about a small-town celebrity who would be "just the b'mbo" for Mr. Morrissey's new show.

"Apple-sauce!" muttered Mr. Morrissey to himself, and to the pest, "I'd like to see your friend work, of course, but I've only got a few hours in Buffalo, and about twenty different things to do. Sorry!"

But the pest refused to be put off. The dancing prodigy, he declared, was not his friend—hadn't sent him there—was a queer chap—might not like the idea—it was for Morrissey's own sake he had called—knew Mr. Morrissey was looking for talent—knew he would jump at this chance—wonderful dancer, this bird!—if Mr. Morrissey would only step down the street a second—

"Oh, well!" yielded Mr. Morrissey. "But make it snappy!"

Ten minutes later Will Morrissey knocked at a door of a power house, opened it, strolled in, stopped, gasped, rushed across the room and seized in his arms the tall, good-looking man who met him more than half-way, with the hug of a bear.

"Wally McCutcheon, or I'm Cleopatra!" yelled Mr. Morrissey.

And there, just the other day in Buffalo, New York, came another amazing climax in the up-and-down, out-and-in, astonishing, adventurous, hazardous, helter-skelter, heroic, swashbuckling career of Major Wallace McCutcheon, college graduate, professional dancer, "bad boy" of Broadway, fighter, war demon and divorced husband of Pearl White, the dare-devil beauty of the movies.

To this long and lurid list of titles the discovery of Wally McCutcheon in Buffalo, adds these: leader of Mexican banditti in a mountain war; colonel in the army of the little South American republic of Ecuador; stowaway on a tramp steamer to Panama; gang laborer; hobo; and now—a quiet, unassuming engineer for an American public service corporation, who declares he is "cured" of wanderlust, weary of romance, and "off" Broadway forever.

Nothing in the vivid history of this handsome six-footer, whose body bears the marks of thirty-one shrapnel wounds, and whose heart was all but broken by his separation from his wife, was more remarkable than this chance meeting with Will Morrissey, who, so to speak, brought him back to life.

It was fitting that Morrissey should have been the man to "find" Wally McCutcheon, for, of all Wally's friends in New York's world of the theatre and bohemia, Will Morrissey was the only one who refused to give him up for dead, when McCutcheon dropped out of sight like a bullet sped into nowhere.

McCutcheon was a romantic figure from his debut on Broadway. The son of an actor, he graduated at Cornell in engineering, but the lure of the stage was in his blood. At twenty he burst onto the "White Way" as a professional dancer, paired with Vera Maxwell, a Follies beauty.

Well-built, handsome as a Greek god, bubbling over with fun and high spirits, Wally McCutcheon became the idol of his set. In 1914, the first year of the war, he dashed across the Canadian border, enlisted as a private, and then dashed across to France among "the first hundred thousand."

The Canadians had no dearth of heroes at Passchendaele and Vimy Ridge, and other bloody angles on the western front. But, even so, Wally McCutcheon stood out among them like a Thor.

Finally, in the Battle of the Somme, a sliver of shell nipped off the top of the young American's skull, and Wally was invalided home to the States as an instructor. Where flesh and bone should have been on the crown of his head was a cube of silver, which the surgeons skilfully trepanned there.

Broadway went wild over Wally. He was the street's own hero. Though he hid his glory under a muddy khaki trench coat, and would have knocked down anyone who asked to see his medals, no could not enter a theatre without people standing up to cheer. And the Lambs Club!—nothing was too good there for its erstwhile "bad boy."

At the peak of this constant ovation, Wally met and fell in love with pretty Pearl White. She was a girl after his own heart, matching his own dare-devilry, red corpuscle for red corpuscle. Pearl was the pioneer "shock heroine" of the screen.

Her private life, too, was no humdrum fireside existence. She had divorced her first husband, Victor Sutherland, after eloping with him one day and quitting him the next. Broadway predicted for McCutcheon, the war hero, and Pearl, the white streak of the movies, a genuinely happy or meteorically violent future.

For a time they were in pictures together after McCutcheon left the service at the close of the war. But Broadway, which adored its favorite son, also proceeded to spoil him. Too much glad-handing, too many invitations to this party and that, which he hated to refuse, too frequent urges, "Come on, old man, this must be on me!" did their worst for Wally McCutcheon. Pearl White, filing suit for divorce, named drunkenness among her grounds, and McCutcheon did not fight the suit.

The truth was that this last blow, coming on top of the Broadway fever and his war injuries, did to him what the Germans had never been able to do to him. Wally McCutcheon was completely knocked out. And one night, without a word of warning, even to his most intimate friends, he disappeared.

He was living then at the Lambs Club. Days afterward, when no one had seen McCutcheon, and his baggage was found there untouched, a hue and cry began. Its love for McCutcheon was one quality in which Broadway was sincere. His friends circularized the country, many of them made special trips to distant cities to search for him, and of them all, none was more heartbroken, or more indefatigable in the hunt than Will Morrissey.

The reward of Morrissey's faith came when, because a Buffalo booster insisted on his trying hometown talent, he walked into Wally McCutcheon's little office only a few hundred miles from Broadway.

"And now," demanded Morrissey, when the war whoops were ended. "Now, where in the name of mud have you been?"

"Oh," said McCutcheon, "I drifted down to Mexico, got mixed up in a little squabble with some of the boys, left the country quick, took a job as colonel in the army of Ecuador beat my way back to Panama aboard a tramp, hoboed a bit, and finally settled down here. Outside of that, I haven't been doing much of anything lately."

"Well," remarked Morrissey, "get your hat."

"Why?"

"You're going back to Broadway with me."

"Billy," said Wally McCutcheon, "I'd go to Hades with you—but not to Broadway."

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE TEAMS ARE REINFORCED

Hastings, Warkworth and Campbellford Are Expected to Be Strong Contenders in No. 1 District.

WAITING FOR ICE.

HASTINGS, Dec. 19.—The lovers of Canada's winter sport in the Trent Valley District are going to be treated to the best brand of hockey that has been played in these parts in years.

No. 1 district will comprise the following towns: Warkworth, Campbellford, Havelock, Norwood and Hastings.

Warkworth has a spacious covered rink which belongs to the Percy Agricultural Society and is used in the fall when the Fair is on and then turned over to the hockey boys for the winter. Warkworth in its day has turned out some of the classiest players that have ever donned skates and with the old standby, Leo Phillips, still in town, can be counted on entering a strong team.

Davidson Manager.

Campbellford has also a covered rink, but the boys in that town are at a disadvantage as the owner of the rink collects 60 per cent. of the gate receipts and the players have only 40 left to manage their team. Chas. Davidson has been appointed manager for the season and the congenial Gharlie can be counted on trotting out a strong aggregation, as he made a name for himself as manager of last season's baseball team, which club he piloted to second position in the Northumberland League.

Havelock Are Strong.

Havelock, being a railroad town, has the advantage over the other places and with such stars as Doug. Brennan in uniform, will be strong contenders for the honors, and when Hastings and Havelock meet in their games the fans will be treated to some real hockey, as these two towns have been battling away at each other for a number of years.

Norwood, the home of some of the hockey stars such as Fred Doherty, who played one time with Renfrew, and Jack Marks, who made a name for himself in the western provinces, have enlarged their rink and expect to have a winning team.

Clapper in Hastings.

Hastings have for their manager Bill Clapper and one of the best point players who has ever used the gutted stick.

Bill is busy rounding out a team that will be a credit to the town. His two sons, who played with Oshawa last winter, when 'Dad' was manager, are working here, and Lynn Hill, who played for the Peterborough Examiner last winter, is still here and will throw in his lot to help Hastings win. With W. Burkholder of Sutton, who is stationed here for the C.N.R., and a fast centre player, and Doonan, of Bracebridge, available, Hastings should go a long way in the race.

CHILEAN RETURNS HOME.

NEW YORK, December 19.—Luis Vincentini, Chilean lightweight defeated by Johnny Shugre last Friday will return home this week, in response to an urgent message from his family, his manager said to-day. This has upset temporarily the fighting plans of Vincentini, who was being groomed for a match with Benny Leonard lightweight champion but the Chilean is expected to return to this country early next year.

OFFER TO FIGHT FIRPO.

NEW YORK, December 19. — Bartley Madden, New York heavyweight, to-day received a cabled offer of $10,000 for a fight with Luis Angel Firpo next February, at Buenos Aires, from Jose Tuero, a promoter of the Buenos Aires Sporting Association.

EARLIER CLOSE IN THE MAJORS

World's Series Next Fall Will Start a Week Ahead of This Year.

New York, December 19. — The Major League schedule makers have agreed upon an arrangement which will bring the 1924 season to a close on September 29 or 30, earlier than ever before for a campaign of 154 games, it was revealed to-day by John A. Heydler, president of the National League.

Mr. Heydler said that Ben Johnson, president of the American League, was in harmony with the plan. Details will be worked out by the two executives at a conference here early next year.

The fact that 1924 is a presidential year, with the campaigns assuming paramount importance early in the fall, and that an earlier closing will enable finishing the season under daylight saving time, figured in the decision for an earlier closing.

Another result of this plan will be to advance by at least a week's time the start of the world's series.

MASCART WINS FIGHT IN PARIS

And the European Lightweight Title Recently Surrendered By Criqui.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Edouard Mascart, the French featherweight fighter, to-night defeated Henri Hebrane, of Belgium on points in a fifteen round bout.

By his victory Mascart stepped into the European featherweight championship recently vacated by Eugene Criqui. His fight with the hard-hitting Belgian, Hebrane, although it did not end in a knockout, was none the less impressive.

The little Frenchman had the better of every round, forcing the battle throughout, but Hebrane showed wonderful ability to take punishment.

Mascart's boxing seemingly has improved some, but, although he is the best in Europe, it is believed he needs more seasoning before attempting to meet the American featherweights. He has decided to remain in Europe over the winter, and will fight Charley Ledoux on February 19. The best fight of the evening was between Paul Fritsch, of Antwerp, the Olympic lightweight champion, and Robert Sirvain, which ended in a draw after twelve terrific rounds. Both boys were on the verge of a knockout in the first round. These boys are attached to the bitter rival stables of Francois Descamps and Robert Eudeline respectively, who staged a reconciliation of two years' estrangement after each of them had carried his own boy to the corner at the end of the fight.

Three Teams Start Mercantile League.

The Mercantile Hockey League has organized for the season with three teams as a nucleus and others preparing to join up. Westclox, Lock Works and the Examiner were represented at Monday night's meeting when the following officers were elected:—Pres., R. M. Glover; Vice-Pres., J. E. Sullivan, Sec.-Treas., H Long; Rink Committee, Harry Gressman, Joe Huard and H. Long. Two members from each club will compose the executive.

Billy Evans Says

Stanley Coveleskie, star pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, had a poor season in 1923. Had Coveleskie turned in his usual number of victories, the Indians would have finished a good second, and incidentally would have made it far more interesting for the New York Yankees. The pitching ace of the Indians failed to reach the .500 mark, winning only 13 and losing 14 games. It was by far Coveleskie's poorest year of his major league career.

Despite his inability to win with consistent regularity, the American League pitching records reveal the fact that Coveleskie was the most effective twirler in the organization from the angle of earned runs.

Coveleskie was the only pitcher in the American League to hold the opposition to less than three runs a game. Usually if a pitcher is effective enough to allow only three runs to be made off his delivery, he is almost certain to be returned the victor. Yet Coveleskie, with such a record, failed to break even last season, and his work is classed as decidely disappointing in the matter of games won and lost. As pennants are captured by winning games, that stands as the final decision.

On every ball club there is one pitcher who is regarded as the jinx twirler of the team. When that pitcher works the batting is invariably light and when some player makes an error it usually costs the game.

Coveleskie has for years occupied such an unenviable position on the Cleveland club. When Jim Bagby was sharing pitching honors with Coveleskie, Dame Fortune always seemed to smile on Jim and frown on "Covey." When Jim pitched, and the opposition made six runs, Cleveland would make seven or more. The following day if Coveleskie allowed only two runs, the Indians would be in a batting slump, and either be shut out or only score one tally.

The old hoodoo has pursued Coveleskie relentlessly throughout his entire major league career. In a great majority of his games he has been forced to travel at top speed every inning to have a chance. Seldom would his club make enough runs to give him an easy working margin.

A winning pitcher must get the breaks regardless of his effectiveness. Last season Luque of the Cincinnati club was the pitching sensation of the National League. In 1922 Luque had a very poor year of it. Yet no less an authority than Manager Pat Moran of the Reds insists that Luque pitched just as well in 1922 as he did last season. The difference in games won was due to the breaks, not the pitching. That has been the fate of Coveleskie throughout his major league career. The breaks seldom come his way. Earned run honors have simply been forced on him.

Coveleskie's 1923 record is unique in the annals of baseball. While he topped the American League pitchers in point of effectiveness, he was well down the list in the matter of games won.

NEWARK PLANS STADIUM.

NEWARK, N.J., December 19. — Tentative plans for the erection of a concrete stadium seating 30,000 as the home grounds of the Newark Club of the International League, have been accepted and negotiations for a site are in progress, it was announced to-day.

BABE DOING STUNTS ON THE FARM

Babe Feeds the Chickens, Much to the Delight of Baby Dorothy. Then to Prove the Home-run Eye is Still in Trim Shoots the Head of an Indian Into a Sheet of Tin.

BY BILLY EVANS.

The simple life did it.

If you asked Babe Ruth how he staged the greatest comeback in the history of sport, that would be his reply.

When the season of 1922 was brought to a close with the absolute rout of the Yankees Babe Ruth went into winter headquarters a broken idol.

During the season his play had fallen below expectations and in the series he was a positive "bust."

The Babe is through.

That was the opinion freely expressed by his fellow players and sporting experts.

Near the close of the 1922 season the Babe bought a farm at Sudbury, Mass. At that time he must have realized that he had been a failure. In all probability he was then giving thought to his intended comeback.

Strong For Simple Life.

"Me for the simple life," he told New York when he bade Broadway and its light goodby.

"The bunk," echoed the sport experts.

I had a chat with the Babe just prior to his departure for the farm and the simple life. I realized he had the best of intentions but wondered if he had the old determination to carry them through.

This spring I met Babe Ruth in the lobby of the Grunewald Hotel in New Orleans. I had just hit the town on my tour of the training camps. Ruth was chatting with Manager Miller Huggins.

Never had I seen Ruth in such excellent physical condition. He was lighter than at any time in his career, scaling just a trifle over 200. I congratulated him on how well he looked.

"The simple life down on the farm did it," he replied, "and you can tell the world I am going to fool a lot of the wise guys who insisted I was through. I am lighter than at any time in my major league career."

"When you made the 59 home runs in one season you weighed around 240 all year," said Manager Huggins.

"True," replied the Babe, "but all I did that year was make home runs. This year I am going to be a regular ball player, do a bit of everything.

Staged Real Comeback.

"Loss of weight has made me much faster, Reducing the waistline and the chest measurement has given me a much freer arm movement with the result that I have improved my throwing 50 per cent. Incidentally I am through swinging at every pitch—I'm going to look them over, make the pitchers pitch to me."

The comeback of Babe Ruth is baseball history. He did everything he said he would and then some. He topped it off by being the hero instead of the bust of the 1923 world series.

The Babe has profited by experience. He is again spending the winter at dear old Sudbury and keeping fit by hunting, doing the chores around the house, in general by leading the simple life.

More power to you, Babe, say the fans.

A REPLY TO "VETERAN"

Sporting Editor Examiner:

Your correspondent "Veteran" who does his sniping from behind the screen of a nom de plume so that the public have no opportunity of judging what axe he may have to grind or what—if anything—he has ever done for sport in Peterboro contributes a long letter on the question of Riverside Park, in which my name appears. If the accuracy of his communication is to be judged by his mentioning me inferentially as an officer of the senior baseball club, he has wasted much ink and good paper.

For his benefit I may mention that I am not or nor have I been an officer or member of the executive of the Peterboro Central Ontario League Baseball Club, or of the Peterboro Baseball Association during the past year. That I have had no financial or official connection with either body, save in the capacity of official scorer (without any renumeration) and that my only interest has been a keen love for baseball and the desire of a loyal Peterboro fan to see Peterboro at the top of the baseball map.

Furthermore that in all my connection with baseball leagues or ball teams. I have never benefited to the extent of one cent financially, with the exception of scorer's fees when the Canadian Professional League operated here and my only reward for anything I may have done in the interest of baseball in the past fifteen years has been the presentation to me of a sweater coat.

So when "Veteran" insinuates that I am interested in the disposition of Riverside Park for what I can get out of it he is shooting wide of the mark.

As a matter of fact his whole communication is off the target. He shuts his eyes to the fact that the Peterboro Baseball Association, although they paid $200 more rental this past year than the P.A.A.A., were more generous in their treatment of other clubs than were their predecessors in the lease of the park. All the various City Baseball Leagues used the grounds without any charge, the lacrosse team was accommodated without any charge, the Peterboro Junior Rugby Club, and the Collegiate Club used the park all autumn without paying a cent for it and even the football teams which monopolized King Edward Park and the Nicholls Oval all season, without any expense to themselves, were enabled to play off an important game at Riverside Park.

"Veteran" thinks that the sport that draws big gates should be taxed. Does he not think that a rental of $1,000 and the payment of a caretaker's salary enough tax in the face of the fact that practically every other sporting organization in the city had the park for nothing?

In Cobourg the ball club paid nothing for the use of Horse Show Park, in Oshawa where Alexandra Park is owned by the city the charge to the ball club was only 10 per cent., in Kingston the Exhibition grounds were fixed up for the benefit of the Central Ontario League club and given to that organization for a small percentage, in Belleville free grounds are provided by the city, and the parks commission built bleachers for the ball club last spring. The Peterboro club, for the use of a civic park which they shared with everybody else and in most cases collected no revenue from whatever, had to pay $1,000 and keep a groundkeeper employed for four months.

These are facts that "Veteran" should think it over.

FRED D. CRAIG.

ONE METHOD OF RESCUING BALLS

The best method of getting back a ball I ever saw," says George Harper, who played in the Western League last year, "is at Sioux City, where the right field fence is very close. A dog sits in a hole, cut in the fence, and keeps watch of the proceedings. The moment a ball goes over the fence the dog comes out of his coop like a bullet, chases the ball and never fails to get it. You can't fool the dog, either. I have seen players throw potatoes over the fence, to see if he'd chase them, but he never fell for it — won't chase anything but a baseball, and never returns without his prize!"

AMATEUR BOXER IN STATE OF COLLAPSE

WINNIPEG, December 19. — Norman Grills, aged about 40, a farmer of Sanford, Man., is in the hospital in a critical condition to-day as the result of a collapse following a three round amateur boxing bout last night with A. MacDougall, of Winnipeg. Grills was knocked out in the third round but he arose and congratulated the winner but collapsed soon after.

YANKS BUY PITCHER.

NEW YORK, December 19. — The New York Yankees to-day announced the purchase for $10,000 of N. Cullop, the right-handed pitcher of the Omaha Club of the Western League.

According to Ed. Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, the deal was a cash transaction only. The addition to the roster of the world's champions was one of the leading twirlers in the Western League last year, and has been under observation by Yankee scouts for two seasons.

TORONTO HOCKEY WAS A SHAMBLES

Olympics Defeated Aura Lee By 8 to 3—Six Penalized at Same Time—Free-For-All Fistic Combat.

TORONTO, Dec. 19 Canadian Press. — In one of the wildest and weirdest games of this or any other season the Canadian Olympic hockey team last night defeated Aura Lee by 8 to 3 and qualified to play against the Hamilton Tigers in the Sports men's Patriotic Association Final tomorrow night.

The champions could never strike their stride and their discomfiture was added to by persistent checking and unexpected strength shown by Aura Lee.

By no stretch of the imagination could it be said that either team showed championship form. Then to cap the climax Referee Marsh in the last period chased four Aura Lee players and two of the title holders, all at the same time. As a contest the affair broke up right there.

Refuse to Score.

Manager Marsden was so riled over the penalties that he was considering taking his team off the ice, but it was finally decided to continue and the four Olympic players refused to score against Rutherford and Goalkeeper Mitchell. They had previously added one counter.

Alex. Romeril was the first to be chased and then Chris Speyer decided to keep him company. Shaw and Smith followed in rapid succession, and then came Dinsmore and Bennett. The score before this unusual string of minor penalties turned the game into a shambles, was 3 to 2, with the champions leading.

Bad feeling shown by the players, later manifested itself, when Louis Hudson, the star of the game, and Jock Bennett came to blows. Most of the players got into the fistic argument but only the original bat tlers were chased. Both got in Dempsey-like wallops before the fracas was stopped. An accident to Chris Speyer, defense man for Aura Lee, marred the game, and greatly weakened the Aura Lee team. Speyer bodychecked Smith and lost his balance falling on Smith's skate The blade inflicted a deep gash on Speyer's right leg He was taken to St. Michael's Hospital.

Indian river

One of the best U.F.Y.P.O. debates of the season was held on Friday last at Indian River, when the Peterboro Club contested that of Indian River. The topic, "Resolved that the inventor has done more to promote human happiness than has the Legislator" was supported on the affirmative by Miss Hazel Ackison and Miss Jean Hamilton while Mr. Cecil Boulton and Mr. Haley of Indian River defended that of the negative.

Some good arguments were brought in on both sides and young people showed they could perform with credit on the platform. After some discussion it was decided that the laurels went to the young ladies from the Peterboro Club.

A short program followed the debate after which refreshments were served and the meeeting closed with the National Anthem.

Prisoner at Aurora, Ind., Not Melbourne Robber.

LONDON, Ont., December 19. — Alonzo D. Farley, suspected and held by the police of Aurora, Indiana, as Pat. Norton, wanted here in connection with the attempted robbery of the Home Bank at Melbourne and the killing of Russell Campbell, a resident of the village, is not the man wanted here, according to Norton's wife and the police officials.

Photographs of the suspect arrived here to-day and while there is a strong resemblance between the two men, there is a marked difference in some features.

Grain Carrier Ready to Extend Navigation.

FORT WILLIAM, December 19.—Declining to accept the official date for closing navigation as final, the steamer Sir Thomas Shaughnessy arrived in the harbor to-day and is waiting orders. It is also reported the two American steamers, the C. O. Jenkins and F. B. Squire, and the Canadian freighter G. J. Grammer, are on their way up the lakes for grain. Whether they will attempt to make the trip down the lakes is questionable and they all four lie here with grain for winter storage. The fourteen boats already chartered for storage here make a total of 3,500,000, and the other four would add another million and a half to this.

The weather is calm and there is no trouble encountered as yet in making the trip up and down the lakes.

ASSURES VETERAN OF GROUND FOR HOPE

Some Citizens Can Be Depended Upon to Eliminate Slightest Taint of Professionalism.

Sporting Editor, Examiner:

I was sorry to find out from "Veteran's" letter in your paper last night that sports in Peterborough are in such a horrible condition as the writer pictures. Still there is ground for hope. We have citizens here who may be expected to put up a strong stand against the faintest taint of professionalism. I have heard of one such recently, a doctor by the way—not the president of the P.A.A.A., it is needless to say—who holds practically the identical views of "Veteran"— in fact his opinions couldn't have been expressed more clearly if he had written that letter himself. This medical man was actively engaged in reviving another branch of sport in Peterborough. One of his players, so the story goes, developed a boil on his arm before an important game and the youngster's parents didn't want him to play on that account. Our good friend the doctor, however, succeeded in persuading the parents to give their consent, answering their objections by telling them to send the boy over to his office and he'd fix the arm so there would be no danger of getting hurt. The arm was bandaged and the youngster, boil and all, played the game. And then comes the sequel. A short time after the parents received a bill from the doctor sporting enthusiast at whose coaxing they had allowed the boy to play, charging them $2.00 for medical services as represented by bandaging of their son's arm.

There is no danger of professionalism getting very far if there are many more good friends of amateur sports like this around. Rather than run the risk of contaminating the boy who had helped him out by playing when he should have been off the field, this high principled booster of clean athletics forced himself to charge the lad's parents. That seems the highest development of amateur sport on record. Keep up the good work.

Yours For Sport.

HOCKEY

Raybestos, G.W.V.A. and C.G.E hockey clubs were represented at a meeting held last night at the Chamber of Commerce to consider plans for the reorganization of the Senior City Hockey League. An effort will be made to get a fourth team for the series. Another meeting will be held at an early date. The club representatives were: Raybestos W. Kay; G.W.V.A. Bob Ross; C.G.E. Jack Pilling.

Junior and Juvenile Hockey leagues are being organized. Juvenile clubs are in the majority and when the series is organized there should be plenty of starters.

Boxing fans are promised a lot of fun and some good bouts at the opening smoker to be held by the P.A.A.A. at the G.W.V.A. hall next Wednesday night. Several new comers have been added to the boxing squad

Folks Back Home

Sketches by J. H. Striebel

By Robert Quillen

Squire Moon

Forty-eight years ago a poor, ignorant slattern who lives in a hut below the railway tracks gave birth to a son and could not give him a name. The child came into the world marked with a circle of brown on its left breast, and old women said the mark represented a hangman's noose. The boy was shunned by other children, because it is a disgrace to be illegitimate, but the more adventurous persuaded the boy to show them his birthmark and felt that they had adventured in dark places. At the age of ten the boy ran away with a carnival outfit and was forgotten.

In the spring of 1911 a certain Roy Moon, who wore a full black beard and spoke with a grave deliberation, came to town and opened a hardware store. He wasn't a good mixer but where there was sickness or distress he appeared to give help and the town learned to value him highly. In a few years he was elected magistrate, and his decisions were so fair and his words so gentle that people stood a little in awe of him. Boys lifted their hats, and none of the older men felt free to slap him on the back. We called him Squire Moon.

He died last year of pneumonia; and after he was dead Doctor Snow told some of the older men that there was a circle of brown on his breast—a birthmark that resembled a hangman's noose.

Very few people attended the funeral service.

Famous Guys

DANTE: This Florentine, born in 1625, and developed in an age when men thought freely and acted daringly, is hailed by civilized people everywhere as one of the world's six great poets because he suffered much, thought much, and made copy of his hurts and his hates. In his "Comedy" he preaches; but he pours out his wrath and his scorn on those who are his enemies, and when he found a particularly disagreeable spot in health, to that place he consigned those who did not please him. He wrote an immortal thing because he was white hot when he wrote it. The story teller must bear scars if he would make his hearers understand the hurt of blows.

Dante was a politician and patriot, and had the misfortune to live before his time. He was twice sentenced to death, and was banished for life; but the United Italy, of which he had dreamed, became a fact five hundred years after his death, and the city that banished him now delights to honor his name.

He loved one Beatrice when Beatrice was but a child, and thought his life finished when she died. But he found another to love and by her had four children, two of them being daughters. Poets' loves, they say, are quickly burned away, but Dante named one of the girls Beatrice.

The Butcher Boy and His Bride

The Girl's Big News

"The aforementioned male, feeling that he had pulled a bone, retired in some confusion behind his newspaper, leaving the field to feminine adjectives of rapturous approval."

As a man grows old he begins to find life rather commonplace and to suspect that the world might be improved upon. Unless something is done for him he may lose his sense of humor entirely and begin to talk about "the good old days." When such ill fortune threatens, however, he may save himself by cultivating an interest in youth. No man, for example, could grow old while privileged to hear the joyous chatter of the girl across the street.

She came over this morning as we were lingering at the breakfast table. Joy came with her. In her hand she carried a bundle, obviously intended for display, but she seemed in no hurry to unfold it and in her reluctance there was enough embarrassment to whet our curiosity.

"I just know I am the luckiest girl in the world," said she. "The pretty weather lasted long enough for us to get the roof on the house, and now the carpenters can go ahead with the inside work, whatever happens. We hoped to get moved by Christmas, but it doesn't really matter. It will be nice to spend one more Christmas with mamma and papa.

"And I'm going to get something I've been wanting awfully bad. Hiram saw in a magazine where he could get a cluster ring for $35. It has six little diamonds and looks like a big one if you don't look too close, and I konw it will look swell with my engagement ring. We can't really afford it because we have furniture to buy and everything, but Hiram says that he is going to get me a Christmas present no matter how hard up we are, and I'd rather have the ring than anything.

"I'm knitting him a pair of bedroom slippers—and I'm making this." She came to the table; pushed aside a plate and placed before us a miniature garment.

"A doll's dress," remarked the masculine member of the party. "It is very — er — cute."

Mother and the girl exchanged glances and the aforementioned male feeling that he had pulled a bone, retired in some confusion behind his newspaper, leaving the field to feminine adjectives of rapturous approval.

Lucky kids! Lucky kids! To be young—to have a house in the making—to look forward eagerly to the greatest of all miracles—God bless them! They are richer than any jitney maker or oil refiner you might mention.

HOW WOMEN LIVES ON $2,400 A YEAR.

An Interesting Budget and How It Was Divided Up

An interesting budget sent in to a Toronto paper by a contributor, gives a glimpse of how some people manage their financial affairs. The woman who orders her budget in the manner described lives in a small town, and her husband and self comprise the family's total. Their annual income amounts to $2400, and of this $1000 is laid aside, leaving a balance of $1400 for living expenses.

Of the $1000 put in the "investment" account, $150 is used for payment on house; $150 to improvements on the house; $50 for furniture; $400 for endowment insurance; $250 for bonds and other investments.

In the living expenses, for which $1400 is apportioned, $110 is set aside for fire, sickness and accident insurance; $520 for household expenses ($10 a week), $68 for telephone, light and water; $150 for interest on mortgage; $120 for taxes; $190 for fuel; $50 for church; $130 for clothes for husband; $20 for clothes for wife; $42 for recreation, etc. Total $1400.

This looks like a mighty small allowance for clothes for any lady, $20, but the lady in this instance is a careful contriver. She explains matters thus:

"I receive $10 per week for household expenses, of which I keep exact account, so that I know where every penny goes. My bills average:

Groceries (including all food, except meat, $5.44; per year, $282.88; meat per week, $1.30, per year, $67.60. extras (charities, newspapers, sewing and household articles, etc.) per week, $2.49; per year, $129.48; total, $479.96.

"This left me $40 for clothes which I had to buy, and with the $20 in the other column, made $60 for my clothes bin, besides what I made myself."

Perhaps the outstanding fact inthis budget, besides its extra generous provision for the future, is the allowance made Friend Husband for his apparel, $130, while the lady is apparently quite content with the $60 achieved by careful paring of the family food bill.

It will be noticed that with a payment on the house of $150, improvements to the house, $150, interest on mortgage, $150, and taxes $120, or a total of $570 annually, these people are paying the equivalent of $47.50 monthly for their house alone, only $12.50 of which is used to decrease their indebtedness on the building.

Taking into consideration the $35 balance, when this amount of $12.50 is deducted from $47.50, and reckoning the budget items at $15.83 per month for fuel, and $40 per month for food, the money expended by these two people for rent, fuel and food in a month amounts to a total of $90.83. Government figures compiled from the cost of fuel, rent and food in some 60 Canadian cities for an average family of five people give an average expenditure for the month of November, in this year, of $84.76.

SOVIET TROOPS HAVE REBELLED

HARBIN, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press)—A mutiny of Soviet Russian troops, commencing last Monday, is reported from Vladivistok, Nikolak, and Khabarovsk. Mutinous Reds, reports say, are being assisted by partisans of the white or anti Soviet faction in Siberia.

The populations of cities named are said to have been driven to desperation by the Ruthless collection of food taxes, religious persecution and harsh official Soviet regime.

AIR ROUTES BETWEEN BRITAIN AND CANADA

NEW YORK, December 19.—The Duke of Sutherland, Minister for Air in the British Cabinet, who arrived here yesterday, stated that a limited airship service for passengers and mails between Great Britain and Canada would probably be instituted next July. He made this statement in discussing the progress of the general scheme for connecting up the various parts of the British empire by commercial air routes.

PETERBORO MAN ON WINNING LIST

Safety League Gave Prizes For Best Suggestions on Safety.

Early in October of this year, the Ontario Safety League announced cash prizes totalling $320 for drawings from pupils of the schools throughout the province of Ontario, on accidents, fires, accident prevention and fire prevention. The prizes were divided into two classes, one for pupils of twelve years and under, and the other for pupils of thirteen to sixteen years inclusive.

The judges of the contest were a committee appointed by the Ontario College of Art: Mr. G. A. Reid, R.C.A., Principal; Mr. A. Lismer, R.C.A, Vice-Principal; Messrs Holmes and Manley, instructors, and assistant instructors, the Misses Coombs, McKague, Hall and Despard.

The League reports that the contest this year resulted in greater interest than usual. Over eighteen hundred or more than fifty per cent. more drawings, were received than in 1922. The list of prize winners in the class for pupils of twelve years and under is headed by a Toronto boy, Cecil Thomson, who received the first prize of $20. In the list of awards of $1 prizes, of which there were 105, the following Peterboro names appear: Margt. Reid (Queen Alexandra School,) Ralph Strong (King George School), and five pupils from Queen Mary School: Floyd Wagar, Douglas Hall, Brian Copping, Ruth Sutton and Margaret McCulloch.

Winners in Older Class.

ALICE BRADY IN THRILLING JUNGLE STORY AT CAPITOL

Many screen players have been asked the question: "What is the hardest thing to do before a camera?

Trying to playing dead with a live leopard at your side if Montagu Love's answer to the question. In a scene of Alice Brady's latest Paramount picture, "The Leopardess", which comes to the Capitol Theatre today and Thursday. Mr. Love is attacked and supposedly killed by an angry leopardess. After the scene was shot he had to lie still, as in death, with the leopardess beside him while a close-up was taken.

"To keep from breathing while thinking all the time that the lady leopard might get playful and caress me with a rough paw was the hardest thing I have ever done before a camera," said Mr. Love. "I'll tell you that it takes more than personality to play a scene like that."

Mr. Love did not escape unscathed in his death grapple with the leopardess as several severe scratches on his face and hands proved. But these did not affect him much, for in the picture Mr. Love is a big game hunter who goes to the South Seas in search of adventure. He meets Tiare, a half-caste girl and forces her to marry him by working on her superstitious fears. He then brings his bride to New York together with a leopardess he has captured, resolved to tame both.

But the plan miscarries as subsequent events prove. How the girl escapes her odious husband and the leopardess wreaks vengeance upon her cruel master, makes one of the most thrilling pictures ever screened. Edward Langford plays opposite the star. Henry Kolker directed the story by Katharine Newlin Burt. The supporting company is excellent.

AT THE ROYAL.

AT THE ROYAL.

Gene Stratton Porter's Michael O'Halloran Closes Engagement To-night.

There would be no need of censors, there would be no church agitations against the moving picture industry at large if all productions were as clean and inspiring as Gene Stratton-Porter's Michael O'Halloran, now at the Royal. Besides being intensely interesting it contains a moral that compares favorably with any sermon we ever heard. You should see it. You'll feel a lot better for doing so!

"DRIVIN' FOOL" AT ROYAL TO-MORROW

The following criticism is clipped from the New York Journal, Nov. 29:

"Drivin' Fool" Filled With Laughter

Picture at Cameo Merrilly Depicts Comic Race Across the Continent.

"The Drivin' Fool," at the Cameo Theatre, is one of those high-speed, joyous farces that coax the spectator into settling comfortably into his seat to laugh his heartiest. It does not attempt to be reasonable in all of its incidents and it is not especially romantic, but who cares, as it is so downright funny?

The picture was adapted by H. H. Van Loan from a story by W. F. Sturm and revolves about an automobile "nut" of the type that the late Wallace Reid so often depicted on the screen. The reason for a mad rush across the United States in this instance is the need to deliver a check for $500,000 in New York by a certain time. If the money is not forthcoming on the dot, then the lovely canning business in San Francisco, owned by the fathers of the hero and heroine, will pass into the hands of a scowling Wall Street magnate.

Hal Locke volunteers to make the coast-to-coast marathon in a week. As a result of a railroad strike an aeroplane is suggested, but no guarantee of delivery can be had from the fliers. To add spice to the adventurous journey, Hal's hope of winning the beautous Sylvia Moorehead (Patsy Ruth Miller) depends on his success at the wheel. Another important bit of seasoning is the effort of the Wall Streeter's agents to block the hero at least once in every State that he traverses.

The motorist is joined unexpectedly by Horatio Jackson Lee St. James, an ample darky who is as comical as he is loyal to his adventitious boss. Horatio syphons the gasoline out of the enemy's automobile and gives it to Hal when his own supply is exhausted; he chases tire slashers through a val.ey of the Rockies wildly brandishing his razor; he punctures the tires of a pursuing car with a revolver and otherwise gives yeoman service in landing the machine in New York's financial district in time to permit the hero to hand the check to the astonished magnate at thirty seconds to twelve—noon being the fatal hour.

Wally Van is a droll soul as Hal Locke, but best of all the cast is Jesse J. Aldriche, the colored man. Patsy Ruth Miller is not heavily burdened as the heroine, but she is pleasing enough.

AT THE GRAND.

THE REX STOCK COMPANY.

To-night will go down in history as "laught night" in the annals of Peterborough theatricals. The old Grand Opera House will ring with mirth, because the Rex Stock Company are going to produce the laughing hit of a decade, "Twin Beds." The company's scenic artist, Mr. Larry Lawrance, is hard at work on the production and some pretty scenery will mount the effort. Vaudeville between acts by Seymour and Williams and Fred Dampiere, the Australian, will render the first of a series of very good recitations for which he has been receiving praise from the press everywhere. Last week the Rex Stock Company broke former records for crowds and the indications are that they will be even bigger if such a thing were possible, for "Twin Beds."

A CONTRIBUTION.
East City does not feel like taking a back seat in production and progressiveness. Mr. Finley Meeks, 263 Armour Road, has a game bantam pullet hatched on 15th June, 1923. It has laid 14 eggs, and is now sitting. He expects to have a whole brood of bantams by the first week in the New Year. Does not this beat the record of our Southern neighbours? Hurrah for Ashburnham!

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.
The honest, thoughful earnest man, who has studied the Bible without any bias, must come to the conclusion that the creeds held by most of the various religious organizations are at variance with the plain teaching of the Scripture. A "Rev." some time ago, in addressing a Peterboro audience, stated that the Gospel of the Lord Jesus was a success, on account of the large number of children who died in infancy, and went to heaven, although countless millions went down to a place of endless torment. Another "Rev." who has preached in Peterboro, stated before a Toronto audience, that when men died, they did not die, but that the good and bad went to a place in the centre of the earth called Paradise. He said the good had a good time and the bad were tormented. These statements are so full of untruthfulness, heartlessness and absurdity, that comment is unnecessary. Those two men belong to different organizations, and are not in Peterboro at present.—M. T. Butcher. 1d

WEDDING BELLS

LEACH—BORLAND.
A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Borland on Tuesday last at 1 p.m., when their eldest daughter, Edna E., was united in marriage to Frederick Leach of Peterborough. A few of the immediate friends and relatives were present to witness the happy event.
The ceremony, which took place under a beautifully decorated arch, was performed by Rev. T. M. Wesley, of Norwood.
The bride entered the drawing-room to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, leaning on the arm of her father, and carrying a bouquet of Ophelia roses. She was dressed in grey flat crepe trimmed with Alice blue, and wore a duvetyn hat to match.
The flower girl, little Miss Mary, sister of the bride, was dressed in light pink mull trimmed with radium lace, and carried the ring in a basket of roses and narcissus.
The groom's gift to the bride was a substantial cheque and to the flower girl a signet ring.
After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the dining-room, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The tables were prettily decorated with carnations and ferns, and the place cards with the heather of Scotland.
The bride's travelling dress was of black paon velvet, with corsage bouquet trimming. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on the afternoon train for Toronto.
Their gifts were many and handsome, among which was a cheque from the bride's father.
Their many friends wish the young people a long and happy wedded life.

Despised Pelt Is A Surprise Party To Indian Family

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Setting his trap near St. Walburg, Sask., to catch weasels, little Boulder, a ten-year-old Indian boy, was disappointed the other day when he found a snarling little black animal caught in the steel jaws. In disgust he took it to his father.
"Humph," said the noble red skin as he sprang on his cayuse and galloped as fast as he could to the Hudson's Bay Company's trading post ot Green Lake. There he traded the skin of the little black animal for a team of horses, a sleigh, a double set of harness, enough provisions to last throughout the winter and $50 in cash.
It was a beautiful specimen of a silver black fox.

SACRED HEART HAD A SUCCESSFUL SALE

Patronage Good at Two Day Event Under Joint Auspices.

The two day bazaar which finished last evening, held in the basement of the Sacred Heart church, under the joint auspices of St. Anthony's Sewing Circle and the Sodality of the Blesed Virgin Mary, was a very successful event. Patronage was good on both days, and the energetic lady workers were well pleased with the results of their efforts. Yesterday afternoon, a Christmas tree entertainment, with distribution of gifts and service of ice cream and candy, was held for the children of St. Vincent's Orphanage, who enjoyed their outing immensely. Decorations were carried out in the cheerful Christmas manner, with quantities of evergreens, red bells and holly.
Numbers of willing assistants officiated at the various booths, the convenors of which included: Lunch room, Mrs. Ed. LaPlante; Sodality booth, Miss Josie Collins; Candy, Mrs. T. Goselin; fancy work, Mrs. H. Mowry; Ice cream, Mrs. Dennie; Aprons, Mrs. T. Bacon; Fish pond, Miss A. Gordon. Mr. Tom Legendre made a very satisfactory Santa Claus.

SELWYN CONCERT A BIG SUCCESS

Medicine Man Was Arrested on Two Serious Charges.

The people of Selwyn and vicinity enjoyed a rare treat on Friday evening when the Methodist Sunday school put on a concert in the church hall. The chair was taken by the pastor, Rev. P. H. Neville, and for three hours a capacity audience listened to a varied programme.
The programme consisted of choruses, recitations, duets, darky songs, dialogues, drills, tableaux and last, but not least, appeared the medium man (of market renown) with his talking Judy who, after displaying great oratory was rudely seized by a burly cop and hurried from the stage under two serious charges.
Special mention must be made of the vocal numbers given by Mr. W. A. Sidey and family of Bridgenorth. They were attentively listened to and loudly encored.
Just before closing, candies and nuts were given the children of the school and the ladies of the church served refreshments.
The success of the entertainment was largely due to the untiring efforts of Misses Elsie McConkey, Dorcas Nixon, Mrs. Wilbert Northey and A. R. Oliver. The order throughout the evening was perfect and the decorations of the hall most attractive. Proceeds amounted to $34.60.

LIBERALS PLAN LABOR CABINET

Will Put Labor Government in Power at Earliest Moment, Think Newspapers.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Herbert Asquith's speech at the Liberal Club yesterday in which he said his party would not form an alliance with the other parties, is interpreted by newspapers to-day as meaning in effect that the Liberals are determined to put the Labor Government in power at the earliest possible moment after the preliminary business of the new parliament has been transacted. The Liberals plan to support the Labor Ministry as long as they judge it desirable to do so, the newspapers think, and will then turn it out and succeed to the administration themselves.
The Conservative papers do not attempt to conceal their feeling that Government is doomed.
The Daily News tells the Laborites that if they abandon "those elements in their program which the country has rejected" they have nothing to fear from the Liberals.
The Westminister Gazette notifies the prospective administration that it "will hold office with policemen on its either side' adding that it should understand from beginning it must act so as to make good sound Government its first concern."
The Daily Chronicle promises the Labor Ministry "Fair play and reasonable amount of rope' warning that it will get no Liberal support for revolutionary measures.

PANSIES ARE FOUND IN CENTRE OF CITY,

Norman Curtain, of 319 Simcoe street, brought a half dozen big pansies into the Examiner office to demonstrate the fact that flowers grow in December just as well in the city as in the country.
The pansies, which were beautifully colored, and appeared all the more attractive because of their unusual blooming, were found on Water street, near Central school.

SECRETARY HUGHES EXPOSES A "RED" PLOT IN AMERICA

BANDIT TRIED AND EXECUTED CABINET QUIT

More Trouble in China Following Resignation of Chinese Legislators

THE FRENCH DEBT

PEKIN, December 20. — (By Ray G. Marshall, United Press Staff Cor respondent.) — Sun Mef Yao, the Chinese bandit, who directed the wrecking and robbing of the Peking Shanghai express at Lin Cheng on May 6th, when many Americans and foreigners were kidnapped, was executed to-day.

The bandit leader, who had been taken with his followers, into the regular army, as one of the conditions under which the foreign captives were released, was caught red-handed attempting to arouse the troops under his command to mutiny.

General Pei Yung, commissioner of Pacification at Shantung ordered immediate execution, and the sentence was carried out to the satisfaction of the Chinese and foreigners alike.

The Chinees Cabinet resigned en bloc, because it was continually harassed by the members of Parliament and preevnted from reaching a settlement regarding the gold franc debt to France, which was incurred at the time of the 1901 Boxer rebellion.

Before resigning the Cabinet ordered police protection withdrawn from both Houses of Parliament.

Indications are that it will be a close contest and owing to distances and restricted communications it is possible that result will be in doubt until lat, hour to-night.

Bavarian "Big Stick" Bill Was Defeated.

BERLIN, Dec. 19.—The Bavarian Diet to-day voted 91 to 54 in favor of the plenary powers bill. As however, a two- thirds majority was necessary for adoption, the bill was rejected.

The measure was opposed during the debate by representatives of the peasants' union and communists. The fall of the coalition government and dissolution of the Diet will possibly follow.

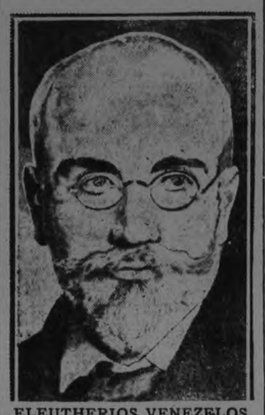
AFGHANISTAN FLOUTS THE BRITISH

STILL IN PARIS



ELEUTHERIOS VENEZELOS
Former Premier of Greece, Who Has Intimated That He Will Not Return Except Upon Unanimous Invitation of Greek People.

KING'S ABSENCE BUT TEMPORARY

Greek Government Informed Diplomatic Representatives — Royal Household Gone to Roumania.

ATHENS, December 20 (Canadian Press). — King George, in accordance with his note to the Government that he would comply with its request to leave Greece, departed from the royal landing stage at the Piraeus yesterday afternoon in a naval launch to the Daphne, which will carry him and his party to Roumania.

The launch was in mid-stream when the harbour forts fired a royal salute.

The King was accompanied by Queen Elizabeth, Marshal of the Court Soutzo, Captain Roussen, a palace aide, and a guard of picked marines.

Only a small group of friends witnessed the departure of the monarchs.

The official gazette publishes the decree appointing Admiral Coundouriatis as Regent. He will take the oath before the Cabinet to-day.

The Government has informed the diplomatic representatives that the departure of hte King and Queen is only temporary, pending the settlement by the constituent assembly of the question of the regime.

It is understood that a decree will be promulgated prescribing as a formula for the deputies' oath "faith in and devotion to the interests of the country," instead of "devotion to the constitutional king," as heretofore.

The King on Tuesday was bidden farewell by the Roumanian Minister and the British representative, the latter calling twice at the palace.

Letter from King.

The text of the letter sent by King George to the President of the Council in reply to the notification that it had been decided advisable for him to leave Greece, read as follows:

"Mr. President,

"I yield to the advice of the Government and the revolution, expressed in your letter of 17th December, on the subject of my departure to a foreign country under form of a leave during the period of discussions, in conection with the regime, in the constituent assembly which is to meet shortly.

"Having carefully avoided all interference or antagonism in internal affairs, I am convinced my presence in the country would in nowise influence the freedom of these discussions, nevertheless I am going away for the time being, with the Queen, in the deep conviction and earnest desire that the judgment of the National Assembly and the Hellenic peoples will be inspired by love for country and regard for the national interests."

NEW YORK, December 20 (United Press). — That 29,000 of the 65,000 workers in the Ford factories of Detroit have defective vision, according to the results of a survey in the factory by the Eyesight Conservation Council of America.

As a result of the survey all employees having defective vision have been placed on jobs where there is no risk of injury and nothing in the job that will endanger further their sight.

HID MURDERERS OF ENGLISHMEN ON THE BORDER

The Population Displayed Hostility Fomented By Emissaries of the Bolsheviki--Tense Situation

TROOPS UNDER WAY.

LONDON, Dec. 20.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—A grave situation has arisen on the Afghan border owing to the failure of the Afghanistan government to comply with the repeated demands of the Indian government for the surrender of the murderers of British subjects, who had taken refuge in Afghanistan.

Attempts of the Afghan police to arrest the murderers have been unsuccessful owing to hostility on the part of the population, among whom Bolshevist emissaries have been spreading anti-European propaganda.

In view of the situation the families of the European diplomats in Kabdul were recently escorted to Peshawar.

Troops Despatched.

Strong intimation has been made to the Amir of Afghanistan that in the absence of satisfaction for the murders the British government might be compelled to adopt other measures. The result has been the despatch of a large well-equipped Afghan force from Kabul to Jalahad, in the neighborhood of which place the murderers are hiding, with the object of effecting their capture.

A minor feature of the situation has been the publication in a Paris newspaper of an interview with the Afghan minister in Paris expressing strong anti-British sentiments and alleging that Great Britain is desirous of annexing Afghanistan and declaring that if their country is invaded the Afghans will defend themselves to the last man, Moreover they had friends in Turkey and Russia who were accusing the British of holding up at Bombay a large consignment of arms and munitions intended to equip the Afghan police, the minister said.

Continued Interference.

These allegations are officially declared in London as entirely baseless. It is stated that apart from the murders there have been other grounds of complaint against the attitude of the Afghan government, one of them being the Afghan government's continual interference with the tribes on the British side of the frontier. Consequently, by virtue of the Anglo-Afghan treaty, it had been found necessary to prevent the passage of arms and munitions to Afghanistan until a satisfactory settlement had been reached.

There is considerable concern in Great Britain as a result of the murders and kidnapping of a number of British officers and British women in Afghanistan on the Afghan border.

BIG MARGIN GIVEN WETS IN ELECTION.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 20.—(Associated Press).—The overwhelming victory of the "wets" in the recent election at Queensland, wherein the voters in favor of continuance more than doubled their majority over the election of 1920, is directly attributed to the fact that the liquor trade, or public houses, voluntarily consented to a curtailment of hours in which their places of business were kept open.

Until recent amending legislation was passed the bars kept open from 6 a.m. until 11 p.m. There were three issues in the election—abolition, state control and continuance. The campaign was unprecedently bitter because, under the recently amended legislation, it was the last poll that would have prohibition as an issue. The result was more than usually uncertain because compulsory voting which was applied to a liquor poll for the first time in Australia, introduced an unknown quantity into the factors to be counted on.

Shortly before the poll, however, the liquor contingent voluntarily submitted to the curtailment of hours from 17 to 12 daily. The bars agreed to open at 8 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. This reform had a profound effect on public opinion, and the result was a clean sweep for continuance.

SHOOTING MATCH.

To be held at Thomas H. Tyer's farm, lot 16, concession 7, Smith (Wm. Pethick's farm) for turkeys, geese and ducks. One o'clock, Friday, Dec. 21st. A big day expected.

Claim For Damages Against Hospital

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Acting on behalf of Timothy J. Regan, the firm of McEvoy, Judd and Henderson yesterday issued a writ against the Stratford General Hospital, Dr. S. T. Rutherford, Dr. F. J. Cawthorpe, and two nurses in the institution in which a claim is made for unstated damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained in the hospital while the plaintiff was under the influence of an anaesthetic.

PREFERENCE BE GIVEN A CHANCE

Conservatives Contend Good Faith to Dominions' Ratification of Acts of the Conference.

LIBERAL ATTITUDE.

LONDON, December 20 (Canadian Press). — Political circles generally seem to have become convinced that the Baldwin Government cannot survive the debate on the Speech from the Throne when the Parliament meets next month, and the feeling among the Conservatives against hauling down the Protection flag is growing stronger.

The sentiment is that since the Ministers must be defeated anyway, they should go down with colours flying.

The King's speech is likely to treat gingerly with the tariff issue in general, but the supporters of the Government will be disappointed if the Cabinet does not indicate a purpose to go on with the suggestion for preferential duties within the Empire agreed upon by the Imperial Conference.

The Liberals for the most part believe that agreements made by the Government with the Premiers of the Dominions must be subject to the constitutional rights of the House of Commons to pass upon them.

The question of what will happen to the Imperial preference plan thus is the subject of much current debate, the Conservatives contending that in the interests of what they call continuity of Government and good faith towards the Dominions, any new Government will be bound to ratify the acts of the Imperial Conference.

Premier Massey, of New Zealand, who sailed yesterday for home, offended the Liberal press by voicing the view that Great Britain was in honour bound to carry out the resolutions of the Conference.

Some of the newspapers accuse him of trying to interfere with and influence the British Government's policies.

King George will open the new Parliament in state on 15th January.

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday the thermometer was up to 51 degrees in the shade, and was one of the finest and most agreeable days that could be wished for. Occurring, as it did, so late in December, it was remarkable. While to-day it is overcast and raining, the mild weather still continues. While snow and sleighbells seem to be naturally associated with the Christmas season a merchant a few days ago looked at it from another angle. He said that while snow and low temperatures were doubtless beneficial to the clothing stores and furriers, the mild season and good roads enabled many farmers to come to town in their autos who would not be seen when snow came. He was satisfied with conditions as they were.—W.P.

BARBERS ARE NOW BOOTLEGGERS.

BERLIN, December 20 (United Press). — Berlin's barbers are turning bootleggers of money. Business with them has become so poor that they have been compelled to seek other fields. And at the moment the bootlegging of money offers them an attractive profit and a sure income.

Scarcely a barber shop in Berlin but has laid off half its force. Nearly every man shaves himself, while milady does her own curling.

SENATE UNABLE TO AGREE UPON I.C.C. CHAIRMAN

Twenty-Five Ballots Failed to Break Deadlock—Decision Deferred Until After the Christmas Holidays.

HELP FARMERS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Unable after twenty-five ballots to break the deadlock over the chairmanship of the Interstate Commerce Committee, the Senate agreed yesterday to defer further balloting until after the Christmas recess of Congress, which began today and ends on January 3.

Two ballots yesterday failed to show any material change in the situation. Senators Cummins, Republican, Iowa, and Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, again ran almost neck and neck, with Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, trailing the field.

The Day In Washington.

An investigation of "diploma mills" was ordered by the Senate.

Northwestern members of the Senate and House drafted a bill for a $50,000,000 loan to aid wheat farm diversification.

A Senate sub-committee of five was appointed to consider the contest brought by G. E. B. Peddy over the seat of Senator Mayfield, Democrat, Texas.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted to consider the administrative features of the tax law before taking up the question of a soldiers' bonus bill.

Agricultural Proposals.

Crop diversification and co-operative marketing were recommended in a statement by the Farm Loan Board as the basis upon which to build a sound agricultural prosperity.

The Department of Agriculture announced that winter wheat acreage sown this fall was 40,191,000, or 12.6 per cent. less than the revised area sown last Fall.

The State Department made public intercepted Soviet communications from Russia to the Workers' Party of America, giving detailed plans for fomenting a proletarian revolution in the United States.

OBREGON DENIES REBEL SUCCESS

Says Huerta Issues Lies to Deceive Public—Expects Early Restoration of Peace.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—General Obregon, President of Mexico, has sent the following message to the Associated Press, in reply to a request for a statement on the situation in that republic:

"The military rebels, who are headed by Adolfo De La Hureta, have been issuing lies to mislead the public. Up to the present the great majority of the army remain loyal to the Government and are fighting energetically aaginst the traitors.

"I have reason to believe that peace will be restored very quickly, and I will continue to work for reconstruction and progress, initiated by the government over which I have the honor to be president.

(Signed) "Obregon."

Massing For Attack.

WASHINGTON, Dec 20.—Official reports received by the Mexican Embassy yesterday from Mexico City said large contingents of Federal troops were massing for a further attack against the revolutionary forces from Vera Cruz, following the evacuation by the rebels of San Marcos.

"No important developments are reported from the Guadalajara front, where the federal troops continue their advance," the Embassy statement said. "The railroad tracks are being repaired preparatory to a decisive attack upon General Estrada's forces, and a battle is likely to take place at any time.

"Conditions throughout the republic continue undisturbed. Contrary to reports emanating from rebel forces, normal conditions prevail at Sinaloa, where the Governor, General Angel Flores, has retterated his allegiance and firm support to the Government.

"Railroad communication between Mexico City and all border points continues normal and communication with Guadalajaar is being re-established with the advance of the federal armies."

FEDERAL BY-ELECTION IN KENT COUNTY TODAY

Weather Ideal For Work "In Shanties"

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press)—The remarkably mild and open weather which has prevailed in the Ottawa Valley so far this year, is acclaimed by lumbering operators and companies as being one of the best seasons for the conduct of bush operations in the history of the Ottawa valley.

"The weather has been ideal for log making, as the men have been able to get from the camp to the scene of cutting operations quickly and the absence of snow has not hampered their work in the woods. We could not have had better weather if we had been able to order it." stated one of the leading operators in the Ottawa valley.

When asked as to how the lack of snow affected the operations, the head of the company said that instead of hindering operations it helped them and that the lumbermen had not been inconveninced so far by the lack of it.

BRITISH BISHOP ON PROHIBITION.

Doubts Whether It Will Be As Successful As the Heavy British Tax.

PLYMOUTH, Dec 20.—The Rev Lord William Gascoyne-Cecil, Bishop of Exeter, in a pastoral letter says America has antipathized men of moderate opinion, and there seems to be a danger that its total prohibition will in the end be far less successful than this country's practical prohibition of spirits among the working classes, by a heavy tax.?

"Still I deeply regret," he continues, "that Englishmen have been found to assist in breaking American laws. Each country has the right to govern itself. Whether the laws are good or bad, it is fundamentally opposed to the doctrine of self-government that another country should allow its citizens to encourage a breach of those laws."

New Game Ended Disastrously For Gymnast Club

AACHEN, Dec. 19—A new game which has become popular in Belgium recently resulted disastrously for the Dienst Gymnast club. One member died and 17 others narrowly escaped the same fate.

Participants in the game are locked in a motor truck and taken for a long ride. Then they are released and the first to reach a designated place is declared the winner.

When the chauffeur was about to release the Djenst club members he found one of them dead, 15 unconscious and two bordering on that condition. Escaping gas had entered the closed car.

Conservatives Hopeful of Victory in Liberal Stronghold, New Brunswick — Result In Halifax May Be A Factor.

A CLOSE RESULT.

RICHIBUCTO, N.B., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press) — The political eyes of Canada which have been turned towards Keut county during the past two weeks has been more sharply focused on this spot today by the by-election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of A. T. Legere, late Liberal member in the federal house takes place.

The Liberal candidate is Alfred Bourgeois, accountant of Buctouche. The Conservative standard-bearer is Alexander J. Doucette, farmer, of Notre Dame. Both men are well known throughout the county, the latter having unsuccessfully contested the constituency in the last federal election against the late Mr. Legere.

The election is conceded by both sides to be one of the greatest importance and may have quite an effect on the life of the present administration.

Liberal Stronghold.

Kent county has been considered a Liberal stronghold for a long time. However, there has been a feeling of unrest in the county in common with other parts of the Maritime provinces and the fact that during the past few years there has been an exodus from here to the number of more than two thousand, most of whom have gone to the United States, has not tended to settle the state of mind. The feeling throughout the Maritimes that they have been discriminated against by the present administration in the matter of freight rates has been reflected to a large extent in Kent county which is vitally concerned in the prosperity of the nearby city of Moncton, the natural home market for the farmers of the county.

All of this as customary is blamed on the administration in power and has been made the most of by the Opposition. This is enchanced by the result of the Halifax by-election and has had some influence in the county.

Government Promises.

About twenty Liberal speakers aided the government candidate chief among whom was Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine. The Government speakers appealed to the people on promises of consideration to the extension of the Moncton and Buctouche Railway from Buctouche to Richibucto and possibly to Chatham. The Minster of Marine also said that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who have been in the county for some time in connection with the enforcement of the fisheries regulations, would be withdrawn and that the province would be made a separate fisheries district.

The vote will be considerably less than that polled at the last election in view of the fact that about 1200 electors stated by both sides have left the province since then.

At the last federal election the majority for Mme. Leger, the Liberal candidate was 1513 out of a total vote of approximately 6700, divided among 24 polling districts. The fight it is conceded by both parties will be a close one.

FIELDING IMPROVES

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—The condition of Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding continues to show gradual improvement.

PROPOGANDA TO RAISE RED FLAG AT WASHINGTON

Russian Soviet Instructions to Workers' Party of America Outlined Plans For Proletarian Revolution — Organize Fighting Units.

AUTHENTIC REPORT.

WASHINGTON, December 20. — Intercepted Soviet instructions from Russia to the Workers' Party of America, outlining plans for a proletarian revolution in the United States to "raise the red flag over the White House," were made public yesterday by the State Department in support of Secretary Hughes refusal yesterday to enter into any negotiations with Soviet Russia.

The Department's announcement said that the Department of Justice "has assured the State Department of the authenticity of these instructions."

Part of the programme outlined provided for the organization among industrial workrs in United States of "fighting units."

Shooting Instructions.

"The members of the fighting units in addition to all other matters," the instructions said, "must once a week be given instructions in shooting and receive some instruction in pioneer work (sapper work.)"

Summarizing the results to be obtained the document said:

"We are firmly convinced that work in the direction designated by us will give enormous results in the sense of preparing thousands of new propagandists, future leaders of the military forces of the party and faithful fighters during the social revolution."

Substantiate Charges.

The Communist instructions were made public at the State Department without further explanation than was necessary to show the direct connection of this revolutionary project with the Soviet Government at Moscow. The publication, however, was intended by Secretary Hughes to disclose the definite basis upon which rested the charge made in his communication to Tchitcherin, the Soviet Foreign Minister, that the Moscow Government was continuing to conduct revolutionary propaganda in the United States.

MEIGHEN SPOKE ON EMPIRE TIES

Urged Preservation of the Imperial Conference to Cement British League.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen addressed the Canadian Club of Fort William yesterday on the subject of Imperial Conferences outlining their origin, history, purpose and limitations.

Mr. Meighen made a strong plea for the preservation of these conferences as the only possible avenue of approach by all members of the Empire to the discussion of common subjects of interest, on neutral grounds. He strongly maintained that Canada should take part in discussions of imperial foreign relations at these conferences stating that such had been the policy of Sir John A. MacDonald, of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of Sir Robert Borden and such, he was glad to say, had been the policy of the Canadian representatives to the Imperial Conference of this year. If such things as foreign relations and imperial preference were not discussed, what he asked were the conferences for? Britain and her dominions formed a League of Nations themselves, and, if this British League could not hold together, how could such a heterogeneous aggregation as the League of Nations survive. The world would never have security unless all the forces were made strong whose purpose in the world was the peace and humanity.

KING GEORGE CALLS BANISHMENT HOLIDAY

Hopes to Get Back When Trouble in Greece is Over.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—(United Press.)—Former Premier Venizelos of Greece, summoned to return to his native land following the success of his supporters in the election and the departure of King George and Queen Elizabeth for Rumania, was in no hurry to-day to return to Athens.

Venizelos, who on several previous occasions has received similar summons, only to be overthrown or banished, announced he would await further information before deciding to go to Greece.

In a farewell message to the Greek people King George declared his trip to Rumania was in the nature of a "holiday," while discussions "regarding the future regime of Greece are under way." He said he thought his presence would not have interfered with the freedom of such discussions, but that he "yielded to the opinion of the Government and the revolution."

MONTREAL, December 20 (Canadian Press). — The French language newspaper La Patrie yesterday published the following news item:

"The rumour was current this morning that the private detective, Joseph Valade, had received important information regarding the murderers of Blanche Garneau. Interrogated by our representative, Mr. Valade admitted having received several letters recently touching on this affair. He refused to divulge the contents, wishing to assure himself first of the accuracy of his information. We understand he is waiting news from Quebec.

"Detective Valade stated that he had never ceased to interest himself in this case, and was associated in it with a well-known Quebec lawyer. He was reticent with regard reports appearing in yesterday's newspapers to the effect that important developments would take place in Quebec, and that some garments had been submitted to Dr. W. Derome, medical alviser to the Coroner's Court of Montreal, for analysis.

KID ROY GETS DECISION.

MONTREAL, December 20 (Canadian Press). — Leo Kid Roy, former featherweight of the British Empire, was awarded the decision over Tommy Noble, the crack British featherweight and holder of the Lonsdale belt, in a feature bout of the card at St. Denis Theatre here last night.

Noble was floored twice in the first round. He took the count of nine in the first knockdown and three in the second, but came back strong, and finished the ten rounds.

They weighed: Roy 124 3-4 pounds; Noble 127 1-2 pounds.

MAYOR MEYERS IS A CANDIDATE ANOTHER TERM

Has Served Four Years in Municipal Life -- J. C. Birmingham Mentioned for Council-- Cheese Board Meetings.

AN OPEN WINTER

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 20. — Mayor Meyers gives authority for the statement that he will be a candidate for re-election to his present municipal position. So far no one has been seriously mentioned as an opponent to the Mayor, and the prospects are that he will be elected by acclamation. Friends of W. J. Armstrong, a former Mayor, were after him yesterday, urging him to become a candidate again, but Mr. Armstrong informed the Examiner last night that he would not entertain the proposition for a moment as he has had enough of public life.

Mayor Meyers has served four years in municipal life. Soon after coming to the town he was elected to the Council, and so active and acceptable were his services that at the end of his term he was elected Mayor without opposition. That honor has been twice repeated, so that the prospects are that the Mayor will exceed the Mayoralty record of ex-Mayor Tommy Church of Toronto in point of duration and eclipse it altogether in the number of times he was sent back unopposed.

MAYOR A. J. MEYERS

The Mayor is fair and patient at all times as a presiding officer, always ready to make peace when a debate threatens to become angry or personal, and is invariably courteous and ready to listen and explain any situation to all individuals or delegations that call on the Council.

In discharging the purely social duties of his office, Mayor Meyers is equally at home. During the recent Legislative election he was, according to a long established custom here, called upon, by virtue of his office, to preside at all the political campaign meetings held in town, and got through every such delicate ordeal with consummate tact. In theory and practice he is interested in every form of legitimate sport.

J. C. Birmingham Named.

The chief topic of discussion in municipal circles yesterday was the declared intention of J. C. Birmingham to be a candidate for the Council. Mr. Birmingham was elected to the Board of Education two years ago by popular vote, so that his term expires at the end of the year. In order to set all doubts at rest as to his right to run for another town office, he tendered his resignation yesterday as a trustee to Secretary Stephens, and this will be dealt with at the regular meeting of the Board next week.

Mr. Birmingham has been a valued member of the Board during his two years of service, ready and willing at all times to advance the interests of education. His platform will be better streets and an extension of the sewer system of the town. "A clean and healthy Campbellford" will be his slogan.

Mr. Birmingham is a successful young business man, one who is interested in the welfare of his town, and as he is popular with all classes, it is expected that he will be close to the top when the votes are counted. He has been urged by his friends to retire from the Board of Education and enter the wider field.

Cheese Board Meetings.

Two of the cheese factories in the district held their annual meetings yesterday afternoon—West Seymour and Beaver. H. B. Cowan appeared at both and spoke in the interests of the Co-operation Association.

The patrons of West Seymour Factory, after giving Mr. Cowan an attentive hearing, voted by a small majority to sell to the co-operative people for one year, but in order to leave their hands free in case everything does not turn out satisfactorily, they refused to bind themselves by signing a contract.

It was 5 o'clock when Mr. Cowan appeared at the Beaver Factory, and on account of the lateness of the hour, no action was taken in this matter. This factory is listed as a member of the local Cheese Board, but the patrons sent their products direct to Belleville all summer.

Predicts Open Winter.

Edawrd Stephens, the nongenarian resident, who is recognized as the weather seer of the town, predicts an open winter, basing his opinion on past experience. There will, he says, be comparatively little snow and that it will soon disappear. He expects the first fall of the beautiful during the week between the Christmas and the New Year.

Mr. Stephens says that 40 years ago, while he was living on a farm in Seymour, there was a fall even milder than the present autumn. He ploughed all through the season and turned his last furrow on the day after Christmas, working by the light of the moon until 10 p.m. to finish his tasks. A few days later snow fell to the depth of two feet, but it disappeared entirely in a day or two and the balance of the winter was mild.

News Notes.

Overseer Greer of the provincial highways of the county was up from Cobourg on official business yesterday. He says that the improved roads in the vicinity of Campbellford have stood the unusually wet weather remarkably well.

Several of the candidates for municipal honors have already started the work of proping up their fences.

The Salvation Army will hold their Christmas tree in their hall to-night. The $40 raised at the recent sacred concert has been expended in buying gifts for the children who, but for the generosity of the band, would have had no Christmas.

J. R. Wilkinson purchased a handsome driving horse yesterday at the auction sale of Michael Heffernan, West Seymour.

MILITARY SPIRIT IS RISING IN EUROPE

NEWMARKET, Ont., December 20 (Canadian Press). — In the midst of his own people, the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King last night gave an outline of the accomplishments of the recent Imperial Conference, his hopes for the future of the British Empire, and a brief resume of the European situation.

A guest of the Board of Trade, and welcomed by Liberals and Conservatives, the Premier refrained from touching controversial subjects and confined his remarks to descriptions of what he had seen and his own interpretation of what the Imperial Conference meant to that galaxy of nations known as the British Empire.

He was received as only North York knows how to welcome its political heroes.

The status of the Imperial Conference had at last been definitely defined, Mr. King declared, in summing up the results of the recent session in London.

It was not a Cabinet nor a Council. It had no authority. Its members had no mandate from their constituencies. But it could formulate a policy and leave it to the various Dominions to suit this policy to their local conditions.

It was none too optimistic a report of European conditions generally that the Prime Minister brought back to his constituents.

In Europe an aggressive and militaristic spirit was again asserting itself and unless in some providential manner the influences which made for peace could be brought to bear upon the matters at issue, strife of a most serious character might again break forth in Europe at almos any moment.

In this connection, he appealed to Canada and the United State to cooperate in any way possible to strengthen the hands of the peacemakers abroad.

STEVE GRAF DEFEATED

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Jack Forbes, Canadian light weight wrestling champion, defeated Steve Graf of Detroit, two straight falls at Labor Temple last night, and now claims world's lightweight championship, as Graf came here claiming title as conqueror of the famous Johnny Belletier of Toledo, for years undispute world's title holder of the division. Graf weighed 147 pounds, while Forbes weighed in at 135 pounds.

Walter Smith, clever St. Louis grappler, had edge on Nick Alexander of Toronto, in 40 minutes hard wrestling, when latter stopped, claiming damaged shoulder.

HUNGARIAN LOAN STILL UNSETTLED

The Problem of German Reparations Lurking in Background of League's Plans.

PARIS, Dec. 20.— The financial organization of the League, sitting with Dr. Eduard Benes, and other little Entente representatives, and Count Bethlen, the Hungarian Premier, struggled all Wednesday over the Hungarian restoration project, and then adjourned until midnight. It hopes to make a report at the meeting of the Council to-day, which would indicate that the project will soon be elaborated.

Developments during the official discussion of the Hungarian plan showed that the problem of German reparations always lurked in the background. From the Allies' stand point, Hungary is a former enemy power of great vitality and thoroughly royalist, to use Bethlen's own words, and is suspected by the Little Entente, of harboring plans to restore the monarchy on a smaller scale. The Allies seem to regard Hungarys political position as paralleling that of Germany.

The British representatives have favored postponing asking Hungary to pay reparations similar to Austria first, because they fear to establish a precedent for the handling of the German reparation problem, and, second because they are loathe to increase the difficulties of floating a Hungarian loan, of which sixty per cent will be taken in Great Britain and some of the remainder, it is hoped in the United States.

The French tendency has been to favor a Hungarian loan on the understanding that Hungary shall begin reparation payments as soon as she gets on her feet, in about two years thus establishing a kind of precedent for Germany.

League advices from Vienna say that German agents are closely watching the developments of the Hungarian restoration plan with a view to possible appeal to the League to organize a plan for the financial control of Germany. The members of the Council, however, believe that they will not approach the League pending the outcome of the inquiry by the special committees of the Reparation Commission.

BATTLED FOR LIFE ON DRIFTING ICE FLOAT

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—After a seven-hour battle for life on drifting ice floes in Lake Manitoba, E. Erickson, of Lundar, fisherman, reached shore Tuesday night, bringing to safety also a pony, which had been his companion.

Erickson and a companion were fishing from the ice some distance from shore when a sudden storm caused the thin ice to break up. The companion was on a fragment which drifted to shore at once, but Erickson was carried into the lake. Leading the pony he jumped from a small ice floe to a larger one and then to others, and when his friends ashore had given up hope he eventually reached safety.

SIX MONTHS' HOIST RESOLUTION ADOPTED

MONTREAL, Dec. 20—(Canadian Press).—With a complete unanimity, the Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon adopted a resolution recommending the six months' hoist and then oblivion of the new sales tax. The new tax was condemned on every hand as not merely cumbersome and unfair, but absolutely incomprehensible.

LAST GRAIN BOAT LEFT YESTERDAY

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—One vessel, the Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, cleared last night, carrying 260,000 bushels of wheat for Port Huron. She is taking about two-thirds of her possible load, as she could not pass through the Canadian locks with her full cargo. This will be the last cargo to go down the lakes.

Two years ago the Shaughnessy was also the last boat to clear, passing the Soo locks on Christmas Day.

The T. J. Drummond, which took a cargo of flax to Duluth, is back in port and is making ready to take on grain for winter storage. The other float of three boats reported as on their way up light for grain, has not yet docked here, but may be in to-day.

SAY GOVERNMENT MORALLY LIABLE

TORONTO, December 20 (Canadian Press). — Some 1,500 creditors of the defunct Home Bank, meeting last night in Massey Hall, unanimously reaffirmed by resolution their opinion that the Dominion Government was morally bound to see that depositors were paid 100 cents on the dollar.

For three hours representative speakers addressed them on the national aspects of the disaster, and its effect upon the general public attitude toward Canadian banking institutions.

At the end of that time a resolution was drafted asking that the Government be called upon to secure full indemnity in view of the alleged fact that research had shown that three separate warnings, transmitted from responsible persons in 1915, 1916 and 1917 as to the condition of the bank during those years, had been disregarded.

Depositors will be paid 25 per cent. dividend through the chartered banks of the city, commencing on Saturday, 22nd December.

Announcement of the completion of arrangements for the payment was made at the meeting.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odour, smoke, or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

W. W. HILTZ AND THOMAS CHURCH FOR MAYORALTY

Official Nomination Will Take Place To-morrow

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—The last minute advices are to the effect that the mayoralty contest this year will be between Controller W. W. Hiltz and Thomas L. Church M.P. The citizens must not look for the announcement until to-morrow, when official nominations will take place.

The Globe was informed last night by a well known Conservative worker that it will be a straight fight between Hiltz and Church. This worker, when asked what Controller Thos Foster was going to do replied that he would again be found running for the Board of Control.

CHINESE DICTATOR RAILS AT AMERICA

LONDON, Dec. 20. — (United Press)—Six American warships, five British, two Japanese, two French and one Portuguese now are assembled at Canton to prevent seizure of the Customs House by Sun-Yat Sen, Southern Dictator, according to a Hong Kong dispatch.

In a message to the American people Sun Yat Sen cabled: "In the twelfth year of our struggle for liberty comes not a Lafayette but an American Admiral, with more warships than any other power has in our waters, to join those who wish to crush us, so that the Republic of China may perish.'

Sun Yat Sen who wanted to seize the customs to finance his war against the Pekin government, adds it would eb a "crime and an undying shame" if the naval power of the United States were used to collect Chinese revenue within his territory in order that "traitors and militarists may flourish at Pekin."

REMEMBER THE CHILDREN.

The appeal for Christmas gifts for the fifteen little folks who are inmates of the Children's Aid Society's Shelter should not fall upon deaf ears.

There is no one to play Santa Claus for the benefit of these little tots unless the good-hearted people of Peterborough see that they are not forgotten.

The annual Christmas tree is being held tomorrow, and donations of toys, books, games, sleighs, candies, nuts, raisins and other things dear to childish hearts are urgently required.

These have always been forthcoming in the past, and the Examiner is sure that attention has only to be called to the annual appeal to ensure a bountiful supply of gifts with which the lives of the children at the Shelter may be brightened.

They are away from their parents, these tots, some of them indeed orphans, and it should be a delight for citizens who have imbibed the real spirit of Christmas to help make Yuletide an occasion of happiness and brightness for them.

As the distribution of gifts takes place tomorrow, it will be necessary to act quickly.

THE PROGRESSIVE PROSPECTS.

The Progressive Party refuses to acknowledge that the agrarian political movement is on the wane, and the whips of the party who have been in conference at Winnipeg announce a campaign in each Province, followed by a national convention.

All the Provinces show a turning towards the Progressives for politic leadership, says a statement issued by the whips.

While it is impossible to gauge Western opinion at this distance, there are indications in Ontario at least that the optimism of the Progressive whips is along the lines of whistling to keep their courage up.

Any turning that has been done here is away, and not towards the Progressive Party.

The defeat of the Drury Government was a heavy blow to the movement, not only a loss in prestige, but also a shattering of morale, for the confidence of many followers of the Progressive Party in the invincibility of their political machine was wrecked beyond repair.

The U.F.O. has withdrawn its organization from politics, and to take its place a new Provincial organization will have to be effected with branches everywhere.

It may be found when this reconstruction work is undertaken that many farmers who supported the U.F.O.'s political activities may not be keen in enlisting under the new banner, while the expected rush of urban recruits in response to Mr. Drury's broadening-out propaganda may fail to materialize.

There is nothing in the Ontario situation to justify the Winnipeg bulletin, however rosy the conditions may seem in the Prairie Provinces.

THE MacDONALD SISTERS.

When Sir Hugh Poynter, head of a steel company in Canada, lectured in the Town Hall of New York the other day, public attention was called to the remarkable family of which he is a member, says the New York American.

Some time ago a Methodist preacher by the name of MacDonald came to London. He had a family of five daughters whom he supported upon a salary of something like one hundred and fifty pounds a year. These MacDonald sisters were destined for greatness.

Two of them married artists. One of these artists was Sir Edward Burne-Jones, the great painter. The other artist was Sir Edward Poynter, who as President of the Royal Academy. The Canadian, Sir Hugh Poynter, is Sir Edward's son.

The third daughter married John Kipling. She had a son whom she called Rudyard, after the name of a lake which had for her romantic association.

The fourth daughter married a man by the name of Baldwin and became the mother of the man who is now the Prime Minister of England.

The fifth daughter remained unmarried.

To produce four men who have become famous all over the world is a good record for any family.

After all that has been said about preachers' sons there evidently remains something to be said about preachers' grandsons.

EXPORT TRADE.

By the end of this year the Ford Motor Company of Canada will have made and sold 80,000 cars, which is approximately one for every ten persons in Canada, and a record for the big factory in Ford City. But this does not mean that every tenth person in the Dominion has been buying a new car this season. More than half of the total output was sold overseas. Their value has gone to swell the total that makes Canada rank among the leaders, in proportion to population, of the exporting nations of the world.

Mr. Wallace R. Campbell, vice-president and treasurer of the company, who has just returned from a business trip to England, where he met, by appointment, Premier Smuts of the Union of South Africa, and Premier Bruce of Australia, says that the export business will be much greater next year than this. His company has been backing its judgment in a very substantial fashion, as witness the vast extenions to the factory made this year and now nearly complete.

The Ford chief says he found the two Premiers both strong Empire men, duly impressed with the necessity for cohesion and unity in the British commonwealth of nations, and on this he bases his prophecy that arrangements will shortly be made for better trade relations among the Dominions.

This idea received a certain impetus at the recent Imperial Conference, Mr. Campbell says. It may be that Premier Baldwin's plans for tariff preference to the Dominions have been knocked into a cocked hat by the result of the recent elections, but that is no reason why sister Dominions, all of them protective tariff countries, should not make arrangements for their mutual benefit.

Mr. Campbell's prophecy is further strengthened by the fact that Premier Bruce of Australia is to stop in Canada on his way home from London. That visit should be highly important to both countries, and the means of perfecting tariff preferentials which will be of advantage to both of us. Each side will have to give something; the arrangements to be made must be on a basis of reasonable compromise. But there is no doubt that such a treaty can be successfully negotiated.

This treaty would be of immense importance to the Border Cities, now the automotive centre of Canada. By virtue of close arrangements with the United States, Canada has a long start on her sister Dominions in the highly-specialized business of making automobiles. Quantity production of motor cars was born in the North American Continent; it is but natural that Canada should benefit by it. Nowhere can cars be made for any less, and price, by the way, is one of the best selling arguments ever invented.

The automobile is yet almost in the luxury class in Australia; gasoline is costly, and present tariffs tend to maintain automobile costs at so high a level that the Detroit price of a car is just doubled by the time it is laid down in Australia. But the automobiles, of all the inventions of this mechanical age, have the strongest appeal to the imagination of man. Once they are fairly introduced in a country, it will not be long before they will be placed on a basis where the average man can have one. In this lies Canada's chance in Australia. New Zealand offers another great opportunity.

Conditions in South Africa are different, but South Africa is going ahead, and in time will prove a big market for cars. The same should be true, in a measure, of India, but that country is not as promising a field as the other parts of the Empire mentioned.

The field is broad. And we here in Canada have a long start on the rest of the Empire in automobile manufacture. It is our one best bet for stimulating the export of manufacturers at present. We have the right idea and nothing ought to be able to stop us.—Border Cities Star.

WHAT YOU GET FOR YOUR TAXES.

People complain vigorously against the tax rate of the present day, and are fond of contrasting their present tax bills with those of a decade ago.

Strangely enough, however, they never compare at the same time the living conditions of 1923 with those of the period when their tax bills were small.

Would they want to go back to those conditions, to the unpaved streets, to the wooden sidewalks, to the days when sanitary conveniences were primitive, when there was no garbage collection?

A correspondent to an Ottawa paper touches on a few of these points and lists some of the benefits enjoyed by citizens today. They are worth remembering when tax bills are being taken under consideration.

Here are some of the things the ratepayer gets as applied to Peterborough conditions:

Water.—All he can use of it. The residence taps are not even metered as they are in many other places. In the old days water cost 25c per barrel.

Light.—No need to stub your toe.

Fire Protection.—If a fire breaks out in your home, you simply phone the Fire Hall, and in a few minutes a highly organized lot of fire fighters are putting out the blaze. What is such service worth?

Police.—You go about the streets night and day practically in complete safety. If you have something stolen from you, a police force is at your beck.

Health.—If your child contracts a contagious disease, smallpox, diphtheria or scarlet fever, hospitals and trained staffs are ready to help you. After the child is removed a public official fumigates your house free. Worth something?

Garbage.—If you had to pay a man to come every week and remove your garbage and ashes, what would he charge you? Ever think of that? Your garbage collection now costs you six cents per week.

Safe Drinking.—Every day an analyst tests the water you drink to see that it is free from colon bacilli or "bugs." The civic laboratory daily watches your interests.

Playgrounds.—You will admit, we think, that the civic playgrounds are a great civic and moral asset. The boys and girls of today will be the men and women of tomorrow.

Sewage.—Splendid sewage system. You don't have to throw your dish water in the back yard.

Finance.—All the above civic works are done without you having to turn a hand; you do not have to worry about the details; you simply pull a fire alarm, or phone for the police, or call up the City Hall and presto! the great civic organization like the Geni of old, is at your command. Everything is financed for you, and twice a year, you merely pay your share of this highly-organized civic machine. Such is community service, and when you come to think of it, it is a wonderful thing.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—There will be nothing left on hand at the Union Stock Yards this week. Tuesday's fresh cattle were all sold in the total of 410 taken, and the remnant of last week is being gradually absorbed. Yesterday morning's receipts were again light, with 359 cattle, 140 calves, 1,945 hogs, and 270 sheep and lambs. There is a good demand for anything above the medium butchers, and prices are firmer, although it would be difficult to estimate the actual extent of this. In the medium butchers there is a wide difference between the bid and asked price. For a load of light heifers 5¾ cents was asked, and 4¾ bid. A compromise will likely split the difference.

One buyer discussing Tuesday's and yesterday prices, stated that butchers which sold at 6 cents a pound last week, would bring 7 to 7 1-4 cents a pound this week On this basis good to choice cattle are about a dollar a cwt. up from the low of last week.

The lamb market is still inactive, but prices are holding steady. Heavy ewe lambs are about 10 cents, and lighter ones are cent a pound higher A large number of breeding ewes have been sent out this week, and this has helped the market for sheep. This demand is now expected to fall away, and will weaken the prices.

Hog prices are firm, and although the packers bid stands at $7.75 fo.b., few hogs are selling below $7.90 a cwt.

WAGES DECLINE IN MOST TRADES

Printing Industry An Exception, Showing Advance — Comparison of Rates For Two Years With Pre-War Levels.

OTTAWA, December 20. Canadian Press. — Declining wages in a majority of the industries throughout the Dominion are recorded by the Department of Labor during the last two years. Exception is shown in the printing trades where an advance is registered, and the wages of coal miners showed no change.

The greatest decline was in the wages paid to lumberers.

Taking an index number of 100 for the average wage paid in each of a number of industries during the year 1913, the Department of Labor has shown average rates for the years 1901 to 1922 inclusive. The high peak was reached in most cases in 1920 and 1921 saw a decline which which continued in many cases until 1922.

The average wage rate in the building trades was 60.3 in 1901 as compared with 100 in 1913. During all the years since 1901 there was a steady increase until in 1920 the figure of 180.9 was reached. In 1922 it had fallen to 162.5. In the metal trades wages rose steadily from 68.6 in 1901 to 209.4 in 1920, and fell to 173.7 in 1922.

The printing trades, standing at 60 in 1901 advanced continuously to 193.3 in 1921; in 1922 the rate was 192.3.

Wages of employees on steam railways averaged 70.8 in 1901, rose to 186.6 in 1920, and stood at 155.1 in 1922.

On electric railways the wage rate was 64 in 1901, rising to 101 in 1914. The rate fell to 97.8 in 1915 and then advanced steadily to 194.2 in 1920. In 1922 the rate was 184.4.

Coal miners earned 82.8 in 1901 and in 1921 the rate had risen to 208.3, falling last year to 197.8.

Drawing an average wage rate for these various classes of workers, in 1901 it stood at 67.8, and was 176.8 in 1922. In the lumbering business employees are shown to have earned 93.3 in 1911; 202.7 in 1920, and 146.7 in 1922.

"BLACK OXEN"

by GERTRUDE ATHERTON

XXVI. (Continued)

"The time will come when this treatment I have undergone will be so much a matter of course that it will cause no more discussion than going under the knife for cancer—or for far less serious ailments. I understand that you, Polly, had an operation two years ago for gastric ulcer, an operation called by the very long and unfamiliar name, gastroenterostomy. Did you feel—for I assume that you agree with Isabel in most things—that you were flying in the face of the Almighty? Or were you only too glad to take advantage of the progress of science?

Mrs. Vane merely grunted. Mrs. Ruyler exclaimed crossly, "Oh, no, one ever could argue with you, Mary Ogden. The truth is," she added, in a sudden burst of enlightenment that astonished herself, "I don't suppose any of us would mind if you didn't look younger than our daughters. That sticks in our craw. Why not admit it?"

Mrs. Oglethorpe chuckled. She and Isabel Ruyler snapped at each other like two belligerent old cats every time they crossed each other's path, but, with the exception of Mary Ogden, whom she loved, she liked her better than any of her old friends.

But once more Mrs. Vane drew herself up (figuratively). "Speak for yourself. It may be that I am too old to accept new ideas, but this one certainly seems to me downright immoral and indecent. This is not intended to reflect on you personally, Mary, and of course you were more or less demoralized by your close contact with the war. I mean the idea—the thing—itself. We may call in doctors and surgeons when we are in bodily discomfort, and be thankful that they are more advanced than in our mothers' time, when people died of appendicitis every day in the week and called it inflammation of the bowels. But no one can tell me that rejuvenation is not against the laws of nature. What are you going to do with this new youth—I never saw any one look less indifferent to life!—make fools of men again—of our sons?"

"Who can tell?" asked Mary maliciously. "Could anything be more amusing than to come back to New York after thirty-four years and be a belle again, with the sons and grandsons of my old friends proposing to me?"

"Do you really mean that?" Mrs. Vane almost rose. She recalled that her youngest son had met Madame Zattiany in Mrs. Oglethorpe's box on Monday night and had been mooning about the house ever since. "If I thought that——"

"Well, what would you do, Polly?" Mary laughed outright. "Your son—Harry is his name, is it not?—is remarkably good looking and very charming. After all, where could you find a safer and more understanding wife for him than a woman who has had not only the opportunity to know the world and men like the primer, but looks—is—so young that he is bound to forget it and be led like a lamb? Girls, those uncharted seas, are always a risk—"

"Stop tormenting Polly," exclaimed Mrs. Oglethorpe. "Mary has no intention of marrying any one. She's only waiting for her estate to be settled in order to return to Europe and devote herself to certain plans of reconstruction——"

"Is that true?"

"Quite true," said Madame Zattiany, smiling. "Don't worry, Polly. If I marry it will be some one you are not interested in too personally, and it is doubtful if I ever marry at all. There's a tremendous work to be done in Europe, and so far as lies in my power I shall do my share. If I marry it will be some one who can help me. I can assure you I long since ceased to be susceptible, particularly to young men. Remember that while my brain has been rejuvenated with the rest of my physical structure, my mind is as old as it was before the treatment." She gave a slight unnoticed shiver. "My memory, that for years before the war was dull and inactive, is now as vigorous as ever."

Several of the women recalled those old stories of Countess Zattiany's youth, and looked at her sharply. There was a general atmosphere of uneasiness in the large respectable room. But whether or not they gave her the benefit of the doubt, they had always given her due credit for neither being found out nor embarrassing her virtuous friends with confidences.

Mrs. Tracy was the first to break the silence. "But you will come to all of us as long as you stay, will you not? I do so want to give you a dinner next week."

"Yes, yes, indeed." The chorus was eager, and sincere enough. After all, nothing could alter the fact that she was one of them.

"'Yes, go, Mary,' said Mrs. Oglethorpe peremptorily. 'Clear out and let them talk you over.'"

"Oh, I have enjoyed meeting you all again, and I am hoping to see more of you." Madame Zattiany felt that she could do no less than be gracious. "I have become a very quiet person, but I will go with pleasure."

"You must let us see you daily while you are with us," cried Mrs. Goodrich, her spirits soaring at the prospect. As Mary stood up and adjusted her hat before the mirror she felt that she had successfully distracted their attention from a quick sigh of utter boredom. "You are too kind, Nelly," she murmured, "but then you always were."

"Yes, go, Mary," said Mrs. Oglethorpe peremptorily, and rising also. "Clear out and let them talk you over. They'll burst if you don't. Human nature can stand just so much and no more."

Madame Zattiany took her leave amid much laughter, more or less perfunctory, and one and all, whatever their reactions, insisted that she must give her old friends the pleasure of entertaining her, and of seeing her as often as possible as long as she remained in New York.

She escaped at last. That was over. But tomorrow night! Tomorrow night. Every wheel and tire seemed to be revolving out the words. Well, if he were repelled and revolted, no doubt it would be for the best. She had made up her mind to spare him nothing. He would hear far more than she had told those women. Certainly he should be given full opportunity to come to his senses. If he refused to take it, on his head be the consequences. She would have done her part.

XXVII.

On Saturday afternoon as Clavering was walking up Forty-fourth Street he met Anne Goodrich coming out of the Belasco Theatre. He saw her first and tried to avoid her, for her family and the Oglethorpes were as one, but she caught sight of him and held out her hand.

"I shouldn't speak to you after your base desertion the other night," she said, smiling. "But you do look rather seedy and I prefer to flatter myself that you really were ill."

"Was sure I was coming down with the flu," Clavering mumbled. "Of course you know that nothing else——"

"Oh, hostesses are too canny these days to take offense. All we are still haughty enough to demand is a decent excuse. But you really owe me something, and besides I've been wanting to talk to you. Take me to Pierre's for tea."

She spoke in a light tone of command. There had been a time when issuing commands to Clavering had been her habit and he had responded with a certain palpitation, convinced for nearly a month that Anne Goodrich was the Clavering woman.

He had known her as an awkward schoolgirl and then as one of the prettiest and most light-hearted of the season's debutantes, but she had never interested him until after her return from France, where she had done admirable work in the canteens. Then, sitting next to her at a dinner, and later for two hours in the conservatory, he had thought her the finest girl he had ever met. He thought so still; but although she stimulated his mind and they had many tastes in common, he had soon realized that when apart he forgot her and that only novelty had inspired his brief desire. She might have everything for another man as exacting as himself, but that unanalyzable something his own peculiar essence demanded no woman had ever possessed until he met Mary Zattiany.

He had begun too ardently to cease his visits abruptly and, moreover, he still found her more companionable than any woman he knew; he continued to show her a frank and friendly devotion until an attack of influenza sent him to the hospital for a month; when he accepted the friendly intervention of fate and there after timed his occasional calls to coincide with the hour of tea, when she was never alone. There was no more long morning walks, no more long rides in her car, no more hastily arranged luncheons at the Bohemian restaurants that interested her, no more "dropping in" and long telephone conversations. He still enjoyed a talk with her at a dinner, and she was always a pleasure to the eye with her calm and regular features softened by a cloud of bright chestnut hair that matched her eyes to a shade, her serene brow and her exquisite clothes. She did not carry herself well according to his standard; "well" when she came out six years ago had meant laxity of shoulders and pride of stomach, and in spite of her devotion to outdoor sports she had fallen a prey to fashion. She so far disapproved of the new fashion in girls, however, that she was making an effort to stand erect and she had even banished powder from her clear warm skin. Today she was becomingly dressed in taupe velvet, with stole and muff and turban of sable; but Clavering had fancied that her fine face wore a weary discontented expression until she saw him, when it changed swiftly to a sort of imperious gladness. It made him vaguely uncomfortable. He had never flattered himself that she loved him, but he had believed in the possibility of winning her. He had later chosen to believe that she had gorwn as indifferent as himself, and he wondered, as he stood plunging about in his mind for an excuse to avoid a tete-a-tete, why she had not married.

"Well, you see"——

"Come, now! You don't go to teas, men never call these days, and you surely have done your column for tomorrow. Here is the car. You can spare me an hour."

He had always avoided any appearance of rudeness and in his mind at least he had treated her badly; he followed her without further hesitation, trusting to his agile mind to keep her off the subject of Madame Zattiany. This he would do at the cost of rudeness itself, for he would not permit fiasco at the last moment.

The street was packed with automobiles and taxis, and after a slow progress toward Fifth avenue they arrived in time to see the traffic towers flash on the yellow light and were forced to halt for another three minutes. He had started an immediate discussion of the play she had just witnessed, knowing her love of argument, but she suddenly broke off and laid her hand on his arm.

"Look!" she exclaimed. "The famous Countess Zattiany in that car with mother. Of course you know her; you were with her at the opera on the historic night, weren't you? Did you ever hear of anything so extraordinary?"

"Never. I really know her very slightly. But as I had met her and she had kindly asked me to dinner, I was glad to return the compliment when Mrs. Oglethorpe sent me her box, as she always does once or twice during the season, you know. But go on. What you said interested me immensely, although I don't agree with you. I have certain fixed standards when it comes to the drama."

She picked him up and the argument lasted until they were seated in Pierre's and had ordered tea.

"I might have taken you home," she said then. "We could have had tea in my den. No doubt Countess Zattiany was returning with mother, who, it seems, has always adored her——"

"This is ever so much nicer, for we are far less likely to be interrupted. I haven't had a real talk with you for months." And he gave her a look of boyish pleasure, wholly insincere, but so well done that she flushed slightly.

"Is that my fault? There was a time when you came almost every day. And then you never came in the same way again." It evidently cost her something to say this, for her flush deepened, but she managed a glance of dignified archness.

"Oh, remember I had a villainous attack of the flu, and after that there were arrears of work to make up. Moreover, the dramatic critic came down with an even longer attack and they piled his work on me. I don't know what it is to 'drop in' these days."

"Well—are you always to be driven to death? I read your column religiously and it runs so smoothly and spontaneously that it doesn't seem possible it can take you more than an hour to write it."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

A RIDDLE FOR GIRLS

"I have two eyes, a nose and mouth."

"Oh, dear!" sighed the Riddle Lady, "I'm afraid the boys won't like my riddle today. Or the grown-ups, either."

"Then it must be a little girl's riddle!" cried Nancy.

"Yes, it is!" answered the Riddle Lady.

"All the better!" said Humpty Dumpty. "I like girls. I don't shiver when they come near me. They are much more gentle than boys."

"But girls do more cooking so they break more eggs than boys," said Nick.

Humpty Dumpty gave him an indignant look and jerked down his white satin waistcoat. "A most unpleasant conversation," he declared. "Who started it, anyway?"

"I'm afraid you did yourself, Humpty Dumpty," laughed the Riddle Lady. "But there! There! We'll begin our riddle and get our minds off eggs."

"I have two eyes, a nose and mouth,
And two dear little ears,
But though my eyes will ope and shut,
They can't cry any tears.
And though I'm proud, as proud can be,
Of my nice little nose,
I never caught a cold in it,
And never smelled a rose.
My mouth is cute and just as red
As any red ripe berry,
I never tasted cake or bread,
And never ate a cherry.
I have five fingers on each hand,
Yet never held a book,
And though upon my feet I stand,
A step I never took.
I have a throat as white as milk,
But never said a word,
My hair's as soft as golden silk,
But does not grow, I've heard.
My heart, they say, is cold as stone,
And yet I love you all,
I never feel a bit alone,
For I'm a —— ——!"

"A baby-doll!" cried Nancy quickly.

"Right!" smiled the Riddle Lady, handing her a doll for her prize.

"That was only a riddle about dolls," went on the Riddle Lady. "The truth is dolls can do wonderful things."

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Rev. R. B. Grobb Gave a Lecture on the Passion Play.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 20.—The lecture on the "Passion Play" given by Rev. R. B. Grobb, of Peterboro, in the Methodist church on Monday evening was most enjoyable though owing to the busy season, and the brief time for advertising, the attendance was smaller than had been hoped for. Increased interest is lent to the lecture from the fact that Anton Lang, who impersonates Christ, Andreas Lang, who is Peter in the play, the character who takes the part of Judas, and one or two others are now in the States selling the production of their labors as wood carvers to help the poor of their own country. An American firm offered the players over one million dollars to allow the play to be used in the movies but this was refused as its performance with them is an act of worship. None of the party now in America has ever been outside Oberammergau before except Anton Lang who once went to Palestine to gain local color in his study for the part of the Saviour, Lang also is the only one who speaks excellent English, and with their long hair, and foreign dress, they were in strange contrast to the general throng upon their recent arrival in New York.

The Passion Play, in the production of which nothing artificial is allowed in the make-up of the characters, was originally given in the village churchyard, the theatre, seating about four thousand people now in use being built in 1900. Only the central portion of the stage is covered, the view of blue sky, and mountains, and birds seen on either side in the background, adding to the natural charm of the play.

Mr. Grobb stated that he had met Anton Lang personally calling at his home the day after he had witnessed the play in August 1922, and being most cordially received. The speaker's impression was that Lang seems to be the embodiment of the spirit of the Man whom he impersonates. He first took the part of Christ when he was twenty-seven and has acted it for the third time, ten years separating each presentation, the final one for him being in 1922 as he is now forty-nine years of age and will be too old to act in that part when the play is again given in 1930. As one of his most cherished possessions Mr. Grobb has Anton Lang's autograph, the latter inscribing his name in the speaker's passport during his visit at his home. One of the incongruities of the play when last given was that Christ was older than Mary, His mother, the latter being chosen from twenty others for her part which is considered the highest honor of any of the young women of Oberammergau can aspire to, just as the part of Christ is the most honorable which can be bestowed on any of the men. It is probable that the one taking John's character, in real life a young carpenter, will likely be elected to succeed Lang for the next production.

From one to twenty children are in the play, many of them mere tots in their mother's arms. It is right in the blood of these people, high up in the Bavarian Alps—they live for it and in it; the highest ambition of every boy and girl is to so live in purity and righteousness that they may be chosen for a speaking part. There are fifteen acts, and the whole performance is characterized by a dignity, and a poetry of motion, which is in keeping with the sacred theme. They do not look upon it as a mere theatrical, but as the sacred fulfillment of a vow made to Jehova over three hundred years ago.

The performance lasts all day, beginning promptly at 8 a.m. and allowing for two hours intermission at noon when the visitors are waited upon in the village homes by those taking part in the play, it closes at 6 p.m. The tableaux shown at intervals, depicting Old Testament scenes, are foreshadowing scenes which actually happened in the life of Christ—they are the bud which burst into full flower in the New Testament.

The gentle stoop in Lang's shoulders was commented upon by the lecturer, as the picture was thrown on the screen, and the fact that he has a peculiar note of sadness in his voice seems particularly appropriate to his impersonation of the Saviour.

As the play advances toward its climax in the dreadful Golgotha scene, when attention is riveted upon the central figure upon the cross, the intensity of interest upon the part of the listeners, and the spirit of reverence, grows until it can be felt in the atmosphere. One scene which rivets itself on the memory is that of Christ, thorn-crowned, and tied to a stone pillar for the cruel scourging with which the vacillating Pilate hoped to satisfy the hatred and blood-thirstiness of the Jews. The hollowness of the religious forms practised by the Sanhedrin becomes wonderfully transparent, as the mockery of His trials, so-called, goes on.

There is no attempt at applause at the conclusion of the lecture, the pronouncing of the benediction by the speaker being a most fitting ending to the story.

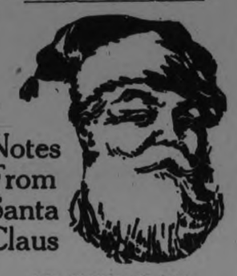
Old Parties Relieved.

The Ford statement was received with undisguised joy in Republican circles and with a certain measure of relief by the Democrats, who have long been uncertain concerning Mr. Ford's party affiliations.

Bart D. Cady, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, said that Mr. Ford's announcement would be a great help to the Republicans in Michigan. While he expressed confidence that the State would have gone Republican regardless of Mr. Ford's announcement, he asserted he believed that Mr. Ford's support would increase the Republican majority in this State.

A. R. Canfield, secretary of the Democratic State Central Committee, said Mr. Ford's statement was no surprise to him.



Notes From Santa Claus

BY SANTA CLAUS.

TOYLAND, North Pole, Dec. 20.

My Dear Children: There is so much noise about me today that I can hardly think to write.

The Midgets, who have charge of the machine shop in Toyland, are testing the electric trains ,the wind-up toys, and the dolls that walk and talk. They have to be sure everything works right before they let it go out of the factory.

Right around the legs of this writing-desk is the track that is going to make some boy happy. Every minute or two a little engine goes spinning around it. Attached to the engine are several cars and they sway back and forth as the engine moves along.

Now my ears are ringing again. But I have to laugh, just the same. For several of the Midgets have found some firemen's coats and hats and they are tearing about here climbing all over some toy fire-engines.

I have had a lot of requests for fire-engines, but I can spend them only to the little folks who promise not to play with matches. Just because you have a fire-engine doesn't mean you have to have a fire.

I believe every child who has written to me has asked for some toys that wind up. I just wish you could see all these funny toys when they are all wound up together. First a donkey pulls a little wagon into the wall, then a tiny automobile goes sailing around in a circle like mad. As fast as the Midgets find these toys work right, they are packed in little boxes.

Tomorrow I'll write you another letter about the wind-up toys, express wagons and kiddie cars.

REAPING THE WHIRLWIND

Lord Birkenhead, at a dinner in Minneapolis, told a story about the noted Horatio Bottomley, who a year or two ago a wealthy publisher is now serving a long prison term as a common thief.

"Bottomley," said Lord Birkenhead, "had not lost his pluck. A journalist visited the Maidstone Prison last month, and came upon him, seated in a cross-legged position, with an enormous needle and a ball of twine, sewing mail bags.

" 'Hello,' said the journalist, 'Sewing, eh?' "

" 'Na,' said Bottomley, with a grim smile, 'Reaping.' "—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

MOTOR MAGNATE ENDS OWN BOOM FOR PRESIDENCY

At the Same Time Henry Ford's Name Is Placed on Michigan Primary Ballots For Next Spring —Too Late to Withdraw

POLITICIANS PLEASED

DETROIT, Dec. 20.— Declaring that he believed the United States "safe with Coolidge," Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, whose name has been mentioned as a possible candidate for president in 1924, declared here yesterday that he would not oppose President Coolidge.

Mr. Ford pointed out that a presidential election was reputed to have a disturbing effect on business conditions but there was no reason why business should be disturbed. He said further that he did not believe the president should be required to take any of his time or strength for any sort of political campaign.

On Michigan Ballot.

The announcement of Mr. Ford's support of President Coolidge, came simultaneously with the filing in Lansing of petitions to place Mr. Ford's name on the Michigan presidential election ballots next spring.

"It is too late for Mr. Ford to withdraw from the Michigan presidential elections next spring," said Mr. James Helme, who filed Ford petitions at Lansing yesterday.

Petitions to place Mr. Ford's name on the Democratic ticket next spring were filed at the same time Horatio S. Earle, prominent Republican, filed Coolidge petitions. The Secretary of State indicated both petitions would be approved.

"The law makes no provisions for the withdrawal of a man's name after petitions for him have been filed," Mr. Helme said. The extent of his comment on Mr. Ford's statement that he would not oppose President Coolidge was that "it is Mr. Ford's own business if he don't want to run."

The right-of-way was widened and considerable other work done, including the surfacing of four and a half miles.

Haldimand Township

The big expenditure for the yea was in Haldimand township, where it amounted to $12,245.71. The bulk of this expenditure was on Provincial County Road No. 39, where Simpson's Hill was cut down, and a fill-in made through the north part of Elder's swamp. The road was also straightened in the village of Fenella, and large gully filled in. Two and a quarter miles of this road was surfaced with crushed field stone. The total expenditure on this road including a considerable amount of other work was $10,667.47. The crushed stone on this road cost, including overhead expenses, $1.30 per yard delivered on the road.

Cremahe Township

In Cremahe township the expenditure was for maintenance only $1,440.20.

Brighton Township

In Brighton township $763.25 was spent in construction on County Road No. 26, and $1,589.15 was spent in maintenance.

Murray Township

In Murray township the total expenditure was $4,844.32. Of ths amount $2,857.99 was spent in construction on Provincial County Road No. 39.

Up to the present time $8,3,774.92 has been spent on the County Road System.

MAN'S THREE PERIODS.

As I see it, a man should divide his life into three periods:

First, that of education, acquiring the fullest and best within his power.

Second, that of achievement; achieving for himself and his family, and discharging the first duty of any man—to see that in case of his incapacity those who are closest to him are provided for. But such provision does not mean an accumulation that becomes to those he leaves behind him an embarrassment rather than a protection. To prevent this, the next period confronts him.

Third, service for others. That is the acid test where many a man falls short; to know instinctively and truly when he has enough, and to be willing, not only to let well enough alone, but to givea helping hand to the other fellow; to recognize, in a practical way, that we are our brothers' keepers; that a brotherhood of man does not exist elsewhere than in an oration or in an after-dinner speech.

Too many men make the mistake, when they reach the point of having enough, of going on pursuing the same old game; accumulating more money, grasping for more power, until either a nervous breakdown overtakes them and a sad incapacity is the result, or they drop "in the harness," which is, of course, calling an early grave by another name. They cannot seem to get the truth into their heads that, as they have been helped by others, so should they now help others.

No man has a right to leave the world as he found it. He must add something to it; either he must make its people better or happier, or he must make the face of the world more beautiful or fairer to look at. And the one really means the other.—Edward Bok.

BOMBED NEWS OFFICE.

LISBON, Dec. 19.— A powerful bomb to which a time fuse was attached exploded last night on the staircase of the building occupied by the royalist organ, Correri Da Manha, badly damaging the newspaper's offices. There were no casualties from the explosion, which is attributed to a discharged printer's revenge. This is the second bomb outrage in the city within a week.

TALES OF A TAXIMAN

ONE evening in Whitehall a tall, smartly-dressed young man swept round the corner in a big, blue car, pulled up a few yards from my cab, and walked over to speak to me.

"For hire?" he asked, and I nodded.

"Yes, sir."

"Then drive to Buckingham Palace and pull up by the pavement at the main entrance and wait there for further instructions."

I gasped and eyed the speaker incredulously.

"Buckingham Palace!"

He regarded me severely.

"Certainly. Would you rather I commissioned another man?"

I shook my head hurriedly. I was very much puzzled and amazed at such a remarkable request, but hastily jerked the gear from neutral and started away with a curt "very good, sir."

Ten minutes later I drew up at the kerb by the main entrance to Buckingham Palace, as ordered, and looked around. Not a soul seemed to take any notice of me.

Presently a second cab, and third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh drew up behind me. A few minutes afterwards there were fifteen cabs in a row.

The sentry on duty eyed us suspiciously. A few of us got into conversation and I learned that all had had the same strange request as myself.

Half an hour passed. Nothing happened. Then another taxi drew up and the driver approached us with a broad grin on his face. I knew him intimately, so it was to me he spoke.

"Say, you chaps, a fellow stopped me just now in Whitehall and asked me to drive here and read this note in this here envelope to any drivers of taxicabs waiting near the entrance to the Palace. He said I wasn't to open the note until I'd got you all together and he gave me ten bob to execute the job. Here goes."

We waited with sinking hearts as he ripped open the envelope and pulled out a small sheet of paper containing three neatly-typewritten words:

"EVER BEEN HAD?"

Had we been instructed to drive to any other address we should have demurred. But the very mention of Buckingham Palace, strange as it was brought us to immediate obedience. We had been had—but I don't think I ever "walked up the garden" so easily either before or since.

A Strange Adventure

I remember, just before midnight some time last year, being stopped by a man at the corner of a fashionable square in the West End and being asked if I could keep my mouth shut.

The man who approached me was obviously not English. I shut my mouth, with a grin, just to show how easy it was.

He seemed amused, looked keenly into my eyes for a moment and then directed me to drive to a foreign legation, only a few houses distant.

I did so, waited at the kerb for ten minutes, and then a dark, cloaked figure emerged. He looked up and down the street and then entered the cab, after ordering me through the speaking tube to drive to the entrance to Hyde Park.

Here he got out, entered the Park—having instructed me to wait—came back and told me to drive to Victoria Station. At this terminus he went for another walk, returned and requested me to drive him to the Mansion House. Here my strange fare went for a further stroll, returning with the request that I should drive him quickly back to the legation.

Arriving, he dismissed me with a pound note besides the legal fare. I have never seen him since, and am still as puzzled as ever to understand the reason for this strange tour on which I had to take him.

I have met with exciting adventures, however, much more obvious and not in the least mysterious.

A young man and woman hailed me in the Strand, and pumping quickly in, called to me through the speaking-tube.

"Hey, driver, make for anywhere at top speed."

I was suspicious. But they had both looked so happy and honest that I asked a deliberate question:

"Why?"

"We've just been married," the young man called, "and my wife's father got to the church in a towering rage, just as the ceremony finished. We escaped the back way but his car is behind. We're both over twenty-one, so you're on good ground. Go like the dickens, old chap, and never mind the fare."

I shall never forget that drive. We raced along the Embankment, right through the West End and out into the country beyond. We kept our distance, but we did not leave the pursuing car behind. My fares had been straight with me and I was doing nothing wrong. I did my best to win.

Fifteen minutes after we left Ealing, there was a loud report from behind I thought someone had fired a shot, but the young man laughed and called:

"They've got a puncture. Take your time, old chap, and drive back to Paddington another way. We're due to catch a train in an hour for Cornwall."

When I left them at the entrance to the terminus, they both thanked me earnestly and the young man handed me a five-pound note while his bride took a flower from her costume coat and placed it in my buttonhole.

But this incident was nothing to one which a friend of mine tells of a wild ride to Scotland.

It was midnight and he was creeping alone past King's Cross Station. A short, stout individual came out, waved his stick and asked my friend—in an unsteady voice—how much petrol he had in his tanks. My friend told him and he nodded.

"I'm going to be frank with you, driver. My young scamp of a son is not of age and he's just made for Scotland in his car to get married to an actress now playing at Dundee. I've got to stop that marriage. The last train's gone. What sort of a cab have you got?"

My friend's cab was capable of forty and no more, but he told his would-be fare to jump in and drove him to a small garage which he owned. Here he took out a racing car that belonged to his brother (then on holiday in the country), and, bidding the nervous old gentleman get in beside him, he set out for the Great North Road.

When he tells me the story of that ride his eyes take on a peculiar gleam, his cheeks flush and his breast swells with pride.

The old gentleman at his side knew nothing about cars, he said. He was old-fashioned and kept to his carriage and pair. He did not give his name, but urged my friend to greater speed every few minutes.

My friend was cautious until Hatfield was passed, and then they were making for Hitchin, and then he—opened out.

His car was capable of almost any racing-speed and he let the old gentleman know it. The old man was frightened to death, but he did not protest. He closed his eyes, held tightly to the seat and remained motionless.

"It was like flying the moon," my friend told me, and I will quote his own words as nearly as possible: "I'd never driven over fifty before, and now we touched eighty-five in some parts. I sat there in the grip of the thrill of speed, and my nerves didn't fail me once. Grantham was passed at length, and then we raced on for, and passed the borders of England long after daybreak.

"We reached Dundee just before noon and made straight for the theatre where the actress was playing. As we arrived we saw her come out, on the arm of a handsome young fellow whom the old man eyed malignantly.

"'There's the young scamp,' he cried. 'Follow them, but don't let them suspect. I'll give them a surprise, hang 'em.'

"The pair got into the young man's car and drove straight to a small church, alighting at the gates and entering. The old gentleman at my side got out, and bade me wait for him and then went inside after his son and the actress.

"Five minutes later the young lady came out, looking furious, and walked off. She was soon followed by the old man and his son, and the latter seemed very humbled and silent.

"The son walked to his car and started the engine, waiting in the driver's seat for his father, who came over and regarded me sternly.

"'What's your name?' he asked and, as I told him, he scribbled with a gold pencil on his cuff.

"'And address?' I told him that, too.

"'What's the damage?' he asked, and, when I mentioned the sum he put his hand into a pocket and drew out a roll of notes.

"He paid me the exact fare—not a penny more and not a cent less. He was very stern.

"'My name,' he said, 'is Lord —— and you have rendered myself and my family a service which I can never repay. But rather than make another drive like you took me through back to London, I'd throw myself in a river. Good-day to you!'

"He was gone. I sat staring mutely after him. His name—a famous and respected name—had startled me. But I felt somewhat angered at his having given me no tip for my trouble, and for risking my neck and my brother's car in his interests for a whole night and part of a day.

"Somewhat bewildered, I returned to London and arrived home a day and a half later, after a moderate drive. When I reached my house I found a parcel awaiting me. I opened it. Inside was a cheque for fifty pounds and a marble clock. My wife said the parcel had been delivered by hand that morning. A smart coachman had brought it. There was a note attached to the cheque:

"'You were on time and this clock will help you to retain your good name. Once more—thank you.'"

I wouldn't mind a few presents like that, myself.

PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. DEVEY

Former Organist of St. John's Church Honored by Friends.

A thoroughly representative gathering of the men of St. John's congregation assembled yesterday at 12.30 p.m. in Coleman's Parlours, the guests of Mr. C. E. Coleman, at a daintily provided luncheon, given in honour of Mr R. J. Devey, as a slight recognition of sterling service in the old parish of St. John's for over seventeen years. Mr. W. R. Morris spoke of the regret felt at the loss of the services of Mr. Devey, and called upon the oldest member of St. John's, Mr. Rush, for half a century a faithful and consistent supporter and worker in St. John's. Mr. Rush was whole-hearted in his appreciation of the services of both Mr. and Mrs. Devey, and another veteran, Mr. John Butcher, gladly took the opportunity to testify to the skill, tact and ability of their guest of honour. Mr. W. E. Conway, a member of St. John's for over thirty years, spoke highly of their guest's services, both in the chancel and among the congregation, particularly to his outstanding ability as a leader.

MR. R. J. DEVEY.

Dr. Hammond, who claimed the honour of infant baptism in the old church, said he had heard of Mr. and Mrs. Devey long before meeting them, and since making their acquaintance could quite understand the general esteem for their work, both in the church and city. Mr. R. N. Stuart and Mr. Jack Patte expressed pleasure at the opportunity of recognizing faithful workers. The latter speaker regretted the departure of the Rev. O. H. Glyn Lloyd, who had made many friends during his short residence in the city. Mr. C. E. Coleman thanked all those present for responding to his invitation, to give honour to whom honour is due, and said that the feeling among the majority of the congregation was that some recognition of such services given by their guest should be made, and that he was happy to be associated with such a representative gathering. The chairman then called upon Mr. W. F. Johnston, who for some years as Warden was officially connected with their guest. There is nothing cranky about Devey, he was always an able and willing officer, always had a good choir, sometimes outnumbering the congregation. His work in St. John's during the war made an impression upon me that can never be effaced, for during the many months that we were without resident clergy, Mr. Devey kept the affairs of the parish, church and Sunday school going, and it was the knowledge of that work which made it a pleasure to present their guest with a cheque for two hundred dollars, a slight token of the affection felt by so many of St. John's congregation whose names appear on the subscription list.

Mr. A. L. Killaly also a word of tribute of Mr. Devey's services to the church.

Mr. R. J. Devey was heartily cheered as he rose to reply, and assured those present of heartfelt appreciation of their kindly expressed opinions of his work among them for the last seventeen years, much of which was undeserved. He had simply tried to do his duty, and asked them to accept his earnest thanks for their splendid present. Reviewing the circumstances of his first coming to Peterborough, Mr. Devey said that the first change made was the (then) monthly choral evensong, since made weekly, the singing of the psalms from Cathedral Psalters, purchased by the late Mrs. Eardly-Wilmot. Several cantatas had been given, and splendid service had been given by the choristers under his direction ,and his feeling of thankfulness for such service could neither be spoken or written. It was beyond expression. Shortly reviewing the events that led to his resignation, the speaker assured them, that the many acts of kindness extended to Mrs. Devey and himself would never be forgotten.

General wishes for a Happy Christmas to each other pleasantly terminated a memorable gathering.

NEW RULES WILL BIND MOTORISTS

Parking Lights, Spot Lights and Brakes Covered in Law Effective at End of Month--Cyclists Need Lights.

Motorists have only a few days to prepare for the new regulations which come into force on December 31, calling for parking lights and defining the use of the spot light. Cyclists, too, are to be required to carry a red light or reflector after that date, and many new rules will come into force to regulate all vehicular traffic. This new law supercedes and embodies all the regulations previously included under the Motor Vehicles Act and amendments, and copies will be distributed to automobile owners, it is expected, with the 1924 license plates. As it comes into force before the plates will be issued, however, it is necessary that motorists should take note of the rules laid down at this time.

The Act provides that a motor vehicle, while standing on a highway at such times as lights are required, may show instead of the lighting equipment prescribed by the section one light carried on the left side of the car in such a manner as to be clearly visible to the front and rear for a distance of 200 feet, white to the front and red to the rear. This light must not be displayed while the vehicle is in motion.

Cycles after dusk and before dawn, must carry on the back a lighted lamp or a red reflecter so placed as to be clearly visible to the driver of a vehicle approaching from the rear. The penalty for non-compliance is, first offence $5, second offence $5 to $10, and third offence $10 to $25.

Spot Lights.

Spot lights or search lights must be affixed to the left side of the vehicle only, and the ray of light shall be directed to the extreme right of the travelled portion of the road, to strike the road within 75 feet of the vehicle. The penalty for infringement of this section is, for the first offence $10 to $15, second $20 to $100, and the permit may be suspended 30 days, and for subsequent offences the fine may be $50 to $200, the offender shall be liable to imprisonment for 30 days, and the license or permit may be cancelled for 6 months.

Good Brakes Required.

Brakes must be in good working order, the new Act says, and are liable to test by any police officer or other officer appointed to carry out the Act. Every motor vehicle shall have at least two brakes in good working condition, the Act says, and these may be tested at any time. If found defective the inspector may order the driver to proceed immediately to put or have his brakes put in good working order. Any person who violates this section is liable on first conviction to a fine of $10 to $50; second conviction $20 to $100, and suspension of his license for 30 days; subsequent offences incur a fine of $50 to $200, imprisonment for 30 days and suspension of the license for 6 months.

RUMORS OF A COUP.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—As a precautionary measure against a new revolutionary movement, Bavarian gendarmes have occupied the Munich Land-Tag or Parliament Buildings, as well as the post and telegraph offices.

Rumors that a coup is being planned have caused the strengthening of forces in all departments under Dictator Von Kahr.

ARMIES STILL TEARING AWAY

Little Harm Being Done in Mexican Revolution

(By Frederick G. Neumier).

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 20—(United Press).—General Obregon's forces completely defeated the rebels in the battle for San Marcos.

The insurgents, retreating from that important railroad centre, burned a bridge and tore up the tracks behind them.

The Federals, however, expect to turn their attention to the Jalisco front once more and to launch a decisive attack to-day or on Friday.

Scores of rebel prisoners were taken when the Dela Huerta forces were defeated at San Marcos and these were to be released to-night.

President Obregon returned from the east front, apparently in good health, although he had a slight cough. He received the Mexican and foreign press in his office at the National Palace and announced the success at San Marcos. Obregon said the rebel general Figueroa still was operating in the State of Guerrero, but that in view of the fact that he was isolated and doing no harm, his activities were not considered important.

President Obregon received to-day from Vera Cruz a photograph of Adolfo De La Huerta, leader of the rebellion, in the uniform of a General of the division.

"Why, he never was in the army before," exclaimed the President, adding with a hearty chuckle "Santa Claus must have brought him the uniform."

Revolutionary headquarters here announces a general retreat of the Obregon forces from Apizaco. A new line of defence of the Federal forces now runs from Munoz, with the base of operations at Irola Station, about 35 miles north-east of Mexico City.

A decisive battle of the revolution in Mexico now is being fought out, it appears, in a triangle formed by the towns of Puebla, Apizaco and San Marcos, about 65 miles east of the national capital. President Obregon seems to be giving the operation his personal attention in the field.

WAS LLOYD GEORGE SEEKING CONVERTS?

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press)—Despite Lloyd George's stigmatizing as pure invention the statement that he came back from Canada and the United States prepared to wave the protection Banner, the Morning Post remains a doubting Thomas. "A cabinet Minister," the Post says, "first gave currency to the assertion and remained unrebuked." Lloyd George's own organ, the Daily Chronicle, emphatically approved the preference resolutions of the Imperial Conference, the Post continus and Lloyd George's friend Lord Beaverbrook with whom he secretly took council immediately on landing was evidently uncertain if Lloyd George would declare for protection or free trade. "If all the time he were fixed as the polar star," says the Post, "there can be only one explanation of his hurried meeting at Lord Beaverbrook's place with such convinced tariffites as Lord Birkenhead and Austen Chamberlain. Lloyd George must have sought to convert them from heresies in which they had been associated with him in the coalition government."

Water Street Has Hidden Treasures Says Old Citizen

It is not desired to boost the value of real estate on Water street or to cause a battle for houses there, but an authentic report has reached The Examiner of hidden treasure in that vicinity.

Years and years ago, twenty-six years to be exact, an old timer hid his treasure, forgot it, and left the house. So far as he knows it has not yet been recovered.

Unlike most treasure trove that has rusted and molded, every year increases its value, for it is champagne—champagne of an early vintage and with 26 years' aging in its present location. Real Mumm champaigne, in a quantity not stated, is within a few feet of someone's head as he sleeps every night.

'The Excellence of Finished Form' was the subject of a scholarly lecture delivered to the Women's Canadian Club yesterday afternoon in the assembly hall at the Public Library, by the Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, M.A., of Norwood, Rural Dean of Peterboro. The president of the club, Miss A. Lancaster, was in the chair.

Rev. Mr. O'Conor-Fenton's paper dealt mainly with finished form in literature, both poetry and prose, and included also a brief final dissertation on form in such general matters as enunciation, feminine attire and house furnishings.

The speaker quoted from the works of ancient and modern authors in giving examples of finish and excellence in literary form. Pindar's Odes, a quatrain of Lord Byron, Shapespeare, in one notable example, "after life's fitful fever, he sleeps well," with its double alliteration, Gray's Elegy, as an instance of smoothscansion and perfection of rhyme, Coventry Patmore, were all referred to. Rev. Mr. O'Conor-Fenton spoke of the beauty of phrasing contained in the authorized version of the Bible, instancing as examples of exquisite literary art the descriptions of the death of Absalom and of Jezebel, and the strength in the story of the Prodigal Son. He read a page from Lord Bryce's "Founding of the Holy Roman Empire," giving an account of the Emperor Charlemagne.

Errors in Use of Words.

Rev. Mr. O'Conor-Fenton deplored the habit of newspapers in "continually making words synonymous which have a different meaning. The dictionary should be consulted every now and then." The use of the word "transpire," which the speaker said meant "to become known outside the place where a thing happens," was used constantly in print as of a certain thing having happened. The reading of Macauley and of Lord Bryce and of Richard Harding Davis in fiction, was recommended for good use of words. A small Canadian magazine printed in Montreal, "World Wide," was also commended for its excellent articles by good writers.

[illegible] of speech is in the vowel," said the speaker, who deplored slipshod enunciation of the short vowels, the undue prolongation of the broad "a" in other, affected instances, and the clipping of final consonants. Incorrect grammar, such as mistakes made in the cases of pronouns, as "you and I," instead of "you and me," and the habitual use of the final preposition, such as "the lady I was walking with," or "the lady who I was walking with," or "the lady whom I was walking with," instead of "the lady with whom I was walking," were also instanced as regrettable examples of general usage, along with the elimination of proper accentuation of words from American speech.

Art, Dress, Etc.

Passing to errors in artistic form, Rev. Mr. O'Conor-Fenton deplored also the choice of wall-papers, "of crude and hideous forms and colors," of grotesquely-patterned and fashioned chinaware, and of styles in feminine apparel which tended to make the grandmother and grandchild appear similar, also the common expression of a "rough diamond" used to describe the character of one whose real worth was hidden.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Miss M. Archer and seconded by Mrs. F. D. Kerr.

APPRENTICESHIP TO BE RESTORED AGAIN.

Annual Report of Department of Labor Stresses This Need.

OTTAWA, December 20.—(Canadian Press). — According to the annual report of the Department of Labour, "There is a growing conviction on the part of employers, employees, and educationists that a revival of apprenticeship in some form suitable to modern industrial conditions is needed for the training of Canadian youth. In some of the larger industrial centres," continues the report, "the ocational schools are making special provision for the training of apprentices in part-time and evening classes, but very little effort has been made to assist employers in selecting suitable boys for apprenticeship or in providing suitable shop training for boys. Apprenticeship offers one of the most hopeful fields for the development of vocational education and the Canadian schools are missing a splendid opportunity in not co-operating with industry in this connection and assuming the leadership where necessary."

Milady's Attire for Coming Occasions

Evening Gowns

THE discriminating woman will recognize the correctness of these gowns by their slim straight silhouette, or perhaps by the flounced skirt and semi-basque waist, by the picturesque chemise style and by the long draped lines of yet another model. She will appreciate, too, the exquisite fabrics, velvets and shimmering satins, in the season's loveliest colors.

Jade Green Cut Velvet

This graceful Gown is the proud possessor of a wrap-around skirt, which gives a pleasing side drape effect held in place by a lovely rhinestone buckle, oblong in shape; drape almost touches floor and adds extreme length to the costume. Cut Velvet in Rose design is the material, bodice having camisole of Silver Tissue. All in all, it presents a lurid picture of unending charm. Size 36.

Turquoise Charmeuse

Soft lights, gay music! What a setting for this exquisite Frock. Turquoise Blue Charmeuse is fashioned into an extremely fascinating Gown, with novelty draped skirt effect. Crystal beads and pearls are arranged to form scroll design, and make a most becoming trim for such a garment. Bodice gives soft drape effect, falling from shoulder to waistline at the back, with Silver Tissue Camisole. Size 38.

French Indeed

This time it is the charming French Frock of Jade Green Velvet. Ah! it has indeed been inspired by Paris, for ts effective, rich beading designs, carried out in beads of crystal, and fine silver thread traceries, bespeak what is new in the gay city, where Madame Fashion wends her winning way. It possesses a soft crush girdle of self material, and is, of course, sleeveless. Size 16.

Styles for Evening wear are so varied that every woman may choose here the Frock that enhances most her individual charm of colouring and line.

Fashion's Footsteps Are All Atwimkle with Lovely Silver Slippers

SLIPPERS that mean so much in carrying out to the finest touch of perfection the neatness and individual charm of one's new Gown were never in such a captivating array, for everything is in accord with the latest whim of Madam Fashion. Milady is never more enchanting than when shod in the brilliance of brocaded silver. Never was there so much variety in line, in shape or in decoration as is presented for Winter, 1923.

Black Satin

One of our newest strap designs in this new pattern. Two traps cross one another at the instep and fasten with buttons on opposite sides of the Shoe. Straps are of black suede, with overlay pattern of same material adorning the uppers. Full Spanish heel. Priced at $8.75.

Black Suede

A Cuban covered heel promises both comfort and good style in this lovely Dress Slipper of black suede. A splendid Shoe for the woman who desires a Slipper without an extremely high heel. Uppers are black suede throughout and one wide strap crosses the instep. Price, $8.75.

New Silver Brocade

Silver brocade, Fashion's favorite for evening wear, is charmingly shown in this new Slipper built on an extremely dressy last with a high Louis heel. Turn soles. These prove that while being up-to-the-minute in style correctness, comfort has not been wholly forgotten. Priced at $12.50.

Patent and Suede

This very popular pattern is from soft pliable patent and very fine suede. The vamp is of the former material and strap, quarter and heel covering of latter. Strap is wide and fastens with two buttons. The heel is Spanish junior, assuring the utmost in comfort. Widths AA to D. Sizes 2½ to 7½. Priced at $10.00.

To Match Gowns

If one's gown calls for it; black satin, white satin or silver brocade may be selected with equal correctness. Drop in at your leisure to try them on and be assured of a perfect fit and style correctness.

Rhinestone Ornaments

Rhinestone Ornaments are to be had in a number of artistic designs. These fit over the strap and cover the button, or may be fastened to the strap at instep. Price, $1.50 pair.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20. — (United Press).—The triumph of the administration in the fight to sidetrack the Bonus Bill and its increasing chances of success in the struggle over the chairmanship of the Senate Inter-State Commerce Committee gave a strong tone to the general list at the opening of the Stock Exchange.

American Can., Studebaker, Steel and other industrial leaders scored good gains over the previous close and substantial advances took place in several specialties. Stocks continued to reflect the favorable Washington developments through the first hour. Great buoyancy was in evidence among the industrialist leaders like Dupont, Corn Products, Baldwin and Car, while the rails developed an improved tone with Northern Pacific leading. Shorts in Corn Products were said to have returned a large amount of the borrowed stock; in some cases, the losses ranged from 20 to 35 points from the low of the year. Corn Products is up nearly 40 points. The directors will meet next week for dividend action, but there are no intimations of a change in the rate. In view of the tax selling, the market has acted remarkably well. Bankers, brokers and traders who have been working on the constructive side have not abandoned their bullish position, and look for an early resumption of the general forward movement. Irregularity may be experienced between now and January 1, but no pronounced slump is looked for.

IN MEMORIAM.

JACOBS.—In loving memory of Edward Jacobs, who died December 20, 1922.

Only gone awhile before us,
We shall meet him by and by,
If we are prepared to enter
The bright mansions in the sky.

For there is hope, a blessed hope,
Which our dear Lord has given,
When days and years are past and gone,
We all may meet in Heaven.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

OCCUPATION AND HEALTH

Glancing through the American Contractor the other day, I was struck with the thought of the great influence of certain kinds of work on the health of the individual. The plumbing situation was up for discussion.

The educationl director of the plumbing and heating industry gives us some things to attract our attention. In spite of the large wage attached to the job, the credit of plumbing is losing workers rapidly. If the present rate of loss continues, according to the author, in a quarter of a century the genus plumber will be found only in the story book of the museum.

Here is a health warning for the public. A large city only recently wound up a ten-year fight for health and sanitary sewage disposal by decreeing that all outside privy vaults should be removed and modern plumbing installed in two years. But there were not enough plumbers to do the work. The improvements have to wait and ill health continues from the unsanitary conditions, on account of loss of workers from the trades.

This is true of other trades as well. Officials report that during the last two years, in 17 building trades, there has been a loss of 60,000 workers.

Another phase of the health situation is this:

A news item contains the information that building costs are so high, principally on account of labor shortage, that thousands of would-be home builders are living in cramped apartment quarters. The health of these families is suffering.

Evidently the workers have sought some other field of endeavor. They have left the trades for the so-called white-collar jobs. Muscles and manhood are twin brothers. The health of our nation demands an educated manual labor. The life-blood of our country must rally for health or we perish.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Nearly every housekeeper likes to "keep open house" during the holidays. This is specially true when there are "youngsters" home from boarding school and college.

The "eats" need not be elaborate or lavish, but if the cookie crock is full and the bread box running over young appetites can be satisfied at a minute's notice.

An unusual hot drink served with little cakes and sandwiches in the evening is sure to be liked.

This hot punch is easy to make, but spicy and so good!

Hot Punch

Four lemons, ½ teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon cloves, 1 glass or ½ cup raspberry jelly, 2 oranges, 6 cups grape juice, 2 cups hot water.

Squeeze juice from lemons. Add sugar, spices and oranges cut in thin slices. Let stand in a warm place for two hours. Heat grape juice, and hot water and jelly and pour over first mixture. Cover and let stand five minutes. Serve at once.

Very often after opening a can of pineapple there seems to be nothing to do with the juice. This drink uses the juice in a delicious fashion:

Hot Pineapple Punch

Two cups strong tea, ½ to ¾ cup pineapple juice, ¾ cup orange juice, 2 cups boiling water, 2 cups sugar.

Make a syrup of the sugar and boiling water. Add the tea, freshly made and hot, the fruit juices and more hot water if necessary to give the desired strength and sweetness. Serve hot with maraschino cherries.

Walnut cookies are very easily made and sure to be liked.

Walnut Cookies

Two cups light brown sugar, 1½ cups butter and lard mixed, 3 eggs, 5 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1½ cups broken walnut meats, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Cream shortening and sugar, add one cup sifted flour and beat well. Add eggs well beaten. Mix and sift remaining flour, salt, soda, and cinnamon. Add to first mixture. Mix thoroughly and add nuts. Form into a long, round roll not more than two and one-half inches in diameter and let stand on ice or in a cold place over night. In the morning cut in thin slices and bake in a moderate oven until brown. This rule will make a big "batch" of cookies.

Popcorn drops are "different," but good.

Popcorn Drops

One-fourth cup sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup maple syrup, 1 teaspoon salt, 3½ cups ground popcorn, 2 eggs, 2¼ cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Cream shortening and sugar. Beat in one-quarter cup flour and add maple syrup. Add salt, popcorn and eggs well beaten. Mix and sift flour and baking powder and add to first mixture. Add vanilla. Mix well. Drop from a spoon onto a well oiled cookie sheet and bake 10 minutes in a hot oven.

GAVE A TEACHER A FAREWELL TEA

Miss E. Thomlinson Honored by Home and School Association.

Last evening, between the hours of half-past four and half-past seven o'clock, a farewell tea in honor of Miss E. Thomlinson was held in the kindergarten room of the Central School, under the auspices of the Home and School Association. Mrs. J. A. Spencer acted as convenor of tea arrangements, assisted by Mrs. F. Bartlett, Mrs. Lush and Mrs. D. R. Weldon. The table was prettily decorated with red carnations and ferns. Mrs. O. M. Steer poured tea, and Mrs. K. S. Wightman served salads. Enjoyable vocal solos were given during the afternoon by Mrs. A. A. Perrin, who sang "Smilin' Through," and by the Misses Batten. The president of the Association, Mrs. F. Miller, spoke of the pleasure experienced by the society in entertaining the school staff and regretted Miss Thomlinson's departure.

The secretary, Mrs. Frank McCarthy, read the following address:

"Dear Miss Thomlinson,—Having learned of your resignation from the staff of the Central School, and your intended departure from the city, we felt we could not let you leave us without expressing to you our appreciation of your lengthy and efficient service in our school.

"As mothers we appreciate the value of your earnest, painstaking and kindly efforts to assist our children and the high ideals you have endeavored to instill in their characters. We lose a member from our Association whom we have come to regard as a real friend.

"Please accept this little gift as a slight token of our good-will, and when wearing it, we hope you will remember dear old Central School."

Miss Thomlinson replied in a brief, appropriate speech.

Accompanying the address was the gift of a dainty gold bar-pin.

Mr. A. Mowat expressed regret at the departure of Miss Thomlinson, and hoped for her early return.

A hearty vote of thanks to the Home and School Association was tendered, on motion of K. S. Wightman, seconded by A. Mowat.

Condensers across the inductance in your set will raise the wavelength. Place a 23-plate condenser across the primary of your variocoupler, or across the secondary if you have a two-circuit tuner. If the secondary or rotor of your variocoupler has fifty turns on it a 23-plate condenser across it will permit you to tune from 200 to 500 meters. If this is not high enough, a fixed condenser of .0005 capacity may be placed across the coil also or a 43-plate condenser may be used. If the inductance consists of a variometer the same will be true.

You must remember that the tickler coil, the plate variometer, or rotor of the variocoupler, or whatever inductance is used to secure regeneration, must be increased also if regeneration is to be secured on the higher wavelengths. This can be accomplished by placing a .00025 fixed condenser across the coil or variometer. An 11-plate condenser can be used here also but it adds one more tuning unit, and adds to the expense and takes up room in your set. A loading coil of about 25 or 30 turns of number 22 cotton covered wire wound on a 3-inch tube, single layer, can be placed in series with the plate inductance to accomplish the same results. To make this change remove the wire from the plate terminal on the detector tube socket and attach it to one side of the coil, placing the other connection of the coil on the socket terminal where the connection from the plate inductance was formerly.

It will be found, however, that too much regeneration will be secured on the shorter wavelengths if the set is left in this manner and it is best to place a switch around the loading coil so that it can be cut out when you are tuning in on lower wavelengths. In the same manner a witch should be placed in series with the loading condensers so that the circuit can be opened when using the lower wavelengths.

Ministers of the Gospel take Dreco themselves and recommend it to their parishioners.

Demand for Dreco has broken all records for absolute merit it is responsible for this unprecedented success.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterborough by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in other cities as follows: Lakefield—E. H. Northey. Campbellford—J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

Lost Weight Rapidly

Mr. Powell, much alarmed at his condition, tries Dreco and soon finds himself on highroad to perfect health again.

"For sometime past I had been in a run-down condition," says Mr. G. M. Powell, of 10 Lundy's Lane, Peterboro, Ont. "Although I had always taken the best of care of myself, I was rapidly losing weight. I had a tired, worn out feeling that I couldn't rid myself of and my appetite was poor. What little I did eat caused intense suffering from indigestion and gas formations on my stomach gave me great distress.

"My kidneys were out of order too and nothing I took seemed to do either them or my stomach any good. Finally, I heard about Dreco and the splendid work it was doing right here in Peterboro. I have taken two bottles of this great remedy and have improved wonderfully. Have already increased my weight and that tired feeling has disappeared.

"What is more to the point, my food digests without the slightest trouble. My appetite is a joy to me and my kidneys are in much better shape than they have been for a long time."

The human body is the most delicate piece of machinery there is. It takes very little to put it out of order. Often you are at a loss to know the cause. You only know the effect, which is suffering. That is the time to let Dreco, the pure herbal system cleanser and rectifier help you. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

Pain's Like Knife Stabs

Peterboro man suffered the agonies of impaired digestion till DRECO came to tone his organs and regulate them back to health working order.

"For years I have suffered terribly from gas on the stomach," says Mr. R. F. Buntin, of 584 Chamberlain St., Peterboro, Ont. "It was at its worst in the morning when I would get stabbing pains just like a knife going through me. I also had severe dizzy spells and bad attacks of heartburn. My kidneys were out of order too, and I would often get acute pains across my back. Constipation was also a source of great distress and I had to constantly be taking harsh laxatives.

"I tried a lot of different medicines, but got no relief till I tried Dreco, two bottles of which have put me in better condition than I have been for years. It has almost completely relieved me of gas and I have a splendid appetite, eating and enjoying everything that comes my way. My kidneys are much improved too, and my bowels are regular every day. Dreco is, in my opinion, a good medicine and it does everything that is claimed for it."

Dreco has earned the confidence of thousands of sufferers in just this way. It lives up to every claim and stops pain and distress, by putting the whole digestive system in healthy working order after first thoroughly cleansing it of impurities. Dreco is a purely vegetable preparation and contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

CONFERENCE DOES NOT BIND BRITAIN

Writer Declares Doctrine is Undemocratic and Revolutionary.

LONDON, Dec 20.—(Canadian Press Cable).—A writer in times with reference to Premier Baldwin's preference proposals challenges as revolutionary and undemocratic the doctrine enunciated by Premier Massey on New Zealand and Premier Smuts of South Africa, that the Imperial Government, gave undertakings at the Imperial conference which bind the British people. He says he cannot conceive of Canada or Australia sending delegations to the conference on the understanding that what ever the delegates accept would bind the Dominions. This, says the correspondent, is a new theory and contradicts the whole history of the Imperial conference.

Christmas Parlor Games

Continuoud merriment should be the keynote of a successful Christmas party, and nothing is more conducive to this than the proposition by the prospective hostess of a varied repertory of games and puzzl es likely to appeal to all the guests and in which all can join.

Sometimes a good deal more fun can be got out of impromptu games than from those which have been pre-arranged. Here is an idea that a hostess once followed at Christmas with great success. When all her guests had arrived she announced that she wanted each one of them to contribute to the fun of the evening by suggesting a game, so that everybody should have a really good time. Taking a bowl from the table she said gaily! "I want each of you to think of a dandy game in which all can join; write your suggestions on slips of paper. Place them in the bowl and then we shall have lots of fun.

The idea was at once seized upon and in a few minutes the little bowl was full of merry thoughts. Here is a brief note of some of the games so chosen. The first game selected was "What is it?" One player went out of the room and the others decided upon a subject either from fiction or history that had a touch of Christmas about it, such as the Star of Bethlehem, Santa Claus, Cinderella, the original Christmas Tree, etc. The player who was "IT" came back into the room and was asked to guess the subject chosen, which he had to do by skilful questioning. The only answer he might receive from the other players was "Yes," "No," or "I don't know."

Next came "Alphabetic Sentences," someone starting with a word and each player following on with another word beginning with the same initial and helping to make up a sentence. This became quite difficult as the game proceeded and caused a good deal of fun and thinking.

"Famous Numbers" was also a good game. For this, the players took sides just as they sat about the room. Someone called a number from one side which was answered by the other side with a famous fact connected with it. Thus if "Seven" were called out, the answer might be "The seven wonders of the world," "The Seven Ages of Man," "We are Seven," "The Seven Days of the Week," and so on.

Another game suggested was "The Choir."

In this game the players are divided into two groups, one group being blindfolded and each player sitting beside an empty chair. Then the players of the sitting group quietly slipped into the vacant chairs and at the word "Sing" from the Mistress of Ceremonies, who led off with the keynote, they all sang "Three Blind Mice" and their blind neighbours had to guess the identity of the singers from their voices. This game is only successful when the players have been able to talk together beforehand. When they are very well known to each other it must be the business of the singing ones to try to camouflage their voices as much as possible. Those who generally sing in a high key should sing in a low one and vice versa. The blind players who fail to guess aright must each pay a forfeit. All the while the game is repeated twice, only the blindfold players may retain their seats the singers changing places.

A Poetic Puzzle

No Christmas party is complete without a few puzzles, and here are a few suggestions designed to keep the company amused for hours.

Can you make any sense out of these lines?

DLNGSTNTHSMLDTWLGHTDM
WHLSTBRDSBWLDSWFTTVGL-
CRCLNGSKM.
LGHTWNDSNSGHNGSNKTLLR-
SNGBRGHT.
NGTHSVRGNPLGRMSWMSNVV-DLGHT.

It only needs the addition of one vowel to make four lines of quite good poetry. The letter is "i." Put it in the right places and the lines will read.

Idling I sit in this mild twilight dim,
Whilst birds in wild swift vigil circling skim,
Light winds in sighing sink, till rising bright
Night's virgin pilgrim swims in vivid light.

The Mystery Arm

When you have done this try the mystery of the moving arm. Choose one of your party and make him or her stand about eighteen inches from the wall. Tell your victim to stiffen the arm nearest the wall and move it away from the body until the back of the hand touches the wall. He must stand firm and press the wall as hard as possible with the back of his hand for half a minute. Now tell him to step away and relax his arm. He will be astonished to find his arm gradually rising without any effort on his part as if some invisible person were lifting it. The arm will rise until it is level with the shoulder, and then slowly sink back again.

Fun In Forfeits

Here are some forfeits which will add to the gaiety of the party. Bite an inch off a foot-rule—all that has to be done is to hold the foot-rule an inch away from your mouth and then make a bite at an imaginary object.

Kiss the lady you love best without anyone knowing it. You can do this by kissing every girl in the room. This forfeit is naturally popular.

An ordinary feather will provide any amount of fun and is the medium of a game especially popular with children. Select one that will float in the air, and throw it about the heads of the players, who sit in a circle. The object of the game is to keep the feather in the air by blowihg. If the feather touches anyone that person must pay a forfeit.

Fortune Telling

Telling fortunes is another splendid way of keeping a party cheerful. This can be done in many ways, among them being the use of dominoes. Shuffle the pieces face downwards on the table and allow your friends to take up three pieces each. The dominoes can be interpreted as follows: One blank means that the person drawing it will have to be more careful with his money and goods or he will experience difficulties. A double blank means bad luck in love, a double ace great good fortune. Two-blank signifies hard times ahead; a double-two indicates a legacy and so on. You can attach a meaning to each piece and cause great fun with your answers.

Thought reading is also quite easy but it is necessary in this case to have an accomplice in the room. Required apparatus includes a small pencil, a piece of paper and a small table or stool. Having made your preparations ask the party to think of any number up to ninety-nine, and then retire from the room. The assistant writes the number selected on the paper, folds it, and places it on the pable with the pencil. Then the thought-reader is called in and gives his answer after holding the paper and pencil to his head.

The secret lies in the fact that the thought reader and his assistant have previously divided the table into nine divisions each of which is numbered. If, supposing the number chosen is fifteen, the assistent places the pencil on Division one and the paper on division five. The "Wizard" thus knows which number to answer, the pencil indicating tens and the paper, units. Of course no lines or other marks must be made on the table. The divisions must be carried in the memory.

CREAMERIES IN CANADA

Q.—How many creameries are there in Canada-

A.—Canada has 1166 creameries. The production of creamery butter amounts to over $50,000,000 worth a year, making the Dominion one of the leading butter producing couutries.

REGINA

Q.—When was Regina made a capital-

A.—On August 23, 1882, Regina became the capital of the Northwest Territories, now Saskatchewan. The site was called Wascana in the Creetongue where the red men met for their council fires in the days when France and England fought for the possession of Canada.

MILITARY FUNERAL OF VETERAN AT MARMORA

Fred Simmons Succumbed to Tuberculosis Contracted Overseas—Trip to the Pacific Coast Was Unavailing.

SCHOOL CONCERT.

MARMORA, Dec. 20.—The funeral of the late Fred Simmons was held on Monday afternoon. It was a military funeral as the deceased was one of the veterans of the Great War. Six of his comrades were pall-bearers.

The service was held in the Methodist Church at 2.30 p.m. the Rev. D. R. Clare officiating. The text taken was "Is my Son Absolom safe." He spoke on the evils and temptations which meet the young people of the present day. He said one speaker gives four things as necessary in the making of a good young man.

(1) To know how to spend money
(2) To make the best use of their time.
(3) To choose good associates.
(4) To have genial employment.

Mr. Clare said these ought to be supplemented by a knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Mr. Clare also impressed upon the parents present their responsibility in guiding the young life of the present day.

Among those present from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Will Simmons of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. John Simmons of Campbellford, Mr and Mrs. Spencer Simons of Deloro Mr. Huffman of Brockville and Mr. and Mrs. Downard of North Marmora.

Fred leaves to mourn his loss his mother and father, Mrs. and Mr. Dave Simmons, his two sisters, the Misses Della and Constance Simmons and his two brothers, Floyd of Niagara and Kenneth at home.

Fred died from that dire disease tuberculosis contracted while overseas. Some time after returning home he took a trip to the coast ending up in California where he stayed last April.

Since then he has been almost constantly confined to his bed. He was a young man of sterling qualities and a patient sufferer through his long illness.

Church Bazaar

The Ladies of Trinity and Saint Pauls Anglican Churches, held a bazaar on Tuesday in the Council Chambers.

A splendid display of aprons knitted goods and fancy work was shown as well as the tempting table full of home made cooking. This included homemade bread and buns, cakes pies, small cakes, fruit, cream and pickles.

The Misses Lillieth Michen and Velma Jones sold tickets on a raffle for a beautiful doll.

A play from Stirling was given in the evening under the auspices of the Ladies. Altogether the bazaar was a splendid success.

Spry's School Social

On Tuesday evening a combined Christmas tree and Box Social was given by the Public and Sunday Schools of Spry's Settlement in the school house.

The school was very tastily decorated with Christmas decorations and much credit is due the teacher Miss McKenzie for the way in which the children were trained.

The children gave some Christmas choruses, recitations and a little acrostic called "The Old Stocking," also a star drill which was exceptionally well given. The girls wore white bouses and red white and blue skirts. The boys wore red white and blue trousers and light blouses. They carried wands with red stars covered with tinsel. The drill was composed of many different movements all of which the children carried out without a mistake.

Other items of the programme were given by the Brunson orchestra also a minstrel orchestra which received a great deal of applause. The minstrel boys should patent the invention of their new instrument. It would make them a fortune.

There was also a dialogue "A commotion on Ginger Bread Hill", given by some of the older members of the community. In this the disputes of the neighborhood were settled by methods of modern warfare.

At the end of the programme Santa Claus arrived and distributed presents from a well-laden tree. This was an item of special interest because many of the children had never been present at a Christmas Tree before as that Settlement has not had a Christmas Tree for a number of years. Their bright wide open eyes and exclamations of delight showed that they fully enjoyed Santa's visit.

The Rev. D. R. Clare was chairman of the evening. After the programme the boxes were auctioned by Mr. Archie McComb.

The bidding was quick and the competition keen, one basket selling at $5, several other going about $4. The proceeds of the evening was over $38.

WEDDING BELLS

DINSDALE—DONNELLY.

(Special to the Examiner.)

KINGSTON, December 19. — On Wednesday evening at nine o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Earl street, the marriage was solemnized by Rev. J. W. Stephen, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church of Doris Eileen, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Donnelly, and Mr. Harry Hamblin Dinsdale, of Peterboro, son of Mrs. John S. Dinsdale and the late Mr. Dinsdale, of Keene, Ont.

The long drawing room was decorated with palms, pink and white flowers, and at one end was an arch of evergreens. Miss Ruby Donnelly, a cousin of the bride, played the wedding march as the bridal party entered.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a beautiful gown of ivory chiffon velvet draped at one side and caught with an ornament of rhinestones, duchess lace cascaded, while from her shoulders fell a court train of the velvet lined with shell pink. Two puffings of georgette and a bow knot appliqued in silk and rhinestones further enriched the train of the handsome gown with which a string of pearls was worn. The veil of tulle fell from a coronet of duchess lace and orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of white and ophelia roses showered with lily of the valley. Miss Harriet Donnelly, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid and wore a charming frock of honeydew brocaded flat crepe trimmed with georgette and crystals.

A wreath of silver leaves was on her dark hair and her bouquet was an old fashioned one of ophelia roses and violets.

Mr. Bruce Mills of Peterboro was groomsman.

Pink and white flowers were in the dining room where the bride's table was centred with a wedding cake crowned with lily of the valley.

The groom's gift to the bride was a platinum and a diamond ring; to the bridesmaid and pianist he gave gold bar pins set with pearls; and to his groomsman, a pair of gold cuff links.

Mr and Mrs. Dinsdale left on the midnight train for Detroit, and other western cities and after January 1st will make their home in Peterboro.

The bride travelled in an imported French frock of poiret twill with touches of Persian embroidery. Her hat was a small one of grey cannot velvet with quills and her shoes and stockings were also grey. With this smart costume she wore a seal coat with Alaska sable collar.

TREATY LIMITATIONS NOT BEING EXCEEDED

Enquiry Made Into Quantity of Water Diverted at Niagara Falls.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 20.—(By Canadian Press).—Careful inquiries here were met with the positive statement that treaty limitaions on the quantity of water to be diverted at Niagara Falls for power purposes are not being exceeded on the Canadian side. The statement is said to have been made by engineers of the Chicago Sanitary District that Canada is exceeding amount permitted by the treaty by 7,500,000 cubic feet per second. This was given absolute denial. It was also stated that, on the suggestion of United States interests an international board of engineers had been appointed a few weeks ago to see that the treaty limitations are being lived up to. The Board, it was stated, had been at work several weeks and up to the present no report had been made by it to either government which would indicate that treaty limitajons were being exceeded.

Thin Film on Tuesday Night, With Inch Fringe Along Shore — A Local Record.

WALTER HIERS AT CAPITOL FRIDAY, SATURDAY

How would you like to ask five dollars for information you had and have the buyers misunderstand and give you five thousand dollars?

That exceptional situation arises in "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," a Paramount Walter Hiers first star picture, which comes to the Capitol Theatre Friday and Saturday. Walter spends his last ten cent piece for a cigar. Inside the band of that cigar is a secret message from an insurrecto gang in Santo Dinero, a South American republic, to secret agents of the revolutionists in this country.

When the agents attempt to get the information from Hiers as to what was in the band, he agrees to sell it. "How much?" demands the secret agent quickly.

Astounded by the sudden request, Hiers is unable to talk. Instead, he merely holds up his two hands and signifies "ten," but he means "ten dollars."

"Too much," cries the other and indicates that he will compromise on five, to which Walter agrees.

Then the stranger pays Hiers five thousand dollars, and he nearly falls through the floor.

What he does with the five thousand makes a story as full of laughs and thrills and romance as can be imagined.

Jacqueline Logan is featured as leading woman and heads an exceptionally capable supporting cast. The production is massive and beautiful, and there are many laughs as well as thrills in the development of the story.

Yesterday and to-day, "The Leopardess," with Alice Brady in the stellar role, is playing at the Capitol Theatre, along with two excellent comedies that kept their audiences in fits of laughter yesterday. A mermaid comedy; "High Life," and a Cameo mixup, in "Dog Sense," are the funny hits of the programme.

"The Leopardess' is a 'thriller' episode, woven about an English-native maiden from the South Sea islands, who is brought to New York as the bride of a millionaire yachtsman, who tries to tame her in the same manner as he uses with his savage leopardess. The big, wild beast is the main figure in an exciting story, and proves the final Nemesis of the man who has tortured it for years. He carries the creature with him everywhere, and wrecks his desire for cruelty on the caged cat.

The hero of the piece is the sea captain, Edward Langford, playing opposite Alice Brady as Tiare, the half-caste girl of the islands, who is pursued by Montagu Love, in the role of the villain of the story.

AT THE GRAND.

VIOLA DANA AS A RUNAWAY BRIDE

In "June Madness," Coming to the Regent, She Plays Modern Young Madcap

"June Madness," a Metro picture starring Viola Dana, will be the featured attraction at the Regent Theatre beginning to-day. It is a comedy that commences where most pictures leave off,—at the altar. Clytie Whitmore is being married, but she does not like the idea. The bridegroom has a six-cipher fortune, but his personality is a cipher, too, though that phase doesn't matter with Clytie's mother.

Just as the ceremony is about to be performed, with Mamma smiling and young girls whispering, and the society reporters compiling the roster of those present, Clytie trips, falls and gets a black eye. It is providential for it gives her the impetus to break away and make a dash for liberty just as the unofficiating minister begins to wind up his delivery.

All rush after her—friends, relatives, Mamma, witnesses, ushers, the clergyman—but Clytie makes a clean getaway, aided by a handsome young jazz orchestra leader who comes along in his roadster. And now the fun commences. When Clytie gets home they make a prisoner of her, but not for very long. Again she is on a rampage, leading everybody a merry chase, disturbing the calm assurance of people who cant realize that when June madness comes anything may happen, even to the throwing of a million dollar fish back into the pond.

The Jazz King, played by Bryant Washburn, appears on the scene again, and Clytie tries to baffle him, too. He is a person of courage and resource, and a merry contest ensues while determined Mamma and determined detectives seek the trail.

Harry Beaumont directed "June Madness," also making the adaptation from the original story by Cros by George.

AT THE ROYAL.

Read this clipped from New York Times. See the picture to-night.

To those who delight in speeding automobiles, with agreeable suspense, plenty of fair comedy, in spite of impossible incidents, The Drivin' Fool," with Wally Van, will prove entertaining. This picture was presented yesterday at the Cameo and it was evident that the director, Robert J. Thornby, decided that none of those who see it will complain of wearying moments.

Wally Van, the young speed maniac fills the role of Hal Locke with humor and zeal. He is convincing in his various predicaments and does not laugh at his own fun-making, which, of course, makes it all the better.

This production opens with Van going about sixty miles an hour in a neat little roadster, having an appointment with Sylvia Moorhead (Patsy Ruth Miller) at half past 8 o'clock that night. He gets to his own home in San Francisco just in time to be able to take a shower and change into his dinner jacket. Sylvia is about to bemoan his tardiness when the young scamp turns up, punctual to the dot. Hal is a worthless lot, his sole asset being his love for Sylvia. The only thing he can do is to run an automobile beyond the speed limit. When confronted by a policeman he always insists that his car can't make more than thirty milesan hour, even when he treads on it hard."

Hal's father, Henry Locke (Wilton Taylor), is one of the officials of the Golden Gate Packing Company, and his hope that Hal will settle down to work for the concern dwindles day by day. The firm of Grayson & Co. of New York are envious of the business of the packing concern and they hold a contract in which it is stipulated that $500,000 is payable on a certain date on or before noon. The latter containing the check is supposed to have been mailed, but a representative in San Francisco has intentionally delayed the missive. That day the whole railroad system of the country is paralyzed, and it does not seem as if there is a chance of getting the half million dollar check to Wall street in time to stop the Eastern concern from taking over the packing company. The hitherto worthless Hal steps forth and offers to take the check to New York by automoible.

One sees the start of the car, the efforts of the opposition to put obstacles in Hals way, and the family and directors watching a map as they receive wires from Hal. Horatio Jackson Lee St. Albans, a negro in charge of a gasoline station, feels forced to leave his abode because no gasoline is left for the opposition car, and the passengers have threatened him with a pistol. He therefore accompanies Hal. This negro, played by Jesse J. Aldriche, has good spoken titles, and is really right down comical.

There are punctures, stolen spare tires and various other difficulties which Hal has to overcome, and the negro whom Hal nicknames Cupid sends the daily wires to the highly excited gathering in San Francisco who besides the map, have clocks telling them the different times. It is 11.45 when Hal reaches Wall street, where, to odd to the suspense he goes aobut five blocks too far. As might be anticipated, he delivers the check before a policeman on the minute the clock strikes twelve, and then is arrested for breaking most of the speed laws in New York. It is a very good film of its kind, and one filled with fun.

ENGLISH MELODRAMA, "THE SIGN OF THE FOUR."

Next Monday "The Sign of the Four" comes to the Royal.

The feature presentation is Stoll's English super-production, the greatest of all Sherlock Holmes' stories, "The Sign of the Four."

This film production is one of the most popular successful motion pictures that was ever exhibited on the other side. Everywhere in England, "The Sign of the Four" played to extended runs and repeat bookings and was met in all cases by a wave of popular enthusiasm and approval. The picture is a big super-production which takes the spectator from the magic land of India to the streets of London and plunges him into a mystery and adventure story, which is colorful, compelling and fascinating. The famous characters of the members of "The Sign of the Four" as so vividly pictured in the book are made to live by the steller actors who make up the cast, and "Sherlock Holmes," "Watson" and the girl in the case are interpreted by no less brilliant performers.

Harding.

The new officers are: Chief Rabban, Gus L. Hay, Peterborough; Assistant Rabban, W. A. Peace, Toronto; High Priest, E. I. C. Walker, Guelph; Recorder, A. Maccomb, Toronto (acclamation); Treasurer, J. Object That Will Be Obtained When Baldwin Ministry Quits Office.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press)—While United States rebuff to Soviet Government is attracting great attention here Westminster Gazette announces that British recognition of Russia and reopening of full trade relations with that country are likely to take place soon after Baldwin ministry quits office.

Important negotiations, says news paper, have made it clear that Moscow government will admit liability for pre war Russian debt to Britain totalling 655 million pounds.

In return Russia will ask compensation for allied support given White forces soon after revolution. It is believed next Britain administration will take some risks in granting credits to facilitate trade and to assist recovery of Russian finances.

HOME BANK CASE TO COUNTY COURT

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Mr. Justice Middleton this morning granted a mandatory order transferring the prosecution of ten directors and officials of the Home Bank of Canada from the Assizes to the County Judges' Criminal Court.

This means a trial without jury.

The defendants were arrested in October, as the result of an investigation into the suspension of the bank in August, and the case was heard in the Police Court before Magistrate Jones. After several adjournments the case was transferred to the Assizes.

The directors and officials, however, through their counsels, strongly opposed this move and made determined attempts to have their case come before the County Judge without a jury, finally making application to Mr. Justice Middleton for a mandamus compelling the County Judge to grant a speedy trial.

The directors and officials charged are: H. J. Daly, president; R. P. Gough, vice-president; S. C. Wood, J. P. M. Stewart, P. J. B. Russill, directors; E. A. Calvert, general manager; O. G. Smith, chief accountant; S. H. Jones, auditor, all of Toronto, and G. A. Barnard, K.C., and Lieut.-Col. Clarence Smith, directors, Montreal.

Mr. Justice Middleton remarks that the right of a defendant to trial by jury has been recently strongly reasserted in England by the Court of Appeal. In his opinion the right of the Crown to demand, and the obligation of accused to submit to trial by jury, should be on the same high footing, but his only duty is to interpret Acts of Parliament as they stand and to grant to defendants the right which Parliament in its wisdom has given them.

D. L. McCarthy, K.C., special prosecutor appointed by the Crown, will consult Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., Attorney-General, before deciding whether Mr. Justice Middleton's decision will be appealed. The Assizes are scheduled to open January 14. It could not be stated early this afternoon when the directors and officials of the bank would appear before the County Judge for a speedy trial.

BONA FIDE OFFER .

CLEARWATER, Fla., Dec. 19—President Charles H. Ebbetts, President of the Brooklyn National League Club, really wanted Rogers Hornsby at the record-breaking figure of $275,000, he said here to-day. Mr. Ebbetts said that ordinarily he did not believe in paying high amounts for players as it tended to hurt the game, but declared his offer at the Chicago baseabll meeting for the St. Louis slugger was bona fide.

Herrmann Not Buying Indianapolis Club.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 19.—August Herrmann, president of the Cincinniati Nationals, said to-day that the report of an immediate purchase of the Indianapolis Club of the American Association by the Cincinnati Club "is much exaggerated."

"The fact is that we have five clubs on our list and will probably select one of them to purhase and to use for cooperative purposes," said Mr. Herrmann. "We want a Class AA club; we want one near at hand, but Columbus and Louisville, for example, are as convenient as Indianapolis. The choice will not be made to-day, to-morrow, or the next day."

LAKE SHORE LEAGUE?

Plans are under way for a baseball league composed of teams from Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville and Trenton, which will play only home brew talent with games only on Saturday afternoon. The new league will likely affiliate with the O.B.A.A. and will play in the intermediate series. The game in the Central Ontario League has been getting a little too fast and two expensive for most of the smaller towns, and the two game a week means a lot of lost time. Saturday games draw the best gates, and the Wednesday games in the past in Cobourg have been rather poorly attended. So says the Port Hope Guide. Have Port Hope and Cobourg got stage fright already even before they have started to play?

Ruth, according to intimate friends, is saving his money. While he was hitting the high spots he went through a quarter of a million dollars and it took some of his 1923 pay to get out of debt.

Figuring that he has at least four years to go and that with attention to his business his value should not decrease, the Babe has it doped out that he can put enough money away to make his future safe and to remove from him the threat of the bush leagues and bush league pay after his time has passed in fast company.

Ruth is a great admirer of Jack Dempsey, and he has taken a lesson from the heavyweight champion that a big fellow in sport does not have to be a sucker with his money to be popular.

The way the Babe attended to business last season was not only of immense benefit to himself, but it proved to be one of the biggest factors in getting the Yankees into the world's series and getting them out of the fight with the Giants as the world's champions.

While he was the whole works during the season, Ruth did not break up the world's series himself, but he was the big threat that worried the Giants most of all.

In striking out in the last game of the series, with the bases filled and the Yankees behind, Ruth upset Bill Ryan, the Giant pitcher, almost as if he had knocked the ball out of the lot.

That is going rather far to prove a point, but the Giant players all agree that Babe completely upset Ryan when he struck out and he couldn't bear down on the ball when he was pitching to Bob Meusel.

LADIES' HOCKEY.

Entries for the Ladies' Ontario Hockey Association close on December 29. Body-checking has been prohibited in the girls' game this winter.

SPORT GOSSIP

MAYS UNPOPULAR.

The American League wanted to get rid of Mays last year. That is, the majority of clubs wanted to let him depart. Waivers were asked on him but not a unanimous vote could be secured, so New York kept him.

Mays knew of this secret attitude. He realized a year ago that he was unwelcome in the American and that he would be "busted" just as soon as the one or two clubs that kept him in could be swung into line. Mays knew it was but a question of months and he realized all last season that he could not pitch in the American League in 1924.

The realization of his position affected Mays' work. Also, he was rarely used last year. Called on only when absolutely necessary, Mays never was really able to pitch up to form.

One of the star members of the New York Americans told us last season that Mays is still a great pitcher and that Mays would win a great many games for any club that would ease his mind and give him a regular turn in the box. Mays, with New York, could not pitch good ball because he was working under the handicap that had developed, the almost unanimous lineup against him.

Turned Aginst Him.

Mays' troubles date beyond the death of Ray Chapman, shortstop for the Cleveland Americans, in 1920. Chapman, struck in the head by a ball pitched by Mays, was killed. The attitude that Mays assumed after this accident turned almost everyone in the league against him. He had been in a few "affairs" before that and the death of Chapman sealed his fate. Since that day the majority of owners and managers in the league have been trying to oust him. To prefer public charges against Mays would not have helped the game so the less expensive method was tried—having every club waive on him. This was successful last week.

Lacks Sentiment.

In Mays, the majors had one player almost totally lacking in sentiment. He was regarded in his profession as "hard boiled." Never popular with players, there was no attempt to "cover" him on his mistakes and his talent as a pitcher was always discounted. He was talented, one of the best that ever came into the league. Mays could and did pitch with the best of them. There have been few as good.

ROUSCH

What would we do without Eddie Rousch?

Every year he hangs up his glove and his bat and announces his retirement from the Reds.

"I gotta have more money," he raves.

"I gotta have a longer contract," he moans.

"I gotta be traded to a championship team," he screams.

Now comes word that Pat Moran of Cincinnati has finally decided to get rid of his temperamental outfielder and is contemplating a trade with the Giants involving First Baseman Kelly and Outfielder Billy Southworth.

Rousch, it is stated, was paid $18,000 last season, and demands $20,000 for next summer's toil.

Out at Doane College, Crete, Neb., the girls play regular he-man football.

This introduces Sarah Bloomfield, halfback of the championship Doane fresh eleven, which recently defeated the Doane sophs, 7 to 0, in a regular football game played under men's rules.

Miss Bloomfield was the star of the game. She plunged through the lines, ran the ends, did the kicking and the passing. Aside from that she was merely a spectator.

AMERICAN LEAGUE CROWDS FELL OFF

The Aggregate Attendance Showed Decrease For the Season — New York Led League.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—The aggregate attendance in the American League for the season of 1923 was 4,602,589 This is a decrease as compared with the three previous years, 1920 being the banner year of the organization. The New York Club, with its new park, is understood to have outdrawn the other clubs.

ST. MARY'S JUNIORS HOLD S.P.A. TROPHY

TORONTO, December 20 (Canadian Press). — St. Mary's Juniors start the O.H.A. season as holders of the Junior S.P.A. Trophy, as their victory over Owen Sound team in the final game of the series at the Arena last evening by 3 goals to 1 gives them possession of the Trophy for the second successive year.

While St. Mary's won, their victory was tinged with considerable luck, but they knew how to make the most of their opportunities, while the Greys lost several chances to score through over-anxiety and other causes.

The better team undoubtedly won, but the result was in doubt until well on in the closing period, and St. Marys' supporters were on anxious seats during the last two minutes, when two of the Saints were ruled off, but Sounders could not beat Baker.

The game was the best of the series, and with possibly one exception was the best of the local season in any series.

OTTAWA SENATORS WON SECOND GAME

OTTAWA, December 20 (Canadian Press). — Ottawa Senators, world champions, scored their second straight victory in the present N. H. L. race when they defeated Toronto St. Pats here last night by a score of 5 to 2.

The locals staged a whirlwind finish, which was too much for the green shirts, three goals being registered to Ottawa's credit in the final twenty minutes.

Hockey in the first two periods was a bit slow and uninteresting in spots.

St. Pats were forced to line up without John Ross Reach. They were outclassed and appeared short on condition.

HAMILTON HAS CELLAR PLACE

Defeated Last Night by Canadiens-- Better Net Keeping Only Chance of Climbing Out.

HAMILTON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Hamilton's N.H.L. Club is occupying the cellar position in the N. H. L. race to-day as a result of the 3 to 1 defeat administered here last night by the Canadiens, and unless they show more class around the nets their chances of getting out are rather poor. True, the Tigers ran into Vezina when the French wizard was on his best behaviour and he turned many a difficult shot aside, but despite this, the Hams had chances to score and failed to take advantage of them. Jess Spring made his professional debut for Hamilton, and turned in a good game, incidentally scoring Hamilton's only goal.

SHOW HOME CROWD

Evidently election excitement will be lacking unless something quite unexpected turns up in the immediate future.

CAN'T GET JOB BACK TO CRIME

Former Crook and Veteran Bids Defi to Society As It Denies Him Living

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—Headed back toward crime because he was unable to get a job, a former soldier wrote anonymously to Chief Justice Caverly and revealed the conditions which he said made it impossible for him "to go straight."

Refused Job 600 Times.

The former soldier also by his own confession, an ex-convict, told the judge why he had turned to the right and how he must once again sink into the old life of crime. Impressed by the letter, Judge Caverly has promised an investigation.

"I'm a married man," the crook-doughboy wrote, "and I have a good wife. I've done time—once. For two years. Since I married I've tried to go straight. But it can't be done. I'm bound for the old crookedness again.

"For six solid weeks I've tramped one end of the city to another looking fo ra job. I haven't got a trade. I've applied at factories, warehouses, stores, offices—600 of them. No luck. And I'm through."

"I got offers of a couple of jobs—oh, yes. And do you know what they offered to pay? From $20 to $25 a week.

Calls Wages Too Low.

"Me and my wife can't live on that. We've tried it and it won't work. No decent human beings can live on a sum like that. Now we've reached the end.

"It's a dirty shame—a great country like this paying such rotten wages. No wonder there's so much burglary and robbery and murder. We can't live. You know the next step.

"If such rotten conditions exist and these poor wages keep up, a man is deprived of all his holding in life. What can he do? I've looked at 600 places for jobs in six weeks, I said. Well, I won't look any more.

"I can't live. And I've got a good wife. She's got to live, too. I've got to go back to the old tricks to make a livelihood. Me for crime."

The letter is unsigned. The only indication of identity it contains is its reference to the two former vocation of the writer—soldier and criminal. And the latter, evidently, wins.

RUSSIA'S NEW NAME SOCIALIST SOVIET.

Government Officials Say There Is No Russia — Moscow Authorities Regard Themselves As Masters Everywhere.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(Associated Press).—"There is no Russia," says a news article in the Daily Mail. "A strange statement but true." Russia has officially ceased to exist as a name in the mouths of those who now control the destinies of that country.

About three months ago they took a decision which has remained strangely secret. They notified the various nations with whom they have trade relations that the title of their Government was changed from that of the Russian Soviet Republic to the "Union of Socialist Soviet Republics," contracted after Russian fashion to U. S. S. R. The word "Russia" was dropped completely.

At the same time the emblems upon their official notepaper the crossed hammer and sickle, were now surrounded by a semi-circle of labels bearing the names of the various parts of the country and its adjacent territories, wherein "independent" local Soviet Governments have been formed, such as "Ukraine," "Azerbaijan," and so on. But not only these, for the name "Bulgaria" was astonishingly added, the name of an entirely independent State!

From this it is clear that the authorities in Moscow regard themselves as potentially the masters of everywhere, and not at all limited by the boundaries of Russia. Needless to say the British Government in its dealings with the Soviet Government has never accepted or used this predatory title.

The matter is of some importance, as undoubtedly England is on the verge of renewing relations with Russia officially. The Liberal Party has made it a plank or at the least a small board, in its election platform. The Conservative Government has had the matter under consideration for some time past, and was disposed to recognize the Soviet Government, but with this major difference, that it would only do so after the Russians had recognized the principle of pre-Soviet Russian indebtedness, and had agreed to reinstate or compensate British subjects in their Russian property.

REGULAR MOVIE SHOW AT THE LOCAL Y.M.C.A.

In the regular weekly movie show last week the boys of the Y.M.C.A. were given an excellent programme. The feature picture was Charles Ray in "The Clodhopper," and besides there was a comedy and travel picture. There will not be any programme this week, but next week in connection with the Christmas holiday, "From the Manger to the Cross" will be shown. This picture portrays in a reverent manner the world's supreme tragedy. In a manner no wise sensational the Birth, Life, Death and Resurrection of Jesus is presented. A silver collection will be taken at the door and the proceeds given to the Foreign Work budget of the Boys' division.

To date the response to the appeal for the Boys' Foreign Work budget has been very encouraging. The challenge is put up to every boy to earn and contribute something toward the fund which means the sending of a Canadian to India as their representative for Christian work among the millions of boys in that land which is a part of the British Empire. Already twelve boys have become members of the Fifty Thousand Club of North America by reason of having contributed one dollar or more to the fund.

WEDDING BELLS

BUTCHER—LANG.
A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Lang, 544 Elm street, on Wednesday, December 19th, 1923, when their youngest daughter, Mary Hazel, was united in marriage to Robert Earnest Butcher, in the presence of their many relatives and friends. The ceremony, which took place under a beautifully decorated arch, was performed by Adjutant Smith, of the Salvation Army, Peterborough.

The bride entered the drawing room to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. S. Richardson, leaning on the arm of her father. She was gowned in navy blue trigotine dress, carrying a bouquet of roses.

The bridesmaid was Miss Verno Glover, of Toronto, and the groom was supported by Mr. Frank Stevens, cousin of the groom. Master Willie Brooks carried the ring in a basket of flowers.

After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the dining room, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. The tables were prettily decorated with carnations and ferns.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti on the 5.27 train for Toronto and points west. Their gifts were many and handsome, among them being a cabinet of silver from the bride's girl friends of the spinning room of the Canadian Woollens Ltd., and a cheque from the father of the groom.

Their many friends wish the young couple a long and happy life.

On their return they will reside in the Charlbond Apartments, Charlotte street.

SECOND DEFEAT OF GOVERNMENT IN QUICK ORDER

Former Liberal Majority of 1,500 Wiped Out With Complete Change of 1,700 Votes--Minority in House Now Four.

EFFECT IN OTTAWA.

RICHIBUCTO, N.B., December 21 (Canadian Press). — Alex. Doucette, Conservative, was yesterday returned by the electors of Kent County to fill the vacancy caused by the death of A. T. Legere, Liberal, defeating his Liberal opponent, Alfred Bourgeois, by 200 votes.

Doucette's victory involved overcoming of an adverse majtrity of 1,530, a change-over in all of approximately 1,700 votes in a total vote of 7,500.

While Doucette led throughout on returns as they were received, the issue was in doubt until the last.

The missing poll, Lake Stream, gave Doucette maojrity of one with the total vote of ten in the election of 1921.

KEEN DISAPPOINTMENT TO KING GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press)—The result in the Kent by-election, especially coming so soon after the Liberal defeat in Halifax, will be received in Government circles with unquestioned disappointment. In the Halifax contest the Conservative victory was attributed to local issues and to differences among Liberals themselves. Maritime issues—such as railway extensions and freight rates—are reported again to have entered largely into the contest. But the government deefats, taken together, are likely to exercise a much wider influence on the course of political events than questions affecting the Maritime Provinces more particular.

Only a few days ago, Robert Forke, Progressive leader, declared a general election in the coming Summer to be a possibility if the Government lost in Kent; and the result will no doubt give rise to much speculation whether the Government, following adoption of redistribution in the coming session, is not likely to make an appeal to the polls.

Four Of Minority.

Unless there are changes in the interval, the Government will now meet Parliament in a technical minority of four, if Progressives, Conservatives, Independents and Labor are counted together as a joint opposition. On this basis, the House divides:

Progressives	62
Conservatives	52
Labor	2
Independent	3
Total Opposition	119
Government	115
Total members	234

Adding the Speaker who is a Liberal but has only a casting vote, this comprises a total house membership of 235. It has to be borne in mind however that on no occasion have all parties to the left of the Speaker voted against the Government as a solid opposition. The Government has always received sufficient support, generally from Progressives, to carry its measures although the Budget last session was adopted by the very narrow majority of eight.

Desire An Agreement,

Latterly, there have been rumors of Liberal efforts to secure something like a permanent working agreement with a section at any rate of the Progressives. So far as the Progressive party as a whole is concerned. Mr. Forke has indicated that the measure of Progressive support to be extended to the Government in the coming session will be dependent on "the attitude of Government will take with regard to our policies." But Kent will no doubt give impetus to any Liberal efforts for closer relations with Progressives.

In a statement given the Canadian Press, the successful candidate said: "I ascribe my victory to the dissatisfaction among the people over the management of the Canadian National Railways and the sacrificing of Maritime interests in very many instances. Moreover, the people of the county resented the hordes of campaigners brought down from Ontario and Quebec to tell them how they should vote."

DOCTRINAL WAR FLARES AFRESH

"Infallibility of Bible" Debated in Public — Southern Methodists Denounce Modernists — Truce Is Urged.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press)—After two days of comparative calm, the "religious war" between the "fundamentalists" and the "modernists" in the Protestant Churches of the United States continued with increased vigor yesterday.

Heads of two denominations in different sections of the country issued a request to their parishioners asking them to forget religious differences, at least during the Christmas season.

Debate In New York.

Rev. John Roach Stratton, pastor of Cavalry Baptist Church in this city, engaged in a public debate last night with Rev. Charles Francis Potter, minister in the West Side Unitarian Church, on the question of the "infallibility of the Bible". Dr. Stratton is a fundamentalist and Rev. Potter a modernist.

An attack on the fundamentalists for "crucifying civilization" in the names of that which is not fundamental but relatively trivial, was made by Dr. S. Pritchett, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in an article in the current issue of Scribner's Magazine.

Rev. S. G. Bland Mentioned.

The general evangelist of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, meeting at Memphis yesterday, passed resolutions denouncing "modernism," and at the same time attacking statements made by Dr. S. G. Bland, Toronto, while a member of the faculty of the summer school conducted by the church at Junalaska.

27 MILLIONS IN NEW BUILDINGS

Montreal Closing Year of Constructional Activity Approaching Record.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—Expectations were held out to-day by Doug las Bremner, president of the Builders Exchange that by the end of the year the value of building permits issued by the city of Montreal during 1923 will come very close to the record established in 1913. During the latter banner year, permits issued by Montreal, exclusive of surrounding municipalities, had a valuation of construction approximately $27,500,000. This year's total is now nearly $27,000,000.

"One of the most pleasing features of the industry," said the Builders' Exchange president, "is the return to Canada of a large number of skilled mechanics who went to the United States during the early spring of this year."

"While there is actually no depression in the building industry in the United States and there are still ample opportunities for employment, it is apparent that the men are returning more from a desire to reside in Canada than from any prospect of being able to earn the wages being paid in the United Staes."

Dry Fleet Victory Off Jersey Coast

HIGHLAND, N.J., Dec. 21.— Riddled by the activities of prohibition agents, the Jersey Coast rum fleet yesterday consisted of only seven vessels. Rum row suddenly was reduced from more than a score of vessels when smugglers, harassed by revenue cutters, scattered to other points. The seven vessels are well outside the twelve-mile limit.

The rum fleet for several days has been patrolled by two coast guard cutters, making it almost impossible for small craft to escape from the row with liquor. All the smuggling has not been stopped, however, and at least one cargo was landed today and two small vessels awaited darkness to make their dash for shore. The fleet off Jones Inlet also appeared much smaller than usual.

MILITARY PARTY SEEKING POWER DURING CHANGE

Regent Inducted While Clashing Claims of the Opposing Groups Reveal Divided Counsels.

Venezelos Attacked.

ATHENS, Dec. 21.— (Canadian Press)—Admiral Coundouriotis has assumed the regency of Greece..

Colonel Plastiras of the Military Directorate, administered the oath to the new regent at six o'clock last evening in the presence of the Holy Synod and members of the Cabinet.

It is possible that a republic may be proclaimed in the next few days if the movement begun by General Pangalos, Military Governor of Athens and the Extremist leader of the Republican Party, continues to gain headway. Pangalos threatens week-end manifestations against the present revolutionary Government headed by Colonel Plastiras and Premier Gonatas; he demands that they cede the power to the Republicans, over whom he now claims leadership owing to success in the recent elections.

M. Papanastassios, leader of the Democratic Party, is counselling moderation; he declares he does not want the Republicans to assume power before the meeting of the constituent assembly, which has been fixed for early in January.

Criticize Venizelos.

The press of the Liberals, led by General Danglis one of the Venizelist revolutionary committee, reviles Venizelos, counselling him to remain in Paris.

The same papers attacked premier Gonatas for his moderate attitude toward the king, and call upon him to resign.

VENIZELOS SILENT.

PARIS, Dec. 21. — (Canadian Press)—Former Premier Venizelos of Greece continues to maintain a strict silence on the Greek situation, but he is said by those close to him to have quite made up his mind to abstain entirely from participation in Greek politics, taking the view that the new situation will require new men. In any case he will not stand for the presidency if a republic is declared, it is asserted, and his friends meanwhile will support Admiral Coundouriotis as regent.

(This dispatch apparently was filed before the receipt by Venizoles of the invitation to return to Greece mentioned in today's dispatches as sent by the powerful military group in the Greek capital).

Not His Ideal.

The republic that seems likely to be set up in Greece, according to friends of the ex-premier now here, is not such as he desired but something nearer to the model furnished by the United States. Venizelos, it is explained, considered that change to a popular form of government ought to be gradual, beginning with a president elected for life and able to transmit his powers to his descendants. The population of Greece, however, impressed by the ever-present object lesson of the errors of formers governments, such as the million and a half Greeks uprooted from the Greek colonies in Turkey and sent home to be fed by the home people under the exchange of population clause in the Lausanne Treaty, have apparently decided to go the whole length for a real republic with a president to be elected every four years.

Lake Grain Movement Is Apparently Ended.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 20.— With the sailing of the Sir Thomas Shaughnessy yesterday and the arrival of the T. J. Drummond from Duluth, it seems that the lake grain movement has ended for the season.

No definite word has been received of the C. O. Jenkins, the G. J. Grammer and the F. B. Squire, which were reported as coming up here for winter storage Some doubt is now expressed in local marine circles as to whether these three will make the trip up.

All the fourteen boats which will lie over here this winter now have their winter cargoes aboard with the exception of the Drummond, which is now at the Paterson dock and will be loaded shortly.

CUNARD OIL BURNERS.

Playing Golf on Winnipeg Greens

WINNIPEG, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press). — Official weather reports confirm fully the belief of Winnipeg folks that the present month has been unprecedented in its mildness.

For the first nineteen days of December the average temperature was 23.5 above zero. The average for ten years covering the same period is about three below, the second highest level in 1913, was 10.3 above. The maximum and minimum this year were 44 above and 7 below, as compared with ten years averages of 37 above and 24 below. Weather men see no indication of any immediate change from the present high temperatures.

In the meantime ducks were seen on the rivers here yesterday and some enthusiastic golfers have played during the past few days without discomfort.

SENATORS WANT FURTHER PROOF OF PROPAGANDA

Secretary Hughes' Disclosure of Soviet Activities in United States Was Assailed — Question Opened Up.

SWEEPING INQUIRY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press)—The State Department's charges of revolutionary Soviet propaganda in the United States startled diplomatic circles here yesterday, launched the new Senate upon its first debate over foreign affairs, and resulted in a promise of further disclosures that will bring the whole problem of Russia once more into review before the public.

Senators who repeatedly have urged formal recognition of the Soviet regime in Russia started the Senate debate by assailing Secretary Hughes' disclosure of Soviet "instructions" for a movement designed to raise the red flag over the White House. Both Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, and Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, openly charged that there was no proof of such activities, and although no general reply came from Administration quarters, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, Republican floor leader, announced that a sweeping inquiry into the entire Russian question would be undertaken by the Foreign Relations Committee.

Reserve Ammunition.

At the same time it was disclosed that the State Department had additional ammunition in reserve for the expected battle over recognition. In co-operation with the Department of Justice, Secretary Hughes has been collecting evidence that he believes will establish beyond doubt the direct responsibility of Moscow for a well-defined movement to undermine the Government of the United States.

Whether the House will take up the question through an inquiry by its Foreign Affairs Committee was not indicated, although a resolution was referred to the committee upon its introduction yesterday by Representative Britten, Republican, Illinois, calling upon the Secretary of State and the Attorney-General for data and information in their possession on Soviet activities in the United States.

Arctic Promise of Mild Winter

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 21.— (Canadian Press)—In the light of the number of prognostications which have been carelessly handed out regarding the kind of winter which the luckless populace will yet have to face, comes the cheery message from J. D. Craig, E.I.C., that the Captain of the Arctic, the Government's Eskimo schooner, predicts a mild fall and winter this year. The declaration was based on the fact that in 1922, during the northern cruise, which is conducted from July to October each year, the "middle ice," lying between the North coast of Greenland and the Island mainlands, was very much in prominence. This year, however, the "middle ice" was not apparent. Hence the deduction.

MAJORITY VOTE IN CHAMBER ON INDEMNITY BILL

French Deputies Embarrass Government By Approving Larger Increase For State Employees Than Measure Provided.

COST OF LIVING.

PARIS, Dec. 21. — (Canadian Press)—The question of increasing the hign cost of living indemnity allowed States employees whose incomes are under 8,000 francs from the present figure of 720 francs to 18000 francs, resulted in a vote in the Chamber of Deputies Thursday which put the Government in the minority by 131 votes.

The vote was taken on an amendment to the general finance bill, to which Minister of Finance De Lasteyrie said the Government was opposed. He did not, however, specifically raise the question of confidence on the amendment, although he has done so on the general question of the finance bill. The vote on the amendment, which called for the separation from the general finance bill of the clauses dealing with increased indemnity for States employees, was 331 to 200..

Police Demonstration.

The question of increasing the salaries of State employees has been the subject of sporadic agitation throughout the country, a notable example being the manifestation by the Paris policemen on December 11. The Government in the 1924 finance bill proposed increases which would cost the country 236,000,000 francs yearly.

A Socialist amendment to the bill proposed the granting of full increases at a cost of 1,200,000,000 francs. M. Loucheur, former Minister of Reconstruction offered an amendment to the measure which would make the cost 886,000,00 francs, while M. Herriot, leader of the radicals, proposed that there should be a sliding scale of increases according to the cost of living index.

M. De Lasteyrie said Wednesday evening that a vote to refer the Government's proposals back to the Finance Committee for reconsideration would mean the Government's resignation. The amendment to the bill adopted yesterday afternoon will have the effect of sending the clauses amended back to committee for reconsideration at the committee's convenience.

Referred To Committee.

When the vote was announced, the Socialist and Communists deputies raised shouts of "resign", but after some debate, in which it was made evident that there had been much confusion in the voting, M. Poincare said he would accept the decision to send back the whole question to the Finance Committee.

This proposal was accepted unanimously, although it was the very point on which M. De Lasteyrie staked confidence in the Government Wednesday night. The sitting of the Chamber immediately ended to allow the Finance Committee to meet. M. Poincare told the committee the Government was prepared to increase the amount for the indemnification of employees by 17,000,000 francs, but that otherwise, it maintained its position on the former proposals and was prepared to make the vote on them one of confidence at Saturday's session, when the question again will be before the Chamber.

NOMINATIONS BROUGHT OUT FOUR CANDIDATES FOR MAYORALTY CHAIR

EXPERTS NAMED TO INVESTIGATE GERMAN WEALTH

Three British Representatives Announced For International Committee —First Meeting Early in January.

ON REPARATIONS.

PARIS, Dec. 21.—The Reparation Commission may be able to issue invitations to-day to the persons selected to serve on the international expert committee which are to investigate Germany's financial situation and her resources abroad.

It was learned yesterday that the British members would be Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England; Sir Josiah Stamp, economic and statistical authority, and Reginal McKenna, former Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The third United States delegate to serve with General Charles G. Dawes and Owen D. Young has not yet been announced here, but if the selection is delayed, invitations will be issued to the other two along with the British, French, Belgian and Italian appointees.

Meet in January

The members of the Reparation Commission have consulted each other regarding the names proposed and all are in accord. If the invitations are issued to-day, as hoped, it is thought the first meeting of the experts will be held on or immediately after January 10. The committees theoretically will organize their own work and decide where and when to sit. It is expected the first session will be held in Paris.

The acceptance of the three British delegates was received with great satisfaction in Reparation circles. The willingness of such important men ot give their time to the work of the committe, was taken as indicating how important these bodies are in British eyes. It is also remarked that men having such important duties as these three would hesitate to abandon them even momentarily for an investigation that they thought was unlikely to bear fruit.

British Approval

LONDON, Dec. 21.—The selection of Montagu Norman, Sir Josiah Stamp and Reginald McKenna as the British representatives on the expert reparation committees drew favorable comment here last night, it being remarked that Sir John Bradbury had secured a very strong and impartial team, whose names would inspire complete confidence.

Mr. Norman is the Governor of the Bank of England, and accompanied Stanley Baldwin, now Premier, on his debt funding mission to the United States. Sir Josiah is a well-known economist and publicist, who a few years ago, favored a capital levy, but has since changed his opinion believing it now too late to adopt that method of reducing the national debt because he considered it would result in disastrous disturbance of the public credit.

r. McKenna, it will be remembered, only just escaped being Chancellor of the Exchequer again in the Baldwin Administration, as he was under Premier Asquith. In fact, he was offered the post by Mr. Baldwin, but strong pressur, from the die-hard section of the Conservatives prevented his being actually appointed.

PARIS DRIVES AWAY ALL CROOKED GUIDES

Balkan and Oriental Crooks Are Being Chased By Indignant Parisians.

(By JOHN O'BRIEN)

PARIS, Dec. 21 (United Press).—"Vant a guide, sair?" "Vant some pictures, sair?" Every tourist, American or other, who has strolled along the boulevard about midnight, especially between the Place de l'Opera and the Madeleine, knows the oily gang of Balkan and Oriental crooks who infest the sidewalks of the centre of Paris after nightfall.

They probably won't be in their accustomed places next year. The French municipal authorities have finally realized the incalculable damage these so-called guides have been doing to the city. Their places will be taken by Frenchmen, who have nothing to fear if a policeman demands their papers.

Municipal Councillor Massard has taken the initiative in the solution of the problem. He has proposed the organization of a service of "official guides," acting in close co-operation with the Police Department, to point out to visitors the real beauties of the "City of Light," instead of conducting the unwary tourist to the lowest dens, where the least that he can expect is to pay four to ten times the price for everything he consumes, if he does not get robbed after being drugged.

Councillor Massard received hundreds of complaints of anti-French propaganda being carried on by the chevaliers of the boulevard and the self-styled art experts of the museums. He determined to put a stop to it. He found that most of the pre-war Germans who left Paris at the outbreak of the war to enter the Kaiser's armies, have returned to their old haunts. Since the announcement of his campaign many of them have again quit Paris and he is spurring on the police to take drastic action against those who remain.

GERMANY TO GUARANTEE U. S. FOR A FOOD LOAN

PARIS, Dec. 21. — (Canadian Press)!—Germany's application for the authorization to pledge resources as a guarantee for the food loan from the United States was referred to by the Reparation Commission today to the home Governments of various delegates. At the same time it was decided that the Commission's committee on the guarantees should make a thorough investigation as to the food situation in Germany.

The report of the Commission's Guarantee Committee will be available either for the Allied Governments or the Reparation Commission itself, whichever shall finally take up the German application.

"WE DELIVER ANYTHING ANYWHERE ANYTIME"

LOCAL BUYING IS HELD BACK BY LATE RUSH

Shop Late and Enjoy the Rush Appears to Be the Slogan of Many Peterboro Buyers.

APPLE CIDER SEASON.

This year's 'green' Christmas, so it is claimed, has militated considerably to the disadvantage of business generally. The Yuletide season seems unfamiliar without its usual white blanket, but the appearance of the stores during the last two or three days gives the impression that the usual exodus of those who make it a slogan to "shop late and enjoy the rush", has begun. A comparison of last year's prices for staple groceries in stock for Christmas trade shows a general similarity. Things are just about the same in cost as they were this date in 1922. On the farmers' market last year, the Chirstmas prices appeared almost identical with this year's, in everything but turkeys, the lowest quotation for these birds at that time being 35 cents a pound. On Wednesday of this week, they touched the low ebb of 20 cents. Butter is described as 'steady', and inclined to rise in price.

Fruits are slightly cheaper than last year, oranges in particular. Fruit buyers report an earlier stock of Florida oranges and grapefruit this year than is usual. January usually sees their appearance, but there are already plenty on the market for the Christmas trade. Even a recent frost over the entire fruit growing section of Tulare County, in California, failed to stem the onrush of the golden balls, making their way to northern tables.

From the grain markets comes the report of a slight decrease in wholesale prices of peas and clovers, both red and sweet. "Too much sweet clover and no demand for it," is the dictum of the buyers regarding the latter.

The lengths to which the merchants go in their desire to satisfy the wants of their customers are unbounded. The pen of a Dickens might be equal to a description of the stores and their overflowing contents, when preparing for the great festival of the turkey and the holly wreath and the tissue-wrapped package. Far countries contribute their treasure trove of art and natural products to the family dinner table, not of the rich man alone, but of the artisan and the laborer.

From Spain and Italp, from France and Greece and from Asia Minor come the nuts, the raisins and the currants. Scotland sends her "White Heather" shortbread and England her packaged biscuits and plum puddings, from far-away Brazil come the big black 'nigger toes', California and Florida and the Isles of Spice grow our citrus fruits, our imported tomatoes and cucumbers, and down on the farm the gobbler fattens for the festive table.

From the new territory of Czecho-Slovakia comes this year lovely colored glassware, in brittle candlesticks and lily bowls; Italy has the punched china, with latticed edges, and from India we get delicate brazen vases, etched in black and red designs. The mines of distant lands contribute the onyx in red and black and green, the lapis lazuli that is so popular this year. Lazy tortoises down in the sunny Bahamas probably died to make the pretty shell sets to decorate miladi's dresser, and there is a variation to the French ivory that one sees everywhere in the new facing of silver of mottled finish that is supimposed on its pale cream surface. Rainbow-hued shells are in the pale-colored 'faery fans' of the mode.

Everything is of a 'Christmas type just now. There are 'Santa Claus' song packs in the music store, Christmas money orders in express office windows, and little miniature Christmas cherry trees in tiny gilded pots adorn jewelers displayes. The poinsettia, the flaming 'passion flower' is back agin. Unnoticed for several Christmas seasons, its crimson hues flaunt this year in many a window. Hugh artificial blooms of the red-petelled flower are lit with tiny red electric bulbs in one effective display. The old Christmas 'cracker' is not so much on view. Its place seems to have been taken by the Christmas surprise pie.

This is the time for apple cider and mincemeat, for bottled cherries in white and red and green, for candied peels of citron and orange and lemon and pineapple, for 'hard rock' Christmas candies and the soft old-fashioned pink and white and yellow creams, for polished red apples and cluster raisins in blue and gold packages, for pale pink and white meringue kisses in confectioners' windows. It is also the time for parking crying children outside of busy stores, where they mourn for absent parents, busily engaged in buying rainbow-tinted pocket handkerchiefs and bronze green incense burners. "Chocolates," murmured a small boy to his mother, while gazing at a seductive display of gaily-wrapped bon-bon boxes. "No, I won't buy you any candy. I'm going to get you something you can use," said his mother firmly, as she led him away.

A novelty in candy is the tiny orange sections, packed in small crates, and the bunches of crystallized grapes in red and green and blue. One grocery window with its nut display shows the big balls that house a small family of Brazil nuts. The Brazil nut tree has to be a hundred years old before it begins it bear fruit, but most people probably imagine the triangular-shaped nuts as growing all over the tree in cascades of woody brown. However, it seems that they come packed together, about thirty of them, in a round wood ball, resembling a cocoanut in the flavor and appearance of their meat. Probably, in some far-off time, members of the great nut family became tired of monotony, and desired to vary the cocoanut variety by waiting a hundreds years, and then appearing as individuals, rather than en masse, in one big milk-fed cocoanut.

Predicts Women Will Be Drafted

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Conscription of women in the next war was prophesied by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, addressing the Woman's Club at Greenwich last night.

She said the United States was preparing for war and that woman could do more than men to avert it.

OLD TIMER PASSED OUT AT VANCOUVER

James Cochrane Well Known in Cavan and Hope Townships.

The late Mr. James Cochrane who passed away in Vancouver, Dec. 8th and reference to whose death was made last week, removes one of the Old Timers of Cavan and Hope Townships. Born in Port Hope in 1843, he entered the employment of the G.T.R. at the Union Station, Toronto, and here joined the Band of the "Queen's Own." He became attached to the Militia in 1866, being stationed at Windsor under the late Col. Williams during the Fenian Raids.

At the time of the official visit of the Prince of Wales (Edward VII) to Canada, in those early days, the late Mr. Cochrane had the honor of playing the coronet solo at the military reception tendered the guest at Kingston.

In 1875 he became G.T.R. Station Agent at Millbrook which position he held for 30 years. He enlivened the village concerts of those days with his frequent violin selections.

In 1876 he married Harriet Payne daughter of the late William Payne Cavan, who predeceased him 22 years.

Going west with his family in 1904, deceased settled in the Red Deer District, Alberta, finally making his home in Vancouver, with his son, Percy, but being still active, journeyed to San Diego, Cal., and three years ago, spent the summer in Lakefield, with his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Porter and again crossed the mountains last year to visit his son Lynden at Coronation, Alberta.

Like many of the staunch Canadians of his day the late Mr. Cochrane was an ardent Patriot, with a great love for the British Flag and all that it implies. Early in the late war he parted with his younger son and companion, for the service of God and the King, receiving him back, maimed for life.

Being of an optimistic disposition and a great reader of secular and Bible History, the late Mr. Cochrane had a well stored mind, which retained its normal vigor to the last.

At the very impressive funeral service held in Vancouver, Monday, Dec. 10th, a large number of sympathizing friends, many former residents of Millbrook and Cavan, paid their last respects to one who had faithfully served the public in the days of long hours and low wages.

His pastor spoke most appreciatively of the deceased, calling him "The Old Saint of God', who was an inspiration to him, Sunday after Sunday.

Many beautiful floral offerings surrounded the casket on which lay those from his children and grandchildren.

The pall bearers were three, old church friends of many years, Mr. Laidlaw, formerly of Peterborough Mr. Love and Mr. Watson, and three relatives, Dr. W. C. Walsh and Mr. T. A. Campbell formerly of Millbrook and Cavan and Mr. John Cochrane, (brother). (Another brother Joseph of Man. and a sister Mrs. Campbell, Toronto, are still living.)

In the beautiful "Ocean View" Cemetery, facing the setting sun, with the grandeur of the snow capped mountains in the background, the old friends from Cavan and Millbrook and the new friends of his adopted city, laid to rest, one who loved justice and in that respect was always sympathetic with "The Cavan Blazers."

REAL ESTATE CASE IN LONDON COURT.

Judgment That Written Agreement Was Not Necessary For Commission.

LONDON, Ont., December 21. — An agent acting for the purchaser of real estate is entitled to collect such commission as has been agreed upon even though there be no agreement in writing.

This is the effect of an interesting decision handed down yesterday by Judge J. C. Judd in the Division Court case of Renwick, Schweitzer and Palmer, Limited, vs. P. Buchanan.

The real estate firm bought for Mr Buchanan a property from Toronto parties for $2500 and claimed 3 per cent. from him as commission. In the resulting action the defendant set up the claim that no written agreement had been made, and quoted Section 16 of the Statute of Frauds, which sets forth that "no action shall be brought to charge any person for the payment of a commission for the sale of real property unless the agreement be in writing."

The Judge's first impression was that this statute applied to purchase as well as sale of real property. No Ontario cases seemed to cover the point. Several sections in Alberta, cited by J. M. Donahue, counsel for the plaintiffs, showed however that in Alberta the agent for a purchaser does not come under the terms of the Statute, which is broader than the Ontario law, and covers "services rendered in connection with sale of any land."

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1923.

A COMMENDABLE ACTION.

The Minister of Highways, Hon. G. S. Henry, is to be commended for his decision to provide each motorist who secures a license for next year with a booklet giving a concise summary of the traffic regulations.

Some very important changes go into effect at the beginning of the year, and the method adopted by the Minister is the surest and best method of ensuring that the regulations are seen by those who are most interested in them.

As Minister of Highways Mr. Henry might have gone even further and included in his pamphlet an earnest plea to motorists to do their share in preserving Ontario's roads by refraining from speeding and reckless driving, and particularly by remaining off the roads as much as possible in the early spring when the road surface is in no condition to stand up under traffic.

A vast amount of damage is done every spring by motorists, many of whom have no real business on the road and whose pleasure-driving could be postponed long enough for the surface to recover from the effects of winter's ravages.

WHAT DID THE MAYOR MEAN?

Many citizens seem to be puzzled by Mayor Taylor's statement in regard to the necessity of a reorganization of the Police Department as made at the Council meeting on Tuesday night, particularly as His Worship made no effort to further develop his remarks.

What reorganization does Mayor Taylor mean?

He should be more definite.

Does he mean that a new head of the department is needed?

Does he mean that there are too many policemen? Or not enough?

Does he mean that the department is too expensive?

Ald. Phelan declares that if he is re-elected to the Council he will press for a reduction in the size of the police force.

That is clear, and definite. Everybody knows where Ald. Phelan stands.

But nobody seems to know just what Mayor Taylor meant in the statement with which he opened Tuesday's Council meeting.

And a lot of people would like to know the particulars in detail of the reorganizaion plan.

A CALL TO SERVICE.

Doubtless a number of citizens were qualified by their own ability and their experience in business to do good service in helping to administer the affairs of the city are being urged today to allow their names to be placed in nomination for the Council to-night.

The Examiner would like to add its voice to the leading of the citizens who are asking for more strength in the civic administration.

To those who are hesitating on the brink it may be pointed out that there is a real need for good men in the city's business, men who will look at matters in a broad way and with an eye on the future of Peterborough rather than on their own future as it may be worked out at the next election.

A period of development is not far off in Ontario, and Peterborough wants to be in the forefront of such a development.

It cannot get there under weak leadership and visionless management.

It must have administrators whose ambitions for Peterborough reach higher levels than squabbles over police management or the cost of repairs for the police car.

There are men in Peterborough who should make just such administrators.

Some of them are being pressed to stand for office.

Will they not make the personal sacrifice involved in plunging into municipal activities and allow their names to go on the ballot paper?

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

People who have the real Christmas spirit will have an opportunity tomorrow and Monday to display it in a practical and effective manner, by doing what they can to lighten the burden of the sales and delivery staffs of Peterborough's stores.

The Christmas grind is always a strain upon clerks and drivers.

For the former it means long hours of waiting upon a never-ending stream of customers, many of whom have only a hazy idea of what they want, and not a few of whom are inclined to let Christmas gift buying affect their temper; for the latter it calls for even longer hours of delivery work, parcels without end, addresses not always accurate.

Much of this strain could be relieved if the shopping public would co-operate—in the first place, by trying to decide upon their wants in advance, if possible, and at least in endeavouring to be cheery and courteous in their shopping.

A smile and a friendly word in the midst of the Christmas rush shorten the long hours and act as a tonic upon frayed nerves.

And then, in the matter of parcels, there is much that can be done.

Don't ask for small articles to be delivered if it is possible for you to carry them.

Hours are wasted in hauling little parcels to all quarters of the city that the purchasers could readily take care of without any inconvenience.

In the rush of the two shopping days that are left before Christmas say "I'll take it with me, please" if you want to make a very material contribution to the welfare of others at this busy season.

IMMIGRATION POLICIES.

More than once the Examiner has expressed its sympathy for the Federal Minister of Immigration at the difficulties that beset his path in endeavouring to arrive at a policy that will be in the best interest of the country generally.

No matter what course is suggested there is opposition.

In some quarters a vigorous immigration campaign is urged as necessary for the development of Canada's resources, the solving of Canada's railway problem and the amelioration of Canaad's burdensome taxes.

Organized labour protests at once against the flooding of the country with men who will glut the industrial labour market and increase unemployment.

The Ontario Minister of Agriculture decides upon a drive to bring into the Province a large number of British farm labourers.

Labour again objects, complaining that these farm labourers would eventually drift into the larger centres and compete for employment with those already there.

And now come the United Farmers, who at their convention in Toronto passed a resolution declaring against a vigorous immigration policy until the conditions in Canada warrant such a move.

The resolution points out that the price of farm products has in many cases fallen below production costs, while the farmer is called upon to pay high prices for what he needs, and declares that until agriculture is on a paying basis it would be unwise to bring more people here.

THE FARMERS SUN.

The Farmers Sun, brought into being to shed its rays into the dark recesses of political corruption and plutocratic profiteering, is partly under eclipse. It lost $15,000 during the last year; its light has become dimmer with each succeeding week; and, worst of all, it is charged with a perverse propensity to shine for a favored few within its lustrous orbit. Accordingly, there is seen the spectacle of its creators quarrelling among themselves, charging fraud, challenging motives, and clamoring for reform.

Two classes of people might take note of the Farmers Sun. First the people who think that newspapers are rich sources of profit. Secondly, the politicians and others who believe in party organs. The Sun had ample scope for success. It had a wide field for circulation within the Farmer Party. It had a great circulation staff within U.F.O. clubs. And it had the war chest of a political party, buttressed by a Government, to cultivate and promote its success. Yet despite this, despite that it had no important news services to purchase, no heavy staff to maintain, no cable or telegraphic tolls to pay, it has lost money steadily and heavily.

The reason—and here is where the politicians should take note—is that the Sun was a party organ. The conduct of a newspaper is, at best, a difficult, delicate thing. It calls for experience, for judgment, for caution, and above all, for knowledge of the public. A party mouthpiece, like the Farmers Sun does not give the public what it wants. The public wants information, news; party organs serve it propaganda. Instead of telling the people what happens, it tells them what to think. For enlightenment and impartial survey of world events, it serves them up dry-as-dust lectures or decayed platitudes about its party and creeds.

The day of that kind of thing is done. There was a time, twenty or thirty years ago, when it was acceptable. But with the spread of education, with the breaking down of old party fetishes, with the new and more healthful public inclination to think for itself, it is as dead as old King Tut.

The newspaper today that sets out to present only one side of a case, to treat all events and developments from one narrow viewpoint, and to persist in propaganda for a single party or cause, is heading straight for the grave. This does not mean that a newspaper should not have principles. Neither does it mean that a newspaper should not believe in or advocate either Liberalism or Conservatism. But there is a vast difference between the holding of certain convictions and the daily or weekly presentation of partisan bigotry to the exclusion of fairness to opponents and the suppression of the case for opponents. There is a vast difference, too, between adherence to, say, Conservative principles and the thick and thin support of what certain politicians may always be pleased to interpret as the principles of Conservatism.

The new order is a better order. It makes for more of fairness and decency in public life. It puts truth before propaganda. It promotes a sounder and a more intelligent public opinion. It is, in a word, a substitution of light for heat, the subservience of mere party rant for discussion and controversy and debate that are essential to wise conclusions.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

An aldermanic field large enough to enable the ratepayers to select five good men should be nominated tonight. The city's interests make this imperative.

San Francisco is noted for its hilly streets. One morning as I was coming to my office on a Sutter street car, and like most men silently thinking, and worrying about certain problems I was to face during the day, I looked ahead at the high hills our car was going to have to climb, and I wondered how power enough could be generated to push it over the tops of them. As we came to them, it seemed as though they had disappeared, and we were traveling on level ground. That evening as I rode home, I tried to call to mind some of the worries I carried down with me that morning but they, like the hills, had disappeared as I came to them.

JUDGMENT UPHELD FOR MRS. BENNETT

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 20. — (Canadian Press.) —There must be no discrimination between pink tea attendants and scrub women, or between society women and Magdalenes, in the application of the law, Justice Grant Fellows, of Michigan Supreme Court, held in an opinion made public to-day.

The opinion was rendered in a suit for damages brought by Mrs. Nina D. Bennett, of Alton county, who charged that several men and women, some of them masked, visited her home in June, 1921, pulled her through a narrow window, stood her against a wall and pelted eggs at her.

Affirming the decision of lower court in favor of Mrs. Bennett, Justice Fellows declared defendants, "by able and adroit counsel sought to besmirch Mrs. Bennett's character."

"The community took the law into its own hands to administer it according to the ethics of the stone age, he said. "It is our proud boast that all are equal before law. If we deviate from this we must adopt one measure of damages for the attendant of pink teas and another for scrub woman; one for society woman and another for Magdaline."

TORONTO LIVE STOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—The return to mild weather again was not liked yesterday morning, but the abbatoirs are fairly well sold out and were willing to buy yesterday in moderation.

In general prices were equally as good as on Wednesday, but the best load of butchers sold yesterday morning went to Gunns at $6.90 a cwt. These were western cattle bought here some weeks ago at $6 a cwt. and fed outside since. Another bunch of good butchers sold at $6.75 a cwt. A baby beef not choice brought 8¼ cents a pound and a choice cow changed hands at 5 cents, but good cows were not considered worth much over 4 cents. There was a light run of calves yesterday and none much above medium quality. Holstein calves in this class sold at 10 cents a pound. Other calves were about unchanged in price, but the Christmas demand satisfied it is not expected that choice calves will hold anything like as firm.

Lambs were quiet and sellers did not think that there would be any price worth recording. Shields & Co. sold a deck not top notchers at $10.50 a cwt.

Prices are steady to firm for hogs and commission houses are holding out for $7.00 a cwt. f.o.b. and packers are bidding $7.75 for the thick smooth.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20.—Receipts, 140 sale cattle and calves and 680 hogs.

The limited offerings on the cattle market were cleaned up early at firm prices.

On the hog market bidding strengthened a further 25 cents over yesterday's close, thick smooths $7.50 and select bacons $8.25.

The market for sheep and lambs was silent due to the lack of arrivals.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.— Increased offerings of wheat, December delivery in particular, weighed down prices here to-day in all the grain pits. Wheat closed unsettled, 1-2 to 1 1-8c. net lower ,with May $1.08 1-8 and 1-4, and July $1.06 1-8 to $1.06 1-4. Corn finished 1-4c to 1-2c. down; oats 1-8c. to 5-8c. off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 17c. decline.

Northwestern interests were generally believed to have led the selling of wheat, especially in the last part of the day. The fact that delivery contracts here were somewhat larger than heretofore had the further effect of bringing about numerous orders to let go of small holdings in that month, and thus to make December relatively weak.

EGGS AND POULTRY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—The poultry situation is difficult to size up and reports even from the same centre are often conflicting. Some western turkeys are offered Toronto ones 26, twos 23 delivered. In the United States the turkey market is very much firmer, live turkeys grading ones selling for 32 cents Buffalo, while the Boston market is quoted at 46 to 48 for good dressed turkeys. Retail prices range chiefly around 30 to 35 cents. The egg situation remains unchanged and it is not likely that prices will altar very much until after the holiday season.

BOY'S EYE SHOT OUT BY YOUTH PLAYING AS "INDIAN FIGHTER"

FLINT, Dec. 21.—"Indian fighting" with bows and arrows which has developed as a craze among children of Flint, has resulted in the loss of the right eye of Frederick Conners, five years old, son of Rev. F. A .Conners, 1637 Mable avenue, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist church.

Two boys on their way home from a neighboring school were carrying on a running "Indian" fight and an arrow struck Conners boy's leg, while he was seated on his tricycle on the sidewalk. This "Indian" was polite and begged the pardon of the Conners boy, according to Rev. Conners, but the other "Indian", a boy of seven or eight, said: "Well I'll shoot him good,' and walked directly in front of the Conners boy, and shot an arrow directly at the boy's face. The arrow head pierced the boy's right eye. The attending physician says there is no hope of restoring the sight.

Rev. F. A. Conners is a former Peterboro pastor.

REBELS REPORT TOWNS TAKEN IN THEIR ADVANCE

President Obregon Complains That the Federal Forces Cannot Overtake Fleeing Enemies — Tear Up Tracks in Retreat.

DECLINE BATTLE.

NOGALES, Ariz., Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press) — Revolutionary forces under Gen. Guadalupe Sanchez have captured Apizaco and four other towns in their march toward Mexico City, and are now within 37 miles of the capital, it was announced here last night by Jose S. Healy, representative of the De La Huerta faction.

The towns of Porto Mexico, Acapulco, Puebla and Cuantla are now in the hands of the rebels, according to the announcement. The Obregon forces are preparing to evacuate the national capital, Healy's announcement declares.

No Enemies In Sight.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press)—"There are no enemies for us to fight, either in Vera Cruz or Palisco," President Obregon told the Foreign correspondents Wednesday night, "because they refuse to give battle and retreat continually, tearing up the tracks, preventing pursuit, and leaving prisoners and munitions behind."

Relative to the situation in the State of Jalisco on the West Coast however, the President stated that he expected a battle there shortly, perhaps before Friday.

The situation in Guerrero is not serious, according to the Chief Executive, although marked by two revolts, the first that of General Romulo Figueroa, and the second, that of the agrarians and workers against Figueroa. The President declared he expected the residents of Guerrero would themselves prove capable of dealing with the rebel general.

OFFICERS TAUGHT ON BRITISH SHIPS

No Canadians in Pay of the British Admiralty, Ottawa States, Answering Press Comment.

OTTAWA, December 20. Canadian Press. — There are no Canadian naval officers in the pay of the British admiralty.

This statement was made this afternoon at the Department of National Defence with reference to a London despatch quoting 'Truth' to the effect that thirty-six Canadian Lieutenants were on the active strength of the Royal Navy. The statement of the Department was as follows:

"There are sixty nine officers of the Canadian navy, most of whom are grauuates of the Royal Naval Colleeg of Canada. Five of these officers have been borrowed from the Roval Navy to fill positions for which no Canadian officer is available. Twenty-seven of the Canadian officers are training in the various naval training schools in England or on board Imperial ships. These officers are not displacing Imperial officers and are not paid by the British admiralty. The arrangement by which a certain proportion of the Canadian officers train with their brother officers of the Imperial navy assures uniformity of practice and close co-operation between the Canadian and the Imperial services. The system is further strengthened by the joint exercises carried out by the ships of the Imperial fleets and of the Canadian navy whenever the opportunity will allow.

"Thirty-seven of the Canadian naval officers are serving in the Canadian naval ships and establishments on the east and west coasts, along with five Imperial officers borrowed from the British admiralty."

Gets a Prison Term For Abusing Family.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 21—Abuse of his wife which included burning her false teeth and turning her out of doors with their three children, brought a prison sentence for Hugh O'Neill, 32 years old, 641 Josephine avenue, when he was arraigned in police court yesterday on a charge of failing to support his family. Magistrate Gundy sent him to Guelph for a term of from one to tow years less a day.

"The last time you were here you chased your wife from home with a gun. The reformatory is the only place for you," the court told O'Neill.

SPEAKERS LAUD DAIRY WORK IN THIS DISTRICT

"Best Dairy District in Best Province" Says G. A. Gillespie at Meeting of Eastern Dairymen's Association.

GOOD RECORD

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 20. —The meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association of the district of Peterborough was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. G. A. Gillespie, of Peterborough, was in the chair and in his opening remarks, explained that the object of these yearly meetings was for the betterment of the dairy industry which is a very important one in this, the best dairy district in the best dairy province. Like every other industry, dairying was hard hit by war conditions, but it is coming back speedily .We must realize though that it means long hours and plenty of work, but work is the only means by which our country can resume normal stability.

Mr. Ward, the District Dairy Instructor, gave his report for the past season. Dairying is the most important branch of agriculture, which is the most important industry of this country and one cannot lay too great stress on the importance of having cheese of the best quality possible and in order that this may be, there must be the best condition at the factory and at the farm. Most of the cheese makers in this district are doing well and the great majority of patrons are giving a first quality supply of milk." "A Satisfied Consumer" should be the motto of the dairymen. The average yield of milk per cow in this district is 2,892 lbs., which is far too low an average and the utmost care should be exercised in breeding, feeding and weeding. Proper care of the herds would greatly increase the profits of dairying. Every cow should give at least 4,500 pounds of milk and some cows are giving 8,000, 10,000 and even 15,000 pounds and what some can do others can do. Eliminate the low grade cow by all means. Regarding the use of milking machines, Mr. Ward approves them if they are kept perfectly clean, otherwise they are worse than hand milking. If dairy products are to be of the best quality absolute cleanliness must be practised in farm and factory.

Government Standard.

Mr. Irwin, who graded cheese this year in Belleville, was the next speaker.

This is the first year that there has been the grading of export cheese by government graders, the standards being those set at the Dominion Dairy Conference held in Ottawa in November 1922. Though this work was in its infancy, special efforts were made to make the grading uniform. This year much of the cheese from No. 2 vats was graded No. 1, but owing to some complaints from the British markets this mistake will be corrected in future. Most of the cheese graded No. 1 received its grading because of its flavour. Don't mix old curds with the new, its poor business, and the trade objects. In regard to the finish of the cheese, Quebec is superior to Ontario, as too many of our products are ill finished. It is hoped that in 1924 there will be a special effort to avoid this. In the matter of the boxes, some of the cheese were too small for the boxes and some too large; in both cases this is a grave fault. The factories of Central Ontario should insist on better boxes from the manufacturers.

Regarding numbers and brands, each factory must apply for a registered number to be furnished by the department during the next season by which it is hoped some of this seasons difficulties may be avoided. Too many factories shop their cheese too green, it should be kept at least 10 days before shipping. Peterboro district does not err in this regard. Up to November 1st of this year 1,329,200 boxes were graded of these 1,210,185 were graded at Montreal and the following is the grading per cent.

Special grade, .60; Number 1, 76.55; Number 2, 20.43; Number 3, 2.42.

There were 92,000 boxes graded at Belleville with the following results Special grade, 6.37; Number 1, 79.92; Number 2, 12.16; Number 3, 1.55.

Eighty per cent of the undergrade chees, came from 17 factories so that puts the grader in the position of being able to trace the matter back to the direct cause of the trouble.

Two grading demonstrations were given at Belleville with good results and during the winter the Dominion Department of Agriculture has arranged a series of grading demonstrations, one will be held in Peterboro on Jan 21st and the speaker urged all makers and their assistants to be present. It will make for a better understanding between the maker and the grader. It would be a good thing if the salesman would also attend.

Was Renominated

On motion of Mr. T. Braden, seconded by Mr. Robinson of Killarney Cheese factory near Norwood Mr. Gillespie was re-nominated to represent the district on the Eastern Ontario Dairyman's Board. Mr. Gillespie's practical knowledge of this work makes him an extremely valuable man for the position.

Mr. Publow, the Provincial Dairy Instructor was the next speaker.

Mr. Publow stressed the point of the value of the large yielding cow and urged the patrons to eliminate their poor stock and to improve their herds.

Dairying is a manufacturing industy and should follow the methods of business enterprises in the matter of economy of production. We produce too large a percentage of under grade cheese and we cannot afford to overlook this matter. While conditions are better there, is still room for improvement 20 or 25 per cent of the cheese made in Canada grades under Number 1. This is too big a per cent and some one suffers as a result. Eighty per cent of the factories are turning out first quality cheese and others should follow. The flavor appears to be on of the principal defects in the undergrade cheese and is caused often by food which taints the milk or the milk is rendered impure from unclean conditions. The good producer is penalized by the careless man and it is the duty of the maker to protect the interests of the good producer.

Need Young Men

There is a sad lack of young men of the right type to learn this business which is so important, cleanliness is absolutely essential in both factory and farm, in order that the best results may be obtained, also a pure and sufficient water supply is necessary. This year, in a dairy competition open to the world, held in England, Eastern Ontario captured three prizes. In 1921 most of the prizes come to Eastern Ontario, but it was not given sufficient publicity and it was not well enough known. Last year South Africa took first place. In Frontenac Co., the County Council and Kingston City Cucil are giving watches to the men who won the pries. Good attractively marketed in best condition will ensure repeat orders.

Mr. E. Hawthorne moved that an appeal be made for the continuance of the dairy standards act.

H. Batten seconded the motion.

T. Braden, president of the Peterboro Cheese Board (the banner board of Ontario), said a few words.

Mr. Hawthorne urged government farm inspections as so many farmers had low grade milk because of insanitary conditions which could easily be remedied. Among those present were, H. J. Abbott S. Harrison, T. Braden, Wm. Thompson, Mount Julian, E. Hawthorne. H. Batten, W. Anderson and Chas. Foster of Warsaw. A. Wilson, Youngs Point, G. Wilson of Buckhorn, R. Robinson of Killarney and a number of others.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Sir,—I would like to add something to your report of the Special Meeting of the City Council held on Monday last. After Ald. Turner introduced his motion to pay the police I strongly opposed this action. I stated that all the Council respected the police still I did not think it wise to pay them until we received the decision.

I stated that the moment we decided to pay them a report would appear in the Toronto morning papers, the judges would see this report and this might prejudice our case. They are only human like ourselves. All that is required is a little more co-operation. The people who pay should have some say.

All being well I expect to attend the nominations on Friday next and any taxpayer asking any reasonable question as to my civic actions during the last two years will receive a satisfactory reply. After that date the public will have ample time to approve or dissapprove.

In conclusion I might say that I offered to advance the money to pay the Policemen's salaries but was informed that this would be illegal.

Yours truly,
ALD. WALTER STOCKER

THE MILLBROOK CONSERVATIVES HOLD ELECTION

L. H. Winslow Heads the Association in Cavan Township.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 21.—The annual meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Cavan township was held in the Town Hall, Millbrook; President L. H. Winslow occupied the chair and after calling the meeting to order addressed the gathering in a way that reflected credit upon himself and the party which he represents. Mr. Winslow outlined the work before the convention and reviewed the history of the Conservative party, past and present, to the satisfaction of his hearers.

At the conclusion of the routine business ,the following officers were elected:

President—L. H. Winslow.
1st Vice-Pres.—J. L. McCamus.
2nd Vice-Pres.—W. W. Brown.
Treasurer—A. J. Henderson.
Secretary—A. J. Fallis, M.P.P.

Following the appointment of officers the member-elect addressed the meeting ,and the closing feature of the gathering was a lively, and general, discussion of present day issues.

The attendance was the largest in many years, and the enthusiasm was in keeping with the importance of the occasion.

Holstein Breeders Meet.

The Durham County Holstein Breeders' Club held their annual meeting in the town hall, Bowmanville, at 1 a.m. on Tuesday, December 18th, when the business of the year was concluded and the following officers elected:

President—W. Fred Fallis, Millbrook.
Vice-Pres.— Archie Muir, Courtice.
Sec'y-Treas. — L. C. Snowden, Bowmanville.
Auditors — Neil Mutton, R. M. Cale, Bowmanville.
Directors — For Darlington, N. Metcalf, J. D. Stevens; for Hope, A. J. Runnals, J. T. Pearce; for Cavan, H. Seymour, T. W. Belch; for Clarke, A. A. Gibson, H. Jose.
Sales Committee—R. R. Stevens, sales manager, A. Muir, A. L. Pearce, N. Mutton, L. C. Snowden, W. F. Fallis.

The next annual meeting will be held in Millbrook in December of 1924. The usual banquet was successfully carried out at the Bowman House at 12 o'clock, the principal speaker being Professor Archibald, of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Others who gave interesting addresses were: H. I. Seymour, H. Jose, Ross Stevens ,and Mr. Abernethy, Ayrshire man. Excellent music was furnished by the Orono orchestra, under the leadership of S. D. Bickle. William Bickle led the singing.

The entire credit for training the characters, and staging of the play, "Miss Buzby's Boarders," which was successfully given under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas' church last week, belongs to Mrs. (Canon) Allen. The mistake in mentioning Miss M. B. Turner's name in this connection probably arose from the fact that it is with the Sunday school entertainment that Miss Turner is assisting. The latter was to have been given on Thursday of this week but for various reasons has been postponed until early in January.

Miss Ruth Sharpe, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sharpe, North Cavan, who was a member of the graduating class at Peterborough Collegiate Institute last week, won the highest Nicholls Scholarship, and also took eleven first class honors in her Form.

Messrs. W. Fred Fallis, H. I. Seymour, and Harry Seymour attended the annual meeting and banquet of the Durham County Holstein Breeders' Club at Bowmanville on Tuesday.

Rev. G .S. and Mrs. Gervan were visitors to Peterborough on Monday.

A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., is a visitor to Toronto this week, going to the city on Thursday.

Mr .and Mrs. Jack Ridge and two children of Sarnia, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Ridge, remaining over the Christmas holiday.

Mr. Reid Hall and daughter, Mrs. W. Fred Fallis, are in Newcastle this week, guests of Miss M. Fanning.

Mrs. F. Smith and daughter, Bernice, were in Oshawa over the week end, guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. Dunford.

Mrs. J. McBrian, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Whitfield, and other friends in Oshawa for the past few months, is at present the guest of her daughter, Mrs. A. Wilson, Main street.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Little Ones Clothed as Result of Good Work of Salvation Army--Municipal Politics.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 21. — There are children in Campbellford to-day who are wearing warm articles of clothing but who would be suffering from cold had not the officers of the Salvation Army come to their rescue, the parents of the little ones being unable to provide for them. In this charitable work the officers were aided by the $40 which they received from the Northumberland Band, the proceeds of a Sunday night concert to which some people objected as a violation of the Sabbath Day.

The Army's annual Christmas tree entertainment was held in the Citadel last night, under the direction of Ensign Isabelle Frowd and Lieut. Laura Hurst. There were 75 children made happy by Santa Claus, the gifts consisting of clothing, toys, candies, oranges and apples and other delicacies. The hall was filled to capacity with the parents and friends of the children, and a liberal collection was taken up. The Army has still on hand a quantity of clothing and other articles which will be distributed later.

It was only this week that Ensign Frowd received from headquarters notice that she had been promoted from Captain to the former rank. Ensign Frowd has been in the work for 10 years, and her advancement is a recognition of the fidelity and ability with which she has always performed her duties. She has been highly successful in the local field since coming to Campbellford from Oshawa last summer, and is ably assisted by Lieut. Hurst, who was formerly stationed in Bowmanville.

St. Andrew's Sunday School.

The annual Christmas entertainment of St. Andrew's Sunday School was held last night in the schoolroom, with the pastor, Rev. C. F. McIntosh, as master of ceremonies. The scholars were out in force and the audience was large. The function was put on jointly by the Sunday school and the Mission band; and the programme was an excellent one, the youthful performers in every number showing that many hours of hard work have been devoted to their training. One of the features of the programme was the singing of the Junior choir, the members of which have been taught by Fred Wiglesworth, organist of the church, who conducts a class for the Sunday school scholars every Tuesday evening.

At the close of the programme J. D. Cumming moved and Mrs. (Dr.) A. Haig seconded a vote of thanks to all those who had taken part in the entertainment, which, Mrs. Haig declared, was the best that had ever been given by the school.

Dressed in the regulation garb, Reeve J. A. Anderson, superintendent of the school, acted as Santa Claus, and presented each of the children and not a few of the elders with bags of candies. The following was the programme in full:

In the Municipal Ring.

Sometimes the office really does seek the man. There is a faction in the town urging A. H. McKeel to go after the mayoralty, but up to last night Mr .McKeel was non-committal. He has had experience as a councillor and is known as a man of tremendous energy, who when he sets out with an object in view generally attains it. His friends say that if he were mayor there would certainly be something doing all the time.

Another name mentioned in connection with the mayoralty yesterday was that of C. W. Palliser, who served six years as a councillor but who was defeated on the school question last year when he aspired to the deputy-reeveship. When in the council Mr. Yalliser acted at different times as chairman of all the important committees so that he is thoroughly familiar with municipal procedure. Other of his friends would like to see him come out for the office he failed to attain last year but so far Mr. Palliser has made no announcement with regard to his intention.

Another new man threw his hat into the municipal ring yesterday. W. J. Abernethy will be a candidate for a place on the council and some of his friends are offering odds that he will head the polls. He is a well known and popular young man belonging to one of the most prominent and one of the oldest families in town, and is a member of the leading fraternal societies. His vocation orings him into contact with the business men whose confidence he enjoys.

A Chimney Fire.

The brigade was called to a chimney fire yesterday at the residence of J. H. Sanderson, near the Methodist Church. There was no damage.

New Coach on C. N. R.

Passengers on the local branch of the C. N. R. can now travel in a higher degree of comfort than ever. The morning train that runs every day from Belleville to Peterboro and leaves the latter city on the return trip at 12.15, has been equipped with one of the seven new coaches that the management had built last summer. The car contains comfortable seats, a cement floor, and is reinforced with steel. The lighting is especially satisfactory, and everything is in advance over the coaches that have been operated on this branch for years.

Ice Disappears.

Caretaker Cole was busy a few days ago flooding the Curling Rink and getting it ready for the season's operation. Ice was slowly forming, but the recent mild spell has upset all plans. There was good skating on the "frog pond," a stagnant body of water near the paper mill, and crowds of young people enjoyed the pastime for some time, but the weather has put an end to this sport.

Miss Helen Irwin returned home for the Christmas holidays from Toronto, where she is attending the University.

Mr. Charles Davidson and son Howard are motoring to Toronto on Friday to spend the week-end.

LABOR GOVERNMENT IS ONLY SOLUTION

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)— A Labor government in Great Britain will be the outcome of the present unsettled political condition, according Sir Donold Mann. Ramsay MacDonald, he believes, will be called upon to take office and the resulting government will be moderate in its treatment of the maojrity of the problems of the day.

Speaking last night upon his arrival in Toronto from England, following cancellation of his proposed trip to Russia, Sir Donald commented upon the political and economic situation in the old country. "While I believe that protection is the best remedy for the economic difficulties of Great Britain," he said, "I am led to believe that the result of the present situation will be the formation of a Labor government.

Unemployment, according to Sir Donald, was severe and presented one of the greatest difficulties at the present time. "Things are going ahead, however," he stated, "and there are signs of a slight improvement."

What Cavan Farmer Has to Say About Ontario Live Stock.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 20.— Commenting further on his recent trip to the International Live Stock Show at Chicago, Harry I. Seymour, of Springdale Farm, Cavan township, said the fact that Ontario can still produce the best Shorthorn cattle was clearly brought out when "Lady Broadhooks," belonging to A .Gordon Auld, of Guelph, won the grand championship after one of the keenest ring struggles ever witnessed in America. The delegates also saw the championships in bulls placed, the grand championship in the Aberdeen-Angus going to "Blackcap Revolution," the property of J. D. McGregor, of Brandon. Quite a sensation was created by the announcement that this animal had been sold to California interests for $15,000.

Addresses of welcome to the delegates were given by His Honor, the Mayor, and by H. B. Heide, secretary and manager of the International. Response was made by P. C. Taff, chairman of the executive committee of club leaders, and on behalf of the boys and girls by one of the boy members. After dinner the judging of Percherons was seen, one of the judges being Mr. O. Tisdale, of Beaverton, Ont.

The speakers at the banquet included Mr. G. Bradford, who spoke on "Opportunities in Agriculture," Mr. Walter M. Head, a banker and club worker, who spoke on 'Achievement and Sucess,' and Mr. Meredith whose address dealt with the place that the farm boy and girl hold in the welfare of the nation. In beginning his subject, Mr. Meredith stated that he would rather talk to this assembly of boys and girls than any other meeting which he had ever been privileged to address.

The cattle from the corn states were being fed either pure corn, or corn mixed with oats. Later the sheep were inspected, the Ontario entries in both Shorthorns and Lincolns, practically sweeping the boards. The exhibit of Lincolns was the best ever seen at the International and the second largest display on the grounds. H. M. Lee, of Highgate, Ont., had a particularly fine stock and won first in several sections. R. S. Robson & Son, of Benfield, Ont., ran Lee a close second and also won first award in a number of classes. The bulk of the awards were divided between two Ontario flocks owned by R. McEwan, of London, Ont., and John D. Larkin, of Queenston, the former winning first, for the second time, on his pen of lambs. Four State Agricultural Colleges competed in the Southdowns, but their entries were not of the smooth, high order found in the Ontario flocks. The only exhibitors of Leicesters were two Ontario breeders.

In the evening the delegates were dinner guests of Wilson & Company, Packers, and a high class entertainment was enjoyed in the auditorium afterwards, for which the hosts also were responsible.

The Field Museum was visited on Wednesday, its immense variety of birds, wild animals, Indian tribes' accessories, etc., proving most educative, and from there the party went to the great Chicago grain market, the largest in the world. "In the pit" was an exciting experience, and on their way out, some hospitable firm remembering that 'teen age boys and girls always have lively appetite, presented each with a rosy-cheeked apple and a real American doughnut. The firm of Sears, Roebuck & Company was the next point visited. This firm, which employs fourteen thousand hands, is one of the largest mail order houses in the States, and the delegates were much interested in going through the parcel and sorting room, the paper factory where among other things they saw wall paper, and catalogues in process of making, the power house, and finally the recreation room was reached and the party being all assembled they were guests of the firm for dinner, an elaborate meal being served. That afternoon the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, consisting of about sixty pieces, was heard in one of the theatres.

On Wednesday, at the International, further honors came to Canada when the Grand Champion award in the male Clydesdale class was won by the Ontario-owned horse, "Mainring," the property of W. B. Cleland, of Hamilton, Ont. This is the fourth successive year in which this honor has been won by Canadian animals. In 1920, and again in 1921, the coveted ribbon was brought home by "Wee Donald," hailing from Saskatchewan, and in 1922 it went to the Manitoba horse, "First Principal." Clydesdales are not the leading breed in the States but the number in that country is far in excess of the Dominion's total.

On Thursday Mr. Seymour visited the famous Carnation Farms at Oconamamac, on Lake LaBelle, where six hundred head of Holstein cattle are kept and the well known Carnation Condensed Milk is made. The farms are situated in a very beautiful part of the country and a visit there is full of interest.

The delegates, after being shown through the plant of the International Harvester Company, were again entertained at dinner, and afterwards enjoyed a splendid outing at Lincoln Park. The Ontario delegation left Chicago that evening at 11.15 by special car, each one feeling that they had spent a very pleasant and profitable time. Many of the boys and girls who attended the International from the different States won their way by means of corn clubs, calf clubs, pig clubs, canning clubs, sewing clubs, etc., one delegate from Ohio stating that there were forty from her county alone in Chicago. Imagine forty from Durham being there.

There are seven hundred thousand club members in the United States, one hundred of these being in Chicago, and it is expected that there will be a total of over one million next year.

WE TAKE this opportunity to wish our numerous clients the compliments of the season and also to thank you for your esteemed patronage during the year. We beg to advise you that we desire all our employees to have the full benefit of the Christmas holiday. In order to make this possible there will be no baking or deliveries from Monday, Dec. 24th, until Thursday, Dec. 27th. This will also apply on Tuesday, Jan. 1, 1924.

MARMORA TRADE BECOMES BRISK

Near Approach of Christmas Brings Out Shoppers —Stores Are Bright.

MARMORA, Dec. 21.—Till the end of last week the storekeepers and business men were discouraged at the lack of the Christmas rush. Till then the weather had been such that the people were not doing much buying and it seemed as though there would be no special trade at the Christmas season.

However, with the few frosty days which followed came the rush in trade which was so desired. The people began their Christmas shopping. Now again the weather is unfavorable but it is to be hoped that business will be carried on with as much snap as it has been the last few days.

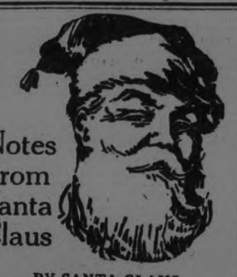
All of the stores betray the fact that it is the Christmas season by their decorations and Christmas stock. These are varied and most tastefully arranged in every case.

The children as they go along the street stop to view the pretty gifts displayed in the windows.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bell and daughter Lorraine spent Wednesday in Belleville.

THEOLOGICAL STUDENTS TO CONVENE IN INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 21.—(Associated Press)—Students from approximately one thousand theological seminaries and colleges throughout the United States and Canada will be here this month end for the biennial convention of the Student Volunteer Movement. The meetings will begin Dec. 28, and continue daily until Jan. 1. Arrangements have been made to care for more than 6,000 visitors, it was state, among them several hundred colored students.



Notes From Santa Claus

BY SANTA CLAUS

TOYLAND, North Pole, Dec. 21

Hello there, children: I promised to tell you all about express wagons and such today.

Well, I'm right in the workshop now. I never saw so much paint flying in my life. There are hundreds of Midgets flinging great brushes, covered with red and yellow and blue and every other color.

Nearby are other Midgets working with hammers and saws, finishing up the express wagons and kiddie cars and sleds. As fast as these are finished they are pushed over to the painting Midgets. And then they are laid aside to dry.

It is lots of fun to watch the Midgets test the roller skates. You know it is rather hard to roller skate until you really know how. Maybe that's why every now and then, a Midgets slips and goes head over heels to the floor.

If you boys and girls would really like to know which wheel toy I like best, I'll tell you. It's the express wagon. And, do you know why?

Because I know that every boy or girl who gets an express wagon will use it, sometimes, to go to the store for mother and bring home the groceries. That will be of big help to mother, and I always like to see boys and girls help out that way.

I am hoping you have the right sort of weather in your city for sleds this year, for I know with the sled in your arms and then suddenly flop down and go coasting along the slippery ice.

Some boys and girls, however, like bicycles better than sleds. So I am going to take all kinds of bicycles on my trip this year.

Tomorrow I'll write all about what's going on in Dollville.

Sincerely,
SANTA CLAUS.

SMITH COUNCIL FINISHES YEAR

Statutory Meeting Held to Clear Up Outstanding Business—New Auditor

The Statutory meeting of the council of the township of Smith was held in the County Council Chamber, Peterboro, on Saturday, December 15th at the hour of ten o'clock. All the members were present with Reeve Middleton in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Owing to the death of the late R. I. Edmison who for the last ten years had been one of the township auditors, it was necessary to pass a by-law making the appointment of Mr. Alex Edmison.

A by-law was also passed appointing Deputy Returning Officers and Poll Clerks for the ensuing year.

Mr. S. J. Charlton of Kawartha Park was present and said that he felt that the township should give him a refund on the $50 license fee he paid for conducting a dance hall. Reeve Middleton said that no reduction could be made this year but probably an adjustment could be made next year.

Mr. F. C. Hungerford asked permission to fence in Esplanda street in front of his property in Chemong Park. Council thought it was out of their jurisdiction, and that the consent of all the property holders must be obtained before any step could be taken.

Mr. Ross Harrison wished a refund of two days statute labor levied on certain property owned by Mrs. A. Trennum, which should have been assessed to him. The increase in his assessment in this case would not call for two days extra. No action was taken,

The treasurer was instructed to pay the following accounts:

M. G. Kidd, gravel and work on roads, $24.50; W. H. Bell, work on winter roads, $2.45; Herb Roseboro, work on roads and culverts $23.50 Archie Young, gravel, 75 cents; Geo. H. Simpson, gravel, $2.70; J.W.Kelly office supplies, $2.75; R. A. Charlton, rent of hall, $3.00; J. H. Hall, tile, $42.08; Examiner, printing, $136.86; W. G. McIlmoyl, balance on repair of culvert, $5.00! Dr. J. A. Morgan, services at M.H.O., $24.50; M. Bell, grading, $21.50; A. G. Clysdale, tile, $8.75; Wm .Preston, grading, $9.00; Jas. P. Ayotte, snowshovelling, $8.00; Alex Elliott, gravel, $5.25; H. McKee, work on road, $4.35.

The council then adjourned.

EMBARGO ON TIMBER.

GIRL RESENTS BANDIT CLOUD

Joyce Norman, Figure in Brooklyn Bank Tragedy, Says Friends Cut Her.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—"The friend of an alleged murderer and the spender of a hold-up man's ill-gotten gains, that is what I have been heralded as and that is what I am not.

This was the statement yesterday of Joyce Norman, show girl formerly with the "Lady in Ermine" company. In the investigation, into the alleged slaying of the Brooklyn bank messengers, Miss Norman was brought to New York from Philadelphia. She continued:

"I am a show girl and I have been a model. But does that make me automatically guilty of everything in the world. Yes, I knew the Diamond boys in Philadelphia. I was introduced to them and took dinner with them. There was nothing more than that between us.

Proposal "A Joke."

"Joe Diamond, whose sweetheart I have been portrayed as being never spoke of love to me. In a way that I took as a joke he suggested that we should marry. I treated it as a joke. Perhaps he was serious. If he was I never knew it.

"After having dinner with him, he spoke with me once over the telephone, waved to me once from his hotel window and then smiled when he saw me in the District Attorney's office in Brooklyn. Does that make me his loved one?

"What money did he spend on me? The price of one dinner, which consisted of chicken a la king and a pot of tea. And just because of this brief acquaintanceship people cut me dead when they meet me on the street. I did nothing wrong.

Her First Stage Job

"I never knew that the Diamond boys had killed a bank messenger until the police told me. Their conduct when with me was always that of perfect gentlemen. I find it hard to picture the Joe Diamond I knew and the cowardly slayer of the bank messengers."

Canadian Citizens Face Deportation.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 21.—Engel Wadjek and his brother Harry, 28 and 30-years old respectively, are facing deportation from the United States to Poland, which they left 12 years ago, although both are Canadian citizens.

The Wadjeks lived in Toronto after coming from Poland and took out citizenship papers there. About a year ago they came to Detroit and have lived here since.

They were arrested, however, for failing to pay a head tax when they came into the United States, and face deportation. According to Dr. Prentis, immigration officer, they cannot return to Canada because of a Canadian law which forfeits citizenship of any naturalized Canadian citizen who lives in another country. Dr. Prentis is in communication with Canadian authorities to see if the rule cannot be waived.

BOY CANNOT BE TRACED.

SARNIA, Ont., Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Willie Quinnee, 9-year-old boy reported from Toronto as lost and held there pending news of his family in Sarnia, is not known in this city. The address is given as 20 Maria street and there is no such number on that street, nor does the directory list anyone by the name of Quinnee. Chief Lannin is endeavoring to find a trace of the family if any of them are in this district.

LEON DION GOT FIFTEEN YEARS FOR ASSAULT

Judge Lacroix commented upon the fact that no friends or relatives of the prisoner pleaded for him, and declared that in the future he will impose life sentences on anybody convicted of a similar offence.

LEAGUE OFFICIALS WANT ITALY'S HELP

GENEVA, Dec. 21.—(Associated Press)—League of Nations officials expect more active co-operation from Italy as a result of the recent visit of Secretary General Drummond to Premier Mussolini. Italy is the latest nation to notify Geneva of its support of the proposal adopted at the last assembly of the league to teach children in the schools the purposes of the league.

Italy has agreed also to grant all possible facilities to groups of students or Boy Scouts and Girl Guides who may be traveling through Italy. The movement to facilitate the traveling of youths was launched at the last assembly.

OPPOSE WATERWAY TASCHEREAU SAYS

International Consideration Will Shortly Be Given Question of St. Lawrence Development

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Premier Taschereau's declaration in a debate on the address in reply to the speech from throne in Quebec that his government was unalterably opposed to the St. Lawrence deepening and power project brings to an acute head that whole question. It is likely a reply will be made shortly to the invitation of President Coolidge to consider the opening of negotiations looking to a final convention for pushing the project. Already a considerable step forward has been taken by public interests on this side of the waterway with the agreement virtually reached by the Dominion and Ontario Government as a result of conferences in Toronto last week, between Hon. Charles Stewart and Hon. George P. Graham representing the Dominion Government and Sir Adam Beck of the Ontario Government. A conference between Premier King and Sir Adam Beck has also been planned and following that it is believed a reply to the United States will be drafted.

OLYMPICS DEFEAT HAMILTON TIGERS

Dangerous to the Last and Playing Good Game Tigers Lost by One Count

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Lacking condition, but playing splendid hockey throughout, Hamilton Tigers battled the Canadian Olympic team, their rivals in the O.H.A. finals last season, to a finish in the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association final last night. The Olympics were on the long end of a 5 to 4 score when it was all over, but the Tigers were dangerous right to the end. Both teams played the puck very little, heavy body checking being indulged in, with the result that the game was featured by clever sitck-handling and at times good combination. It was the tightest fight of the season for Pete Campbell's team, the Olympics having won all their other games played to date by three or more goals. The game was the Tigers first this season, and they only started practice last week, with the result that they lacked the snap to grasp chances to score after they had worked the puck inside the Olympic defence.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

Hark, now, silvery bells are telling,
with joy in every tone,
The sweetest, dearest story that this world has ever known,
Far flinging on the wintry air, the
jubilant refrain,
Of that glad song, celestial hosts
sang on Judea's plain:
"Glory to God, who reigns enthroned
on Zion's heavenly hill,
Peace to the earth, by sin distressed,
to men, Heaven's own good will."

So ring aloud ye chiming bells, your message of good cheer,
The glad evangel spread abroad, exultant, far and near;
Tell how God's blessed Son was born in Bethlehem's stable stall,
Our Prince and Saviour came to bring Salvation for us all;
As balm upon life's troublous sea,
that solace song descends,
For all earth's sorrows, sadness,
sores, making supreme amends.

Welcome, as on dry drooping flowers, eve's gentle dews distill,
So welcome falls on drooping souls,
this Gospel of good will;
May the sweet cadence of that song,
floating o'er vale and hill,
The spirit of Love, and Joy and
Peace, in every heart instill;
And that blest Spirit us constrain,
our petty strifes forego,
And kindness in our bosom's core,
burn warm towards friend or foe.

Glad season, when full freighted flows, the tide of social mirth,
And pleasure holds unbounded sway
around the joyous hearth,
The time when friends of kindred mould, whose meetings have been few,
'Neath mistletoe and holly twined,
friendship's fond ties renew,
But, ah, a vacant place may be, at many a festive board,
Some precious jewel wanting, in our casket-treasured hoard.

O, may the song the Christmas bells ring out in accents clear,
Linger responsive in our hearts,
through all the coming year,
And this our heartfelt wish and prayer for every friend we know,
That Heaven its best and brightest gifts upon them may bestow.
O, holy, happy Christmastide, whatever may befall,
The purest bliss this earth affords,
and Heaven at last for all.

One Person in Every Thirty Receives Relief.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The latest statistics show that one person in every thirty in England and Wales is receiving poor law relief. The Welshpool authorities have stopped giving relief to a large number of men who refused to clean the town reservoir at a wage of 30 shillings a week. The men wanted 33½ shillings, the same pay the scavengers regularly receive, but the town authorities refused the demand.

MR. J. H. THOMAS IS TO SERVE PEOPLE

His Attitude is Not What I Can Get But What I Can Give.

LONDON, Dec. 21. Canadian Press Cable. — J. H. Thomas, chief of the railwaymen's organization, commenting on the Labor Cabinet forecasts remarks:

"Three times I refused the cabinet rank because I felt myself to be be the best judge of how I could serve the people. The position is unchanged. My attitude will still be—not what I can get but what I can give. Ramsey MacDonald is much too wise and honest to be intimidated by any press campaign deliberately intended to weaken his position."

Labor headquarters have their own interpretation of the attitude towards themselves of a certain section of the press. MacDonald, in a foreword to the labor year book, says:

"When there is no motive for distortion the newspapers maintain a high level of accuracy. Facts about the stock exchange quotations, shipping, sporting events, weather, and news of cereal price quotations, are carefully verified. But where personal opinion comes in play bias becomes obvious. The newspaper commences a stunt and all the office staff and correspondents are immediately on the qui vive for copy helping to further the stunt."

STRAWBERRIES RIPE FOR CHRISTMAS DAY

Pansies Blooming at This Season Are Strange but This is One Better.

STRATFORD, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press)—The fact that a man can go to his garden and pick pansies on December 20 is unusual enough in itself, but when fully developed straw berries are found the experience is indeed remarkable. When F. Crocker visited his garden yesterday, he found strawberry vines with fruit in every stage of development.

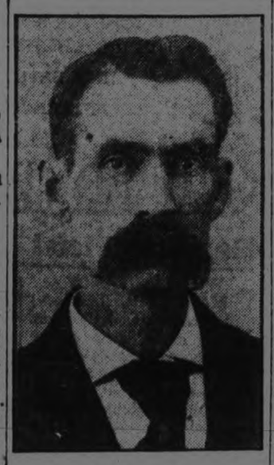
HASTINGS MAN HAS HAD LONG OFFICE CAREER

Alex. Wilson Has Been Clerk of the Municipality for 33 Years.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

(By Staff Reporter.)

HASTINGS, December 21. — Alex. Wilson was born in the village of Hastings in a log cabin that stood on the present site of the brick building occupied by Dr. J. H. Hess as a garage and after a strenuous boyhood and youth, rose to be a successful business man, the holder of various municipal offices, the most important position being the one he still occupies after 33 years of faithful service. This lengthy record eclipses by several years that of S. R. Armstrong, city clerk of Peterborough. Like Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Wilson is recognised as a standing authority on municipal law, and while he lives Hastings will have only occasional necessity for employing a solicitor to guide the officials through the mazes of the legal wilderness. All his life, with the exception of one year when he waslearning the harnessmaking trade in Norwood he has resided in his native district.



MR. ALEX WILSON.

All the education Mr. Wilson received was a three years' course in the Public School, which at the outset of his academic career was held in the basement of the Methodist Church. His first and only teacher was James C. Brown, who afterwards became Public School inspector for Peterborough County. Those were the days when blue beech discipline was the vogue. The future village clerk picked up as much practical learning during the three years as a naturally bright youngster could possibly acquire, but at the age of ten years he was obliged to leave school to make his own way in the world.

Cook's Assistant in Shanties.

His first start in life was in the Fowlds' lumber yard, and he was three years in the employ of that firm, putting in one winter in the company's shanties at Stoney Lake, acting as assistant to the cook.

Learns Harnessmaking.

Those were boom days in Hastings as the lumber business was at the zenith. Camps and mills were everywhere and Hastings merchants reaped a rich harvest in furnishing supplies to the camps and boarding-houses. There were eight harness-making shops in Hastings at the time all busy manufacturing the equipment required for the scores of horses belonging to the lumber companies.

Young Wilson, 14 years old at the time, was anxious to learn a trade, and chose harnessmaking, working three years in the shop of Hiram Sedgwick. At the end of that time he spent a year in the shop of B. F. Ackerman, now of Peterborough, who was then located in Norwood. The young fellow walked to his home every Saturday night and returned on Monday morning.

At the end of his year in Norwood Mr. Wilson, who was an expert at his trade, opened a shop of his own and prospered. It was only natural that a young fellow who had led so strenuous a life should look older than his years. When he was 19 he was appointed tax collector. When he objected that he was not of age, and so could not serve legally, those responsible for his appointment told him to go ahead, as no one would know the difference.

For 50 years Mr. Wilson has been in business in Hastings, first as a harnessmaker, giving that up for the hardware trade when the lumber industry ran its course and the number of horses decreased in the district. For 17 years he was also an auctioneer, giving up that sideline a short time ago.

Missed One Year.

In spite of his business activities Mr. Wilson has since attaining his majority, been identified with the municipal life of the village with the exception of one year. He was 22 when he first donned the civic harness. He was appointed clerk in 1890, and since that time has put in 20 years as a member of the School Board.

Becomes Band Leader.

Born with a taste for music, Mr. Wilson joined the first brass band that was organised in Hastings, the 18 or 20 members of which were so devoted to their art that they used to meet at 5 o'clock in the morning to practise, no other hours being available in their busy lives. The teacher drove in from Norwood to instruct the band every morning a practice was held. Mr. Wilson afterwards became leader of the band.

Best Penman in Hastings.

The school days of the subject of this sketch were limited, but he acquired a vast store of knowledge by self instruction. He is conceded to be the best penman in Hastings, and his official documents are models of neatness.

Is a Presbyterian.

A life-long friend of Mr. Wilson is Rev. D. A. Thomson, who came to Hastings a young pastor just out of college seven years before the latter was appointed village clerk. Mr. Wilson is prominent in the work of the Presbyterian Church, and was chairman of the building committee when the present edifice was erected to replace the one destroyed by fire some years ago.

Mr. Wilson's years of devotion to business as well as to his civic duties has brought him reward in the shape of a competence, but his friends say they never expect him to give up work so long as life lasts. Used to activity as he has been all these years, anything like idleness would prove his physical undoing.

CHRISTMAS FIRESIDE STORIES

Tradition says that the bells of all buried churches join the chorus of bells which proclaim Christmas though they are heard on no other night in the year. In Holland the story of the city of Been is told every Christmas. This wonderful place was famous for its magnificence and beauty and notorious for its wickedness. One day the whole city was swallowed up by the sea. There are the bells of Raleigh, once a prosperous village in Nottinghamshire, now only a country valley. All sign of habitation was swallowed up many years ago in an earthquake. It is said that every Christmas Eve the bells of the church are heard to ring again. The submerged bells of Dunwich, now covered by the sea, are said to join the ghostly chorus.

It is hardly credible but none the less true that at one period of the history of Great Britain Christmas was declared illegal. Oliver Cromwell had a law passed to put down what was described as "a superstitious festival" and the holly and mistletoe were ordered to be destroyed root and branch as "plants of the Evil, One."

In order to attain his end the Protector enacted that the markets were to be held on December 25. The command, however, was more honored in the breach than the observance.

Once when Henry VIII lay very ill in December, and it was thought there was a chance of his dying, by common consent it was decided to have a silent Christmas, without bells, carols or merrymaking.

In olden days it was customary at many of the great churches in England to appoint one of the choir boys a "Bishop" for the Christmas season. the boy-bishop was waited on by the Dean, canons and clergy alike and during his few days of authority his word was law.

At St. Paul's Cathedral he had the right to claim supper from the Dean, and he attended with a retinue of clerks, vergers and choristers. On Innocents Day he dined in state and afterwards went in procession through the city. He had also the right to demand contributions from anyone he could waylay. Dean Inge records that in 1396 the boy "Bishop" of York collected no less than the equivalent of $385. As money was of far greater value in those days than it is now—eggs were then 24 for two cents—this represents something like $6000 in present day money.

Moddra Niht or Mothers' Night is the oldest English name for Christmas though the old customs of Mothers' Night have gradually died out. It was the custom for the early Saxons to dedicate the night of Christmas to the special honor of Mothers. They occupied the seats of honor and everyone brought them gifts. The custom remains to some extent in the North of England in mothering Sunday. On that day everyone who can do so still makes a pilgrimage homewards, and the mother receives the homage of her family.

Two merchants travelling at Christmas were discussing trade depression and the number of people who had bought things without paying for them. "And to think" said one, "I sent everyone of my customers a nice calendar this Christmas." "Never mind" said the other, "the season of peace and good will will be ended soon. You can summon the blighters in the New Year."

The Christmas waits were doing their best to create discord in the neighborhood when a stranger came up to the leader and said, "Come along with me. I'll put you on to a good thing. Come along with me." Six men followed him obediently. They stopped opposite a big house apparently occupied by a wealthy man. "Here is a man who loves music," said the stranger. "If you play for an hour or so I am sure he will give handsomely."

The waits had played themselves almost out of breath when a policeman approached and asked the leader of the band what they were doing. "What do you mean, sir?" asked the leader. "Why, man," said the policeman, laughing louder, "don't you know you are playing in front of the Deaf and Dumb Institute?"

A witty individual one Christmas morning wagered that he would ask fifty different persons the same question and receive the same answer from each. The wit went to one and to another until he had spoken to the whole 50. And this is how he won the bet. He whispered half audibly to each: "Say have you heard that Smith has failed?"

"What Smith!" queried the whole fifty one after another; and it was decided that the bet had been fairly won.

Fun ran riot at the Christmas party and when the lights were lowered for an old-fashioned game Bifkins thought he would edge closer to the girl who during the evening had favored him with not a few glances of seasonable goodwill.

After the scramble the lights went up and there also rose a howl from one of the junior guests.

"What's the matter, Willie?" inquired the hostess, "Didn't you get any snapdragons."

"Boo-oo," sobbed the little boy, "I didn't get a chance. As soon as the lights went out Mr. Bigfkins got hold of my hands and kept on squeezing them and saying something about 'little peach.' Who wants peaches at Christmas time?"

The greatest moment of the great day had arrived. Amid cheers and shrieks of delight the Christmas pudding made its debut. It had a sprig of holly stuck in its crown, and the cheer died away into silence as the hostess commenced speaking.

"In this pudding," said the lady, "is five-cent piece, a little china doll and a button. Whoever gets the little silver coin will be rich; whoever gets the china doll will be a bride before the year ends; if a lady gets the button she will be an old maid." Rapidly the pudding disappeared and one by one the articles appeared—except the button. What had become of it puzzled the hostess vastly and after dinner she mentioned it to her "wee" daughter Gladys.

"Oh, Mammie," lisped the little maid, "I got the button! But I didn't want everyone to laugh at me and make joketh at my expenth, so I thwallowed it!"

Yuletide Customs

In all lands for nearly two thousand years Christmas has been marked by various rites and ceremonies, the origin of which are for the most part wrapped in obscurity and are therefore interesting.

For instance not many people know that the custom of hanging up stockings on Christmas Eve had its origin in a legend about St. Nicholas. This stocking hanging was generally done on December 6, the Eve of St. Nicholas, and in some countries, notably Belgium, this date is still adhered to. The story goes that there was a poor nobleman who had three daughters and was too poor to provide the girls with a dowry. Good luck came their way one night however, for St. Nicholas dropped three fat purses of gold down their kitchen chimney. It was the fashion in olden days to make purses something like the modern stocking and this developed into the present day custom.

"BLACK OXEN"

XXVII. (Continued)

"An hour! Little you know. And subjects don't drop out of the clouds, dear Anne. I have to go through all the newspapers, read an endless number of books—not all fiction by a long sight—glance through the magazines, reviews, weekly publications and foreign newspapers, read my rivals' columns, go about among the Sophisticates, attend first-nights, prize-fights, and even see the best of the movies. I assure you it's a dog's life."

"It sounds tremendously interesting. Far more so than my own. I am so tired of that! '—that is one thing I wanted to talk to you about—I meant to bring it up at my dinner—I wish you would introduce me to some of your Sophisticates. Uncle Din says they are the most interesting people in New York and that he always feels young again

"'Come now! . . . You can spare me an hour.'" when he is at one of their parties. Will you take me to one?"

"Of course I will. The novelty might amuse you——"

"It is not only novelty I want. I want really to know people whose minds are constantly at work, who are doing the things we get the benefit of when we are intelligent enough to appreciate them. I cannot go on in the old way any longer. I paint more or less and read a great deal—still on the lines you laid down. But one cannot paint and read and walk and motor and dance all the time. Even if I had not gone to France I should have become as bored and disgusted as I am now. You know that I have a mind. What has it to feed on? I don't mean, of course, that all the women I know are fools. Some of them no doubt are cleverer than I am. But all the girls of my set—except Marian Lawrence, andwe don't get on very well—are married; and some have babies, some have lovers, some are mad about bridge, a few have gone in for politics, which don't interest me, and those that the war made permanently serious devote themselves to charities and reform movements. The war spoilt me for mere charity work—although I give a charity I founded one afternoon a week—and mother does enough for one family anyhow! I see no prospect of marrying—I don't know a young man who wants to talk of anything but sport and prohibition—you are an oasis. There you are! The Sophisticates are an inspiration. I am sure they will save my life."

"But have you reflected——" Clavering was embarrassed. She had controlled her tones and spoken with her usual crisp deliberateness, but he knew that the words came from some profound emotional reaction. For Anne Goodrich it was an outburst. "You see—it is quite possible that when the novelty wore thin you would not be much better off than you are now. All these people are intensely interested in their particular jobs. They are specialists. You——"

"You mean, what have I to give them?"

"Not exactly. You could give them a good deal. To say nothing of your own high intelligence, they are by no means averse from taking an occasional flyer into the realm of fashion. Curiosity partly, natural human snobbishness, perhaps."

"They will go to your house if you invite them, no doubt of that, and they may conceive an enthusiastic liking for you. But after all, you would not be one of them. Even though they genuinely appreciated your accomplishments, still you would be little more than an interesting incident. They are workers, engaged in doing the things they think most worth while—which are worth while because they furnish what the intelligent public is demanding just now, and upon which the current market places a high value. And you are merely an intellectual young woman of leisure. They might think it a pity you didn't have to work, but secretly, no matter what their regard, they'd consider you negligible because you belong to a class that is content to be, not to do. I assure you they consider themselves the most important group in New York—in America—at present: the life-giving group of suns round which far-off planets humbly revolve."

"I see. You mean that my novelty would wear thin long before theirs. Heaven knows I have little to give them. I should feel rather ashamed sitting at the head of my table offering nothing but terrapin and Gobelins. But don't you think I could make real friends of some of them? Surely we would find much in common to talk about—and they certainly take time to play, according to Uncle Din."

"I think there would always be a barrier. . . . Ah! I have an idea. Why don't you set up a studio and take your painting seriously? Cut yourself off from the old life and join the ranks of the real workers? Then, by degrees, they would accept you as a matter of course. You could return their hospitality in your studio, which could be one of the largest—there is no danger of overwhelming them; they are too successful themselves. Think it over."

Miss Goodrich's face, which had looked melancholy, almost hopeless, lit up again. Her red mouth lifted at the corners, light seemed to pour into her hazel eyes. "I'll do it!" she exclaimed. "I did a portrait of father last month and it really is good. He is delighted with it, and you know how easy he is to please! I wonder I never thought of it before. You certainly are the most resourceful man in the world, Lee—by the way, I hear there is a party at that wonderful Gora Dwight's tonight. Do take me."

"'But you'll keep your word and tell me everything tonight-'"

"Oh! . . . I'm so sorry . . . it's quite impossible, Anne. I wish I could. . . . I'll take you to one next week. And meanwhile get to work. Be ready to meet them in the outer court at least. You'll find it an immense advantage—rob your advent of any suggestion of curiosity."

"I'll look for a studio tomorrow. That is the way I do things—my father's daughter, you see."

She spoke with gay determination, but her face had fallen again. In a moment she began to draw on her gloves. "Now I'll have to run if I'm to dress and get over to Old Westbury for dinner at eight. Thank you so much, Lee; you've been a godsend. If I were a writer instead of a mere dabbler in paints, I'd dedicate my first book to you. I'm so sorry I haven't time to drive you down to Madison Square."

Clavering, drawing a long breath as if he had escaped from imminent danger, saw her into her car and then walked briskly home. He intended to dine alone tonight. And in a moment he had forgotten Anne Goodrich as completely as he had forgotten Janet Oglethorpe.

CHURCH CASTS OFF SALARIED POSITION

In terviewed last night members of the commission suggested that "Mr. Church should make his own announcement." At a late hour the former Mayor could not be secured.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

THE CHRISTMAS DINNER.

Sister Mary Gives Two Menus For the Holiday.

If you had turkey for Thanksgiving you may not want it for Christmas, but there is a great variety of meats from which to choose.

Roast goose is quite Christmasy and with prune, onion or potato stuffing, delicious.

A crown roast of pork is appropriate and perhaps the nicest sort of "piece de resistance" for the small family.

Not only the dinner menu should be carefully planned but the meals for the entire day. Breakfast is apt to be a hurried meal for the cook if she is also the housewife, so let this meal be easy to get.

If Christmas dinner is served at one o'clock, a light, easily digestible supper will be welcome. In many families the "come-to-the-cupboard" part of Christmas is considered as much fun as the dinner itself. But if the same rich and heavy foods are indulged in that formed the dinner, indigestion may result.

Christmas supper served in the living room will appeal to the family.

A reasonable amount of thought should be used to prevent repeating flavors. For instance, if grapefruit is used for breakfast, don't begin the Christmas dinner with chilled grapefruit. Or if crown of pork is the dinner meat, don't have bacon or sausage for breakfast.

Menu Suggestions

Use pimentoes, pickled beets and olives for garnishing the Christmas canapes. These should be in the shape of stars.

Maraschino, candied, preserved or canned cherries carry out the Christmas colors in desserts.

The blushing apples are colored with tiny red cinnamon candies.

The orange juice should be prepared the night before.

The salad in the dinner menu is made of mixed fruit, served in a bright red apple cup on a bed of shredded leaf lettuce. A small spoonful of whipped cream topped with a bit of crimson jelly or a cherry may cover the salad piled slightly above the apple shell.

The best pickles could be cut in the shape of stars or tiny Christmas trees for the supper menu.

Roast Goose

Goose should not be more than eight months old at the most. Four to six months is preferred, although a four-month goose is usually roasted without stuffing. An eight-month to a year-old goose should be steamed before roasting.

Scrub and wash thoroughly inside and out. Be sure any soft fat on the inside is removed. Rinse well in cold water; wipe dry. Rub inside with salt and pepper and onion cut in half. Stuff and sew the opening, then truss and put in roaster. Roast an hour and pour off fat in the pan. Then dredge with flour, season with salt and pepper and roast one to two hours longer, depending on age of bird. When flour is browned baste with boiling salted water. A goose is usually so fat that pure water is better for basting than the drippings in the roaster.

Prune Suffing.

One cup prunes, 2½ cups soft stale bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1-8 teaspoon cloves, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon grated lemon riud, 4 tablespoons melted butter.

Wash prunes and soak over night in cold water to cover. Cook in water until tender but not broken. Drain and reserve juice to moisten dressing. Stone prunes and chop coarsely. Mix prunes and crumbs, seasonings, grated rind and juice of lemon. Add butter and toss with a fork. Moisten with prune juice.

Two cups of bread crumbs and one-half cup of Italian chestnuts boiled and chopped make a delicious dressing, instead of all bread crumbs.

Martinique Potatoes

Six large baked potatoes, 3 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons cream, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, few gratings nutmeg.

Remove potatoes from skins and mash. Beat in butter, cream, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored and beat into potatoes. Cook three minutes, stirring constantly. Beat white of egg until stiff and dry and fold into first mixture. Shape between two buttered spoons, place on a buttered dripping pan or sheet and bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven. The potatoes should brown slightly while baking.

Crown Roast of Pork

May be a rib roast or spare ribs. If rib roast, have butcher chop through bones of two strips, containing six chops each or less as needed. Trim ends of bones evenly and tie in a circle having meat on inside. The squares of buttered paper over ends of bones to prevent charring. Season with salt and pepper and roast in moderate oven.

Allow from two to three hours for roasting. Baste frequently with drippings. Pork must be well done. Remove paper before sending to the table, cover with paper frills. Garnish with parsley and the "blushing" apples if platter is large enough to permit comfortable carving.

If "spare ribs" are used, tie two strips together in a circle and fill with the following stuffing:

One cup chopped apples, one-half cup seeded raisins, two pounds bulk sausage or finely chopped pork stenk, one teaspoon minced onion, one teaspoon poultry seasoning, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, one cup dried bread crumbs, water to make moist.

If seasoned sausage is used, gauge the seasonings accordingly.

Mix all ingredients well and add just enough water to hold mixture together.

BIGGEST POWER UNIT STARTS AT NIAGARA

70,000 Horsepower Turbine Does Work That Would Require 700,000 Tons Coal in Steam Plant.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Dec. 21.—The largest hydroelectric unit in the world was placed in commercial operation here in the new plant of the Niagara Falls Power Company in the lower gorge. A delegation of prominent hydraulic and electric experts and Government officials was present.

The unit weighs more than 1,750 tons. It consists of a 70,000 horsepower hydraulic turbine attached to an electric generator delivering 52,000 kilowatts at 12,000 volts— the first of three such units to be installed in the $12,000,000 project. When completed, the station will house units with a total capacity of 454,000 horsepower.

The new unit uses 3,200 cubic feet of water a second, with an efficiency of at least 93 per cent. It demands only the same amount of water, however, as was formerly used by seven 5,000 horse-power unions, although it delivers energy equivalent to the output of fourteen such units. Each of the three new turbines will produce the energy for electricity which if generated by steam power would require 700,000 tons of coal annually.

The turbine is the most powerful ever constructed. It is a product of the I. P. Morris division of the Cramp Ship and Engine Company of Philadelphia. Special cars were required to transport the castings. The waterwheel is a single piece casting weighing 195,000 pounds. The turbine casing and control valve required thirty-two carloads of parts. The turbine drives the generator by a 32-inch shaft.

The generator is the largest in the world. The stator or frame weighs 228 tons, the rotor, with its twenty-eight eight ton poles, is 21 feet in diameter and weighs 399 tons. The generator was manufactured at the Schenectady works of the General Electric Company. A companion machine is now approaching completion at Schenectady.

The three new hydroelectric units will be driven by a new hydraulic pressure tunnel completed this summer. The tube, 32 feet in diameter and 4,300 feet long, carries the water through solid rock from the head of the rapids above the falls under the City of Niagara Falls to the edge of the high cliff below the falls. The tunnel discharges into a great forebay or basin, from which the water is conducted to the turbines by three 21-foot tunnel penstocks, cut through the limestone cliff.

Some two million persons will share in the increased power produced by the project. It means more power for Buffalo and for all on the Niagara frontier. Despite the additional energy from thenew unit, however, as well as the energy to be produced by the other two big machines which will go into service next year, the demand for Niagara power outruns the supply.

WRECKED A TRAIN TO KILL HIMSELF

MONTPELIER, France, Dec. 21.—(United Press.)— A French railroad worker, Paul Fabre, wishing to end his life, took out an engine, started it on the main line and, running ahead of it, threw himself on the track and was killed.

The engine continued on its way and crashed headlong into a passenger train, wrecking it, fortunately without casualties.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

"I'm worn by both beggar and knight."

This was the next riddle that the Riddle Lady made up in Riddle Land:

"I'm worn by both beggar and knight,
Sometimes I am loose, sometimes tight,
Quite often I feel
A bit down at the heel,
And then without doubt I'm a sight.

"Sometimes I am tall, sometimes flat,
As often I'm thin as I'm fat,
The older I grow,
The more wrinkles I show,
But I'm never upset about that.

"Though my body's as black as a coal,
You must know that I boast of a sole,
But the thing that I fear,
With old age drawing near,
Is that it wears into a hole.

"I walk further far than I ride,
For I have a remarkable stride,
But the thing that is droll,
When I go for a stroll,
Why, I carry my tootsies inside!

"I button up tight, or I lace,
And I whisper that's not a disgrace,
And I've ten perfect toes,
though I haven't a nose,
And my tongue is as long as my face.

"I've a twin brother, too, if you please!
They say we're as like as two peas,
We are always together,
No matter what weather,
And but for goloshes we'd freeze."

Puss-in-Boots stroked his whiskers thoughtfully. "I might guess the answer if I tried very hard," he said, "but I don't think it fair to take advantage."

"That's what I think," said the Old - Woman-Who-Had-So-Many-Children-She-Didn't - Know-What-To Do.

Goody-Two-Shoes was passing by and stopped just in time to hear the Old Woman's remark.

"What is all the talking about?" she remarked. "I was just on my way to the cobbler's to get my shoes mended."

"Hey?" What's that?" the Old Woman wanted to know. "I'm a little hard of hearing."

"Shoes!" yelled Goodie. "I said that I—"

But she hadn't time to finish for all the Riddle Land people called out, "She's guessed the riddle. Goody-Two-Shoes guessed the answer without even hearing it. She gets the prize."

Nancy ran to the lucky little girl. "Here," she said, "here is a pair of nice little red shoes. You won't have to go to the cobbler's after all."

RADIUM DISCOVERER IS NOW IN POVERTY.

Has Devoted All Her Money to Scientific Research and Is Now In Want.

PARIS, Dec. 21'—(United Press)—Mme Curie, whose name is inseparably linked with the discovery of radium, of untold value to science and medicine, has devoted every franc she ever passessed to scientific research.

As a result, she is in extremely straightened circumstances, but has refused all offers of financial assistance for her personal needs. Friends and collaborators have, however, much against her will, presented her case to the French government and it is likely that parliament will shortly agree to a proposal of the ministry of public instruction to grant her a state pension of forty thousand francs, or about $2,200 a year.

Mme. Curie's modesty and desire for self-effacement is proverbial in French scientific and newspaper circles. When she returned from the United States with the precious grammie of radium presented to her by the women of America for her laboratory she could scarcely be induced to say a dozen words for publication.

The government's proposal is intended to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the discovery of radium, an achievement accomplished by Mme. Curie and her husband, Dr Pierre Currie, who was killed in an automobile accident in Paris in 1906. The first of the hitherto unknown elements isolated by the scientific couple was named Polonium, as a tribute to Mme. Curie's birthplace.

"This discovery,' says the proposal "was one of the marvels of modern science. Prepared by the remarkable researches of Henri Becquerel, the collaboration of M. and Mme. Curie first revealed Polonium, then radium, the most active and mysterious of natural substances. France feels it a duty to demonstrate its gratitude to those who have given this glory to the nation. Pierre Curie died prematurely. With admirable constancy, extraordinary faith and abnegation, Mme. Curie has carried on the work. The moment has come for a national recompense."

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 20.—The local Salvation Army band began their Christmas serenading last week, and have been putting on enjoyable open air concerts since.

Arrival of Santa Claus

Upon two occasions during the week the boys and girls of Cobourg have gathered about one thousand strong at a couple of the local stores, where it was announced that Santa Claus would arrive, and make it his headquarters for the time being. In each instance about 1000 bags of candy were given out. One store disposed of sixty pounds.

Community Tree Up

A gigantic Christmas tree reaching almost to the top of the Town Hall now occupies a conspicuous position in front of that well-known edifice. This is the community Christmas tree, around which citizens of town and county will assemble. In this annual and spectacular event of the yuletide season tomorrow night.

Prize Winners at Bazaar

A very successful Christmas bazaar was held here for three days by the Sodality of St. Michael's church, and during which there was keen competition for different prizes. The winners of the drawing for prizes were: Mahogany table, James Gillard; fernery, Mrs. Jos. Flannigan; cake, Mrs. Don Crozier; pair of blankets, Miss Annie Holmes; cord of hardwood, Donald Hill; doll lamp, Miss Mary Moore; jardiniere, Geo. Turpin; electric iron, T. Nominations at Night

Port Hope Town Council received a communication asking that nominations be held in the evening, so as to enable many who are engaged during the day to attend the meeting. The communication was signed by about fifty ratepayers.

Bay of Quinte Dentists Organize

At Brighton on Monday evening Bay of Quinte Dentists formed themselves into an organization to be known as the Bay of Quinte Dental Society. Dr. J. A. Bothwell, of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, was the clinician at the meeting. Following officers were elected: President, Dr. J. F. Simpson, Trenton; Secretary-Treasurer, Dr. G. F. Wright

Local and Personal

Mr. A. . Donaghy has completed a new up-to-date residence at Colborne, which he is now occupying.

Mr. James Curtis has sold his farm near Fenella in Haldimand township, it is stated, to Mr. Fred George.

Mr. J. H. Davidson of town was judge of Shire and Thoroughbred horses at Guelph Winter Fair.

Dr. Wilson arrived in Cobourg from Penetang recently to assume the position of medical superintendent at the Cobourg Hospital.

A cut of fifteen per cent in domestic consumption and commercial lighting for Trenton consumers of Hydro power and light, is announced, and will doubtless prove to be a welcome Christmas gift to residents of that town.

Cobourg Court of Revision listened to a long list of appeals from the assessment and quite a number were allowed.

The annual meeting of the Northumberland County Farmers Clubs recently held at Castleton was a representative one.

The auditors of the firm of Oscar Hudson & Co., Toronto, were in town last week auditing the books of the Corporation of Cobourg.

RECTOR INDUCTED ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Rev. Walter Cox Takes Over New Duties in Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 20.—The institution and induction of Rev. Walter Cox into the parish of St. John's church, Lakefield, was held in Wednesday evening. The induction service was preceded by evensong which was said by Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D., of St. John's, Peterboro, while Rev. J. Lancaster Hughes of Young's Point read the lessons.

The institution and induction was conducted by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto and was an extremely impressive service. The churchwardens, J. F. Lillecrap and T. B. Marling, were present, the former presenting the keys of the church to the new rector.

The preacher was Venerable Archdeacon Warren, Archdeacon of York, formerly a rector of Lakefield.

He took his text from the Revelation of St. John the Divine, chapter 1, verses 12-13.

We should reflect on the meaning of the revelations as it means the unfolding to man's mind things belonging to the unseen world, ordinarily not seen. We are too apt to doubt the existence of the unseen. St. Paul said: "Those things which are seen are temporal but the things not seen are eternal." The religious lawlessness and indifference of the present day is due to the fact that too many people are content to live taking account only of the things seen. It is a pernicious practice to question and predict the judgments of God. God reveals himself through the Bible beginning with the stories of the world's history in its earliest days, and continuing through the social, moral and ecclesiastical laws given to His people. The judgment of God on the doings of men is shown in the historical books; and in the philosophy of Job, the preaching of the Prophets, the wonderful hymns of praise in the Psalms God is revealed. In the new Testament God reveals Himself in the life of Christ and then in the latter days He reveals Himself to St. John in exile on the Island of Patmus, showing the glory of God and the Holy City. It is the last book of the Bible and it was written for the purpose of encouraging the churches which were struggling against cruel persecution and many members suffering martyrdom. St. John says: "I, John, was in the spirit on the Lord's day," we should emulate the writer in this as we are far too seldom "in the spirit." The vision shows the Son of Man in His glory, a sight which inspires deepest awe.

There would be fewer local difficulties today if we held a higher ideal of the church of God. We must learn the lesson of the Divine origin of the church and ministry of God and our attitude to both will be governed accordingly.

Not only have the Church and the Ministry divine origin, but also the ordinances of the church and it is a sign of moral degeneracy when God's ordinances are neglected. We should realize the serious character of our calling and take more account of the serious side of life.

The church at Ephesus was a laborious and zealous church and disliked evil men but in their labor and zeal they forgot their first devotion and love for Christ. We may be too devoted to the orthodox methods and neglect the love which only can keep up alive.

The church at Saidis had a name that lived but the Son of God called it dead because nothing that was undertaken was completed.

The church of Laodicea was very rich and had a beautiful church but the advance was only material and not spiritual.

There is a strong lesson in the story of these three churches. We are disciples of the Master, witnesses for Him, and we must abandon all that stands in the way of the pursuit of our knowledge of the reality of God and the eternal Christ and the eternal Church. We must realize that God controls the destinies of the universe and it is meet and right that we should take courage and drink in the truths which inspired our forefathers. The Bishop gave a few words of exhortation to the people which contained timely advice which if taken will insure the betterment of the parish and the furthering of God's work. Dr. R. C. Blagrave acted as the Bishop's Chaplain.

Among the clergy present were the Lord Bishop of Toronto, the Archdeacon of York, Dr. R. C. Blagrave and Rev. J. L. Hughes, of Young's Point.

Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Elliott, of Port Hope, motored to the village for the induction of Mr. Cox.

POINCARE WILL RESIGN IF BEATEN ON SATURDAY

(By Webb Miller, United Press Staff Correspondent).

PARIS, Dec. 21.—Premier Poincare, following the technical defeat of the Government by an adverse vote in the Chamber yesterday, determined to-day to employ "steamroller" methods to force his domestic programmes through Parliament. He will not resign.

Count De Lasteyer, Finance Minister, in an interview regarding yesterday's defeat on the question of a subsidy for the Government employees, declared the project would be proposed again with only slight modifications on Saturday. This time the Government will resign if beaten.

Similarly, Poincare will demand a vote of confidence from the Senate when his proposal regarding the new electoral procedure to be adopted comes up.

LONG GREY BOX WAS NEGLECTED

Body of Andrew Sullivan, Reputed International Bank Robber, Remained Unclaimed Until This Morning.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—The body of Andrew Sullivan, former "Buddy" of "Red" Ryan and International Bank Robber, who was trapped and killed in Minneapolis, came into the Union Station last night Mrs. Sullivan, wife of the dead man, and Daniel Sullivan, his brother accompanied the body but on arrival at the station they hurried out through the gate.

No one came near the long grey box. The baggage men lifted it on to a truck and trundled it along the station platform.

For over half an hour the grey box remained on the truck, but finally the corpse of Andrew Sullivan was wheeled into the baggage room, where it was claimed early this morning.

RUSSIANS DENY RED ACTIVITIES

Plans For Revolution in the States Said to Be Forgery.

MOSCOW, Dec. 21. — (United Press.) —Emphatic denial that the Russian government had sent instructions to the United States for a movement destined to "raise the Red flag over the White House" was made here by Foreign Minister Tchitcherin.

Commenting on dispatches from the United States reporting that the State Department had made public documents pertaining to Communist propaganda, Tchitcherin said: "The Soviet Government has sent no instructions to the American Workers' Party in the United States. Any documents which are alleged to represent such instructions giving plans for a revolution are forgeries."

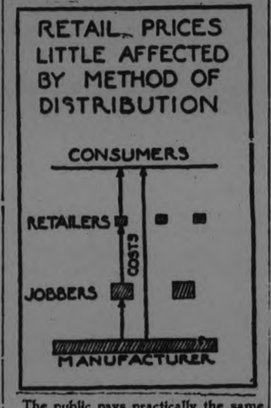
HERE'S A RAT STORY

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Dec. 21.—(United Press). — The man-killing sewer rates of the cities have nothing on the barn rats of the Adirondacks. Fred Sheldon of Elizabethtown set a foxtrap in his henhouse with a 20-pound weight attoched. The next morning he found that a rat had gotten away with both trap and weight. The tracks were plainly rat and not fox. Sheldon asserts that he recently shot a rat in his barn that measured two feet, one inch from tip to tip.

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.



The public pays practically the same for an article whether the manufacturer sells direct to a dealer or through a jobber.

The tendency lately has been for the manufacturer to swing back to the jobber, instead of trying to sell direct to the dealer. The jobber gets from 5 to 30 per cent, depending upon the line of business, yet the manufacturer has found in many cases that it is better for him to sell to the jobber, instead of trying to save that expense? Why?

In the first place, the manufacturer makes a slash in his own expenses. For instance, he ships out a few large packages to the jobber, where formerly he had a countless number. He only needs a few salesmen, and instead of having a large, expensive credit department, perhaps one man can keep in touch with the jobbers.

There is another factor, too, besides expense, which is important.

The jobber gives him a steady demand, the year round, because he can judge the seasons in his locality and put in orders in advance. When a manufacturer sells direct to dealers he is likely to be working nights one month and closed the next.

It costs money to distribute goods. These costs must be met, jobber or no jobber. Consequently, the price of goods is about the same to the public, no matter whether the manufacturer does the distributing himself or hires a jobber to do it.

CABINET MAY SUSPEND TAX

Sales Tax Will Probably Be Discussed by Cabinet Today--Question as to Authority.

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—It is expected that the enforcement of the new sales tax, which becomes effective on January 1, will be discussed by the cabinet to-day.

It is reported in several quarters that some members of the Government are in favor of suspending the tax and of having Parliament revamp the act next session. Whether the cabinet has power to suspend the enforcement of a tax provided for by an act of Parliament has been causing considerable speculation in the capital for some time.

Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs and Excise, whose department is responsible for the collection of the tax, leans to the opinion that only Parliament can defer enforcement of the act.

This view is held by many Government officials. There are others, however, who hold that the cabinet has power to abrogate a tax though it would have no power to impose taxation not approved by parliament

RYAN DENIES THE MURDER OF SLADE

Also Says Two Alleged Members of His Gang Were Never in the City -Is Being Well Guarded

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 21.—Norman "Red" Ryan, Canadian bandit, when questioned last night regarding the alleged murder of Albert Slade, emphatically denied that he ever committed such a crime.

Ryan's sttaement, the first he has made during the last 24 hours, came when detectives showed him a copy of a newspaper which carried a story about the murder in England and in which it was inferred that Ryan might hang for it.

"It's bunk," Ryan said. "I've done plenty ,but I never committed such a crime."

"I knew this man Slade at Liverpool. I met up with him shortly after I was kicked out of the army. He told me that he had to get under cover and offered to let me take on his name and passports to South Africa. I did. Thats' how I happened to have that name hooked up with me."

Another important angle of the Ryan-Brown investigation was cleared up yesterday when Ryan told Police Chief Brunskill that Gordon Simpson and Thomas Bryan, alleged members of his gang, never were in Minneapolis .It was first thought that they were in an automobile near the post office on the night of Ryan's capture.

"Those boys left me when we made the break at Kingston," Ryan said. "That was the last I ever saw of them. I heard once that they were in Detroit."

Ryan broke his 24 hours' silence voluntarily.

Chief Brunskill did not try to obtain further questions from him and went to see him at his own request. Ryan was very much excited over the newspaper article and wanted to clear it up.

"No effort will be made to prosecute Ryan on the Slade murder charge. The Canadian officials are anxious to return the bandit leader to Kingston prison for the balance of his term.

Jailers are hoping that Ryan's extradition will be effected, as they appear uneasy with the Canadian bandit quartered in the city jail and they are taking every precaution to avoid attempted escape. Ryan's cell has not been unlocked since he entered the cell, and he is confined at a point in the city jail where the chief jailor can always see him. Inside guards also watch over him.

LEVIATHAN RAN AGROUND TODAY

NEW YORK, December 21 (Canadian Press). — The Leviathan, the queen ship of the United States merchant marine, grounded today on Robin's Reef, in New York Harbour.

Eight tugs were called, and tugged vigorously, but apparently were unable to budge her, with low water mark about an hour ahead.

High water mark will not be reached until eight o'clock to-night.

The Leviathan grounded in mud, and it is not believed the boat will be damaged.

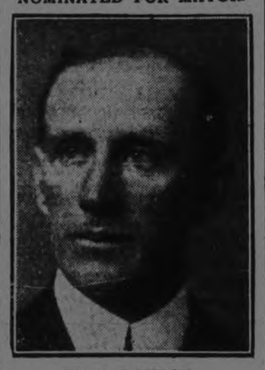
The liner, which was seeking to clip several minutes from her westbound record, was checked by a fog that lessened as the morning wore on.

The Leviathan carries a heavy passenger list, and at noon operators here were discussing plans for landing the passengers by tugs. If this is not done, it is probable that the passengers will be landed before midnight if tugs are able to float the liner at high water.

A MONTREAL FREIGHT TRAIN WAS DERAILED

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—A freight train proceeding westward from this city over the rails of the Canadian National, was derailed about six miles from Montreal at Dominion this morning. No details of the accident are yet available, but it is not thought that any persons were killed or injured. Two or three cars are known to have overturned, and one report had it that the station had been damaged.

NOMINATED FOR MAYOR.



W. H. TAYLOR,
Mayor of Peterborough for the past two years, was nominated this morning for a third term.

CHURCH ON BALLOT FOR EIGHTH TERM

Five Nominated for Mayoralty in Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Thomas L. Church, M.P., former Mayor, Controller Joseph Singer and W. W. Hiltz were nominated for Mayor this morning at nominations here to succeed to the chief magistracy held for the last two years by Alfred Maguire.

Thomas L. Church, M.P., seven times Mayor of Toronto, threw his hat in the ring as a candidate for another term. Mr. Church retired from the Mayor's chair in December, 1921, and accepted the position of counsel to the Hydro Commission, which position he relinquished yesterday in order to run again for Mayor. Controllers W. W. Hiltz and Joseph Singer will probably be Mr. Church's opponents in the elections on January 1. They were both nominated this morning. Controller Singer said he had intended dropping out of civic politics until he heard that Mr. Church desired the honor again, and then he determined to oppose him.

Colonel John A. Currie, M.L.A., and H. C. Hocken, M.P., also a former Mayor of Toronto, were also nominated. It is generally expected that they will retire before to-morrow night.

MANY UKRAINIANS ARE LEAVING TWIN CITIES

PORT ARTHUR, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Fearing some action by the Dominion Government following the expose of Radical tendencies among a section of Ukranian residents at the head of the lakes during a recent court case, a number of "Reds" who took prominent parts in the alleged usurpation of property of the Prosvita Society are said to be leaving the Twin Cities for parts unknown. The statement comes from a prominent Ukranian who added that the expose, complete as it was, was farthest from the minds of the Reds when they went into court as defendants in the case.

KING WINTER HAS WARM RECEPTION

Officially Due Today, There is Little Respect Shown Throughout Canada.

TORONTO, December 21. Canadian Press. — Although King Winter officially begins his three months reign in Canada to-day, according to the calendar of the seasons, he took up his sceptre is only a very limited part of the country, according to the officials at the Dominion Weather Bureau.

In the prairies alone did he make his presence felt, and even there not very emphatically. According to thermometer readings, at 8 o'clock this morning, Prince Albert, with 8 above zero, accorded the heartiest welcome to the new monarch. Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg were more moderate with 18 above.

Prince Rupert and Victoria showed the least regard for the royal visitor with 46 and 40 respectively, while Kamloops was more or less neutral with 32. From Sault Ste. Marie to Quebec City, the mercury refused to get excited over the advent of the new sovereign and hovered between 36 and 42, with the latter recorded at Toronto. Quebec City just nodded its recognition with 28, while Halifax with 32 and St. John, N. B., with 38, were only lukewarm in their reception.

IRENE ADAMS TELLS OF BANDIT'S DEATH

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn, Dec. 21.—Miss Irene Adams, tall, slender, and golden haired, is a sadly disillusioned young woman.

The "gentlemanly automobile salesman" and "perfect dancer" with whom she visited Minneapolis dance cafes and theatres and who "spent money like water" was shot dead on her doorstep by Detective William Meehan and proved to be Andrew Sullivan, alias Arthur Brown, notorious Canadian Bank Robber and escaped convict.

Brown, as the dead bandit is known to the police here, and Albert "Red" Ryan had become acquainted with the young woman, posing as the "Miller Brothers". With another girl, they became familiar figures in Minneapolis night life.

Sent Postcards

"I met Ryan and Brown, as I knew them now, early in November,' Miss Adams said in an interview. 'They were well dressed and pleasant and certainly spent money like water. They told me they were auto mobile accessory salesmen. Shortly after I met them they went on a trip to New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other eastern cities. They sent me postcards everywhere they went.

"Brown calld me up a week ago Tuesday and we went to a theatre. He said they were back with a new line of accessories they had closed for in New York. I did not see Ryan and Brown told me he had quit calling on girls. 'He wants me to do the same thing,' he said.

"We made an appointment for last Friday night at 8.30 p.m. at Seventh street and second avenue. 'He was right on the dot. He seemed cool and collected, but he held a handkerchief to his nose. He said his nose had been bleeding. I have learned since that he escaped through a hail of bullets in a chase with the police not ten minutes before in which he shot Constable Schaaf on the running board of the police car.

Story of Shooting

"We went to the Lorjng Theatre. He chatted gaily all the way and seemed to enjoy the performance. Then we went to a restaurant for supper and when he left me we had made a date for the next night.

"I was astounded to hear the detectives break in on me at my home and tell me he was a notorious bank robber. When they showed m pictures of both Ryan and Brown, I admitted they were the men. I agreed to let them wait for him.

"While we were talking Brown called on the telephone. He asked to come over, I told him he could.

"I will never forget that wait for him to rap at the door. When we heard him coming the detectives told me to get out, but I saw him open the door. As he saw detectives in the room he started to pull his revolver. Detective Meehan shot over Detective Forbes' shoulder and Brown fell across the doorway. It was horrible but the detectives were as cold as ice. Detective Forbes said 'nice work Bill,' and that was all they said.

"Believe me, I moved out of that room in a hurry. I could never sleep there another night. This was a lesson for me. I will select my friends more carefully in the future."

KINGSTON CADETS HAD GOOD OVERSEAS RECORD

OTTAWA, December 21. Canadian Press. — Britania grasping the hand of a Canadian military cadet over the new memorial arch at Kingston, is the striking design of the cards of Christmas greeting coming from the Military College to the members of the Department of National Defence. Above the figures is a scroll bearing the legend "We will keep faith."

The card was designed in competition by Gentleman Cadet Hughes, and the memorial arch at the college now nearing completion, is erected by contributions from ex-cadets of the Kingston college, in memory of those cadets who have lost their lives on active service. During the late war 982 former cadets served out of a possible total of 1136. Of these 147 lost their lives.

MARSHALL WAS ELECTED HEAD KIWANIS CLUB

Annual Election Today Resulted in an Epidemic of Cigars--Activities During the Year Reviewed.

TODAY'S LUNCHEON

To-day was election day for the Peterborough Kiwanis Club and at the noon day luncheon the following officers were elected for the year 1924: President, Jack' Marshall; Vice-President, Charles Cook; District Trustee ,Jack Allen (re-elected); Treasurer, Jack Jeffries, and the following Executive, Carl Brown, J. John, F. Dawson, R. Mackey, H. Niven, M. Yelland and Ed. Wood. The election was by ballot and G. N. Gordon, J. MacIntosh and Isaac McNabb acted as scrutineers.

J. A. McKone, retiring president, occupied the chair and opened the meeting with a summary of some of the chief activities of the club during the present year. In January last the club put on a concert in aid of the Salvation Army, following the loss of the Army Temple by fire, and the sum of $190 was turned over to the army ,together with private subscriptions from club members amounting to $1,100. Through the committee on public affairs an open air skating rink was established in the west end of the city and later a large gathering of youngsters were entertained by the club in the school room of St. Andrew's church. Towards the spring the club made a fraternal visit to Lindsay and Belleville and on May 24th a large number of the members went to Jackson Park and participated in the erection of a kitchen in conjunction with the Park camp for kiddies. During the summer the camp youngsters were frequently taken out in cars by the members of the club and in August an inter-city meet was arranged by Kiwanian Jack Allen and held in Cobourg. Then followed the Kiwanis Musical Revue in the fall. Altogether the sum of between three and four thousand dollars has been raised through the medium of the club and expended for the good of the city.

In expressing his appreciation of the honor of re-election to the position of district trustee, Jack Allen stressed the need for more active efforts to fill up the club classification with good live members. During the year, twenty-one members have been lost to the club through removals and other causes and some of the classifications remain unfilled. Kiwanian Allen reviewed the aims and objects of the club .President-elect Marshall endorsed this suggestion and assured the club that the incoming executive would take up this phase of the work and push it to a successful conclusion.

Charles Cummer was extended a hearty vote of thanks for his valuable work as treasurer of the club since its inception.

Alex. Dick reported on plans for a kiddies 'entertainment to be held in Knox church Sunday school room next Friday similar to the one held at St. Andrew's early in the year, but owing to many counter attractions on that date it was decided to leave it over until after the New Year. A pleasing feature of to-day's meeting was a presentation and address of appreciation to Kiwanian Martin Chenhall, who so successfully produced the Kiwanis Musical Revue. Kiwanian Joe Wearing who made the address said he was in Toronto a short time ago and ran across a Toronto lady who happened to be m Peterborough when the show was produced here. She took in the show and also the show produced in Toronto by the Toronto Kiwanians and emphatically pronounced the Peterborough show to be superior to the Toronto production and in fact superior to any musical production she had ever seen. Other critics had made similar comments regarding the Peterborough show, the success of which was due to Martin Chenhall's untiring and skillful efforts as a producer. His work was done without remuneration of any kind and for the benefit of Kiwanis and the kiddies of Peterborough. Mr. Chenhall made a suitable reply in which he expressed his appreciation of the able assistance provided by all those who took part in the show.

To-day's election resulted in an epidemic of cigars which were purchased by the successful candidates.

If such documents exist, the statement declared, they are forgeries, the authenticity of which Russia would like to submit to arbitration.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

No doubt you are more or less familiar with some people who have what may be called lasting diseases. Oft-times these people, while incurable, either in their own minds or in reality, are well enough to be up and around.

Consumption is perhaps the best known of this group of long-lived diseases. The question is often asked: "Is it catching?" While sunlight and open air will offset, or render comparatively harmless, any bacilli of consumption which may be deposited out of doors, still the germs are spread and will invade the larnyx and lungs if opportunity permits.

The sputum, if not very carefully and hygienically burned, will surely scatter its bacilli, which may be inhaled.

Living with consumptives in the same house is not particularly dangerous if the strictest regulations concerning the hygienic habits are carried out.

Great care must be exercised at or near the end of life of a tubercular person. It is by this class that precautions are not so closely observed by patient or those in attendance, and the danger is great.

Persons who are suffering from tubercular diseases must avoid using the same utensils, garments, bed clothing or other things in the household in order that disease may not be spread to other members.

Don't cough when it can possibly be avoided. A drink of water or weak tea may aid you in controlling the habit or desire. To play safety first, always hold a cloth in front of you r mouth while coughing.

The air conditions in a home where consumptives may live with others must be very carefully changed and kept fit the right temperature—65,68 degrees. Sleeping with any tubercular person in the same room is dangerous. The living room of any such person should from time to time, say once in two weeks or every week, be thoroughly disinfected with formalin. This will insure a healthy air condition and prevent flies or other insects carrying any bacilli which may infect food or slight wounds.

MAY DRIVE THE GOVERNMENT TO SEEK MAJORITY

Second Defeat May Cause Necessity For Early Election-- Redistribution and Supplies First.

CABINET MET

OTTAWA, Dec. 21.— (Canadian Press.)—The Cabinet went into session this afternoon and although a meeting was called before the by-election result in Kent was known, and for the despatch of regular business, this second governmetn defeat in the Maritime province received considerable attention. Comment to-day turns largely on the political situation to which the successive Conservative victories give rise.

There is a recurrence of the rumor that following the passing of redistribution and the voting of supplies the government may decide to appeal to the polls in an effort to secure a working majority in the House. As matters now stand, with no vacancies in the House, the Government is in a technical minority of four.

The Liberal leaders have so far given no indication of the Government plans, but it is regarded as improbable that Parliament will be dissolved before the passing of redistribution. By reason of the present situation in the House, an impetus will necessarily be given to efforts at closer understanding between the Liberals and Progressives.

CONSERVATIVE HAD MAJORITY OF 185

Parties in the House of Commons Now Stand 115 For Government and 119 for Opposition

RICHIBUCTO, N.B., December 21 (Canadian Press). — Alexandre Doucette, Conservative, was elected in Kent constituency by the election yesterday by a majority of 185 votes over his Liberal opponent, Alfred Bourgeois, it was shown by final returns here this morning.

The total votes were: Doucette 3653, Bourgeois 3,468.

The standing of the Parties in the House of Commons is now:
Government 115, Opposition 119.

EVERBODY OWNS A CAR IN THE UNITED STATES

CHICAGO, Dec. 21. —(Canadian Press.)— The average man in the United States no longer has a "Sunday suit of clothes," but he owns an automobile or is buying one on the installment plan, according to the nation-wide survey made by the National Association of Retail Clothiers.

People dont' seem to care much about clothing any more is the statement in the survey made public today. And one State is about as bad as another in that respect, representatives of the Association declared.

FRIENDLY BIBLE CLASS MEETING

Mrs. L. Deyman Has Served the Society for Many Years.

The Womens' Friendly Bible Class of St. John's church met at the home of the retiring president, Mrs. L. Deyman, 177 Rubidge street, last evening, and presented her with a handsome umbrella and an address, in recognition of her service as president of the society during the last ten years. The presentation was made by Mrs. B. Pitchford, accompanied by an address read by Mrs. J. Vollans, as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Deyman: We desire to take this opportunity of expressing to you our appreciation of the services you have rendered during the period that you have been our president. We fully realize that you have devoted a great deal of time, even at personal sacrifice, and we feel sure that although you are relinquishing that position, we shall still have your presence and advice. REPAIRS MADE TO THE DUMMER ROAD

News of Warsaw and Dummer Township — Wells Filling Up.

WARSAW, Dec. 20.—A piece of the Drummond road east from the boundary has received a thick coat of gravel, a wider culvert has been put in at the foot of the hill. The old one, which was wide enough for the old road was in good condition.

Last Friday Mr. J. Clifford refused $100.00 for a pretty little chestnut horse. On Saturday morning it got loose in the stable and was kicked by the other horses so badly that nothing could be done for it.

The farmers are grateful for the recent heavy rains. There will be no more drawing water for stock, nor driving stock long distances for water for some time.

SEEK POPULARIZE BRITISH PICTURES.

Great British Film Week Was More Successful Than "Rat Week" — Royal Appeared.

LONDON, Dec. 21 (Associated Press).—The British used to smile at the American custom of picking seven days out of the calander to stir up interest in sundry things, Fire Prevention Week, Better Babies Week, Whatnot Week. But now the British are acquiring the habit themselves. Or perhaps it is being thrust upon them by press-agents and go-getters and the lively worshippers of the verb "to sell."

The custom slipped into England by the back door, or maybe underneath. The first "week" was set aside for the purpose of getting people to annihilate a few millions of which infest these isles. Hardly anyone got excited over "Rat Week," but now that the cinema manufacturers have instituted "Great British Film Week," and adorned it with appearances of the Prince of Wales and Princess Mary (themselves, not a movie), the public is responding.

It seems that only 15 percent of all the films shown in Britain are of British make; the rest come from America. And in the colonies and dominions of the British Empire, the Yankee movies are even more popular, only two or three percent of the reels being British products. The British National Film League opened its "week" by inviting the Prince of Wales to luncheon, and the prince in a speech recounted what he called the "good points" of the movies.

Princess Mary did not make a speech to further British Film Week, but she consented to be present at a first-night performance of a spectacular film based on the British efforts in battle during the World War. The house was packed.

The producers here apparently do not visualize any possibility of driving the Yankee reels off British screens. What they hope for, they said, is to bring up the home industry so that 50 percent of the films shown on English screens will be British.

Several times in the past, both in London and the provinces, certain theatres have set out to show nothing but home-made films. But sooner or later box office woes have driven them back to accepting appearances of the well-known American actors and actresses on their screens.

Youth Battles Dual Personality in Strange Fight For Freedom

As a model youth, young Burgett was:

An officer of the Christian Endeavor Society of that church.

A member of the young men's class of that church.

A model son and grandson.

Prominent student of Missouri Military Academy.

Editor of students' paper at the academy.

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 21.—In Paul Burgett, here, examining psychologists are confronted with one of the most perplexing instances of dual personality on record.

Charged by police with a Jekyll-Hyde existence, the youth, according to authorities, has confessed a hidden crime career, prompted by spasmodic impulses over which he says he had no control.

From model Sunday school attendant to bold bank robber, police say, was but a modest transformation for young Burgett.

Held in a sanitarium for further investigation under a pending prison sentence, Burgett tells of the fight he waged against his evil self to depart from the primrose path and lead a life in keeping(with what people who respected him thought was his.

Good folks of the community who knew him only as a pious youth, at first discredited the tales of daylight banditry alleged by police.

And one scientist, who has made several tests, pronounes Burgett "the victim of two minds with an inability to control either of them."

Given time, though, this investigator believes that Burgett's better self, which forced him to regular church service, can drive out the criminal ego which rose to supremacy in the battle for domination of his nature.

"I wanted to go straight," the boy says. "But evil companions and the impulse for crime were too strong."

Meanwhile he is is being held in jail. And unless physicians believe that a thorough reformation is possible he must go to prison for five years.

As a bandit, police charge Burgett Entered Quindaro State Bank, Kansas City, Kas., drove employees into vault and took $4410.

In a daylight holdup relieved First State Bank, Quay, Okla., of $3000.

Held town marshal of Quay, and deputies at bay.

Robbed Grand Theater, Moberly, Mo., and Newman Theater, Kansas City, of over $4000 in daring holdups.

WHERE SANTA'S ASSISTANTS TURN BROKEN DOLLS INTO REAL GIFTS

MISS EICHBAUM AN D SOME OF HER DOLLS

DAYTON, O., Dec. 21.—A doll recruiting station.

Such is the unique enterprise of Miss Mildred Eichbaum, Dayton social worker.

Although she's a recruiter, she doesn't work for Uncle Sam. Her obss is Santa Claus.

It seems that Miss Eichbaum some time ago got the idea that she wanted to help Santa Claus fill his bag in preparation for his annual descent into the homes of America's childhood.

"If training camps can make honest-to-goodness men out of weaklings, there is no reason why a hospital and a little recreation can't make honest-to-goodness boys out of wrecks," she reasoned.

So she advertised and asked the city's residents to look over the toy supply in their homes and try and fix a doll or two that could be spared. The answer came in scores of dolls—dolls with no eyes, dolls with no limbs, dolls that were even headless—in fact all manner of cripples answered the "call to colors."

And Miss Eichbaum, the recruiting officer, handles her job in real business-like fashion. First she sends the mangled dolls through the sterilization and cleansing process. Each is treated to a tub and a final shower and then they are laid out on observation tables where their ailments are analzed.

Next they are made ready for the surgeon. And, lo, and behold! from two or three shattered dolls there is created one whole one.

"When we get through some of them have no complexion, some won't sit up, while some have mismated arms and legs. Still there is a little mother that will give each of them all the baby love in the world —some little mother who will never notice the defects," declared Miss Eichbaum.

That is her theory and that is her method of gladdening the hearts of hundreds of Dayton children this Christmas.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, December 21 (United Press). — With Congress temporarily eliminated, stocks responded well in the early dealings to the favourable character of the business news. Rails were stimulated by the remarkable showing of car loadings in the week ending 8th December, which were in excess of any previous record for the corresponding period, demonstrating that general trade is holding up in extraordinary fashion.

Despite $24,000,000 loss of gold, the reserve ratio of the National banking system scored a gain over the previous week, and was well ahead of the figure for this time last year.

November automobile production maintained the year supremacy over 1922. Practically the only disturbance in the whole picture was Jones Bros. Tea, which dropped nearly 3 points to 20 3-8, reflecting the suspension of dividend payments.

American Can to-day declared an extra dividend of 1 per cent. and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 on the common stock.

F. H. Wheeler, chairman of the board, stated that the company has had a good year.

The directors, therefore, feel warranted in declaring an extra dividend of 1 per cent. Business is in a healthy condition, with prospects for good volume in 1924.

Strength characterised the first hour of the stock market, operations for the rise proceeding in several groups. The Tobaccos were active under the leadership of Schulte and Tobacco Products, the oils were the strongest class, moving ahead on the 15 cent advance in Corning Crude. Invincible was the leader of the low priced group, reaching a new high on the movement at 15 1-2. Following the advance in Texas Crudes, a rise is looked for in Crude in Arkansas and Louisiana, which would help Invincible.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Editor of the Examiner: Dear Sir: When I read Mr. J. J. Solomon's letter reply to the "Veteran" I cannot help having my little say regarding those remarks which refer to more than one Veteran as comrades.

In the first place he speaks of the sportsmanship of the Veteran because he did not publish his name In reply to that I would say that through the years 1914 to 1919 this veteran (whoever he may be) did not ask the local paper to publish his name as one who was a "sportsman" but donned the khaki and helped bring the championship to the whole British Empire.

I, myself, believe in all lines of sport (yes, including baseball) but I do think that all lines should share in the use of Riverside park, and not have to take what is left over, after the baseball association are satisfied. Would it not be a much better advertisentent too if our famous baseball team was composed of all Peterboro boys instead of so much importation? However, Mr. Editor, I will not dwell on the business of the Baseball Association. The point I am after is this, that Mr. Solomon should take up the points which were referred to in the letter from the "Veteran," and leave that cowardly sniping stuff he refers to, alone.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

W. G. NICHOLLS, (a Vet.)

CALL ON FARMERS MODERNIZE HOMES

Kerosene Lamps and Everlasting Wood Carrying Make Farm Homes Unattractive.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 20 (United Press).—"Light the lamp, ma, I just filled it with kerosene!"

"Johnny, bring in some water and wood; the stove is nearly cold, and I haven't anything to wash the dishes in."

These are words still in use on most of the farms of today.

The farms of the country are not modernized to the extent of making it attractive to the mother or to the boy, the duties of both being frequently performed by the women of the house, according to a survey of Nebraska farm homes completed by the Nebraska College of Agriculture here, under direction of Prof. J. O. Rankin.

Answers to a questionnaire were received from 117,758 Nebraska farms, indicating that only 14,500 of this number, or slightly more than 12 per cent., are modern in water, heat or lighting facilities, and only two per cent, or one out of 50, are modern in all three.

Welfare or Wealth?

This is the way the learned professor sums up the report:

"Unfortunately, the attention of most farmers' organizations centered more upon wealth than upon the welfare which is their real purpose, especially during recent years, when the loss of life in the world war and widespread economic destruction and disruption have affected the economic situation in American farm homes so much more unfavorably than in the homes of those of most other classes."

The questionnaire went into the amusements of the farmer of today and arrived at results from the answers that might prove valuable to an antiquarian of the next century. For instance, only about one-sixth of the farm household reported they played indoor games, although nearly half attend athletic games more or less as spectators. The games most frequently played are baseball, tennis, horseshoes, boxing, croquet, and children's games.

In order of popularity, the indoor games indulged in were various card games, checkers, dominoes, and such games as crokinole and caroms.

Pianos Most Popular

More than two-fifths of the farm-owners had pianos, the most popular musical instrument, while about one-fourth of the tenants owned them. The organ and the phonograph divided honors for second place, each being owned in one home out of every six.

Six households in every seven sent some of their members to attend fairs of some sort; four out of every five went to picnics; three out of five to "parties"; one-half of the households had the "movie habit"; but only one in four households were represented at dances.

Three farms out of every four had telephones and automobiles.

Prof. Rankin warned in his summary that the attention and money of the farmer must return to the job of making the farm-home livable. "He seems to think that it's up to the women to get it and that the only way they'll get it is by shouting loudly," he said.

"The coming of votes to women may reasonably be expected to center much more governmental activity about the problems of the farm homes, as soon as our new electorate is able to crystallize its demands and organize its strength. If it does not recognize the home as the great and supremely important thing before which every other consideration is secondary, then no other agency can well be expected to do its work."

Of 4925 farmers' buying and selling organizations in 1921, more than 23 per cent did a business ranging from $100,000 to $200,000 and more than 15 per cent did an annual business between $70,000 and $100,000.

ABSOLUTELY CLEAR DALY'S SECRETARY

TORONTO, December 21. Canadian Press. — "Owing to the sinister rumors concerning the death of this young man, I consider it in the best interests of all concerned that an inquest be held," said Chief Coroner Graham at the inquiry into the death of Thomas Summers O'Connor, who was secretary to H. J. Daly, yesterday afternoon.

The jury's decision was: "Thomas O'Connor came to his death in St. Michael's hospital from a fracture of the skull caused by a fall upon going into his home on Saturday morning."

GERMAN EXPERTS CIVILIZE WILDS.

Afghanistan Will Be "Europeanized" in the Building of Complete Modern City.

(By JOHN GRAUDENZ)

MOSCOW, Dec. 20 (United Press). —Afghanistan is going to be "Europeanized" and the Germans have engaged to do the trick.

A group of 35 German experts passed through Moscow the day this was written, en route to Afghanistan.

They were forced to choose this route because of the refusal of England to grant them visas through India. Thus the trip will take about two months, including 40 days' ride on horseback.

All together, over 100 experts have been engaged by the Afghanistan government, through the medium of the Afghanistan representation in Berlin. Some of them have already arrived at their destination. They comprise all professions, from road-makers to physicians. Among them are engineers.

Their first task will be to build a complete modern city adjoining the capital, Kabul, in the same fashion as the English built the cities in Egypt and India. The old city of Babul will be used as shelter for the inhabitants of the surrounding peasants, who always come flocking into the cities during the winter period.

The city will contain all the achievements of modern civilization of today, including radio stations, telephone, electricity, etc.

After the city is completed, or simultaneously perhaps, roads will be made, railways built, radio stations erected, telegraph lines be drawn, electrification systems installed, factories erected—in short, the whole country will be developed in every phase.

The leader of the German group declared that the tendency to leave Germany for lands where "milk and honey" still flows, is growing steadily.

BOXING JUDGES WRONG SYSTEM

Dissatisfaction Over the Dundee Fight May Restore Decisions By Referee.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Restoration of the old system of having boxing decisions given by the referee may come in New York as a result of the weird decision which gave Johnny Dundee the junior lightweight title from Jack Bernstein the other night.

The commission can't do anything about it, and it can't say anything about its judges or referees, but feels now that the present system is wrong.

The bad decision, in the opinion of most of the fight fans, was the result of an error in judgment on the part of the two judges rather than a scheme to swing the decision for a mercenary purpose.

The betting did look funny, but it can be explained, casually at least. Dundee has always fought his best fights when he weighed around 128 pounds, and when it was learned that he had made that weight for Bernstein the bettors thought more of his chances.

Dundee has a tremendous personal following, most of it in the Italian laboring classes. They did not have a chance to wager until shortly before the fight. When piles of money was offered on Dundee, the "wise boys" tried to hedge. The result was a surprising change in the odds and Dundee became the favorite.

The system of having the decision given by the referee and two judges has not been successful in New York because there are not enough competent officials. Until recently the vote of the officials was not made public and the judges felt they were safe from criticism.

Until the Dundee-Bernstein fight most of the queer decisions were given on minor fights. But when championships are in peril, the commission now is alarmed.

The commission knows that several champions will not want to hazard their titles by boxing in New York.

Seeking some remedy, the commission has asked the public to suggest improvements in the rules and it is likely that there will be an overwhelming demand for the decision given by the referee.

This old system worked well because in any case of doubt the commission could fix the responsibility.

Gift to Rev. R. B. Grobb From All Saints' Boys.

A very interesting meeting of All Saints' Athletic Association was held last night in their club room. The occasion was a presentation to the Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., who is leaving the city next month.

After a short business session a short address was made by Mr. W. H. Buller, who congratulated the members on their success in all their endeavors.

An address was then read by Mr. H. E. Ashmore, the president, and Mr. G. Gimblett, Jr., presented Mr. Grobb with an Eversharp pen and pencil set.

Mr. Grobb replied expressing his surprise and appreciation in a few well chosen words. Several members of the congregation offered the Rector their congratulations and best wishes.

The meeting was enlivened by recitations by Mrs. H. E. Connolly and Mr. J. John, and community singing led by Mr. R. J. Devey.

The meeting closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King and the benediction was pronounced by the Rector.

BIGGEST MONEY GAME IS BOXING

Public Paid More Than Two Millions Around New York Alone Last Summer — The High Lights.

(By Henry L. Farrell)

NEW YORK, December 21.—With two notable exceptions, boxing did little more in 1923 than turn into the biggest money game of all sports and show up the list of champions as the worst that ever held titles.

The tremendous strides made by boxing into the realms of high finance probably were the outstanding features of the year.

With figures to show that more than $2,000,000 was paid by the public to see a series of championship bouts during the summer in the neighbourhood of New York City alone, it can readily be seen that if figures were available from all parts of the country, boxing is by far the most popular of all American sports.

As receipts increased to immense proportions, purses offered to boxers rose in proportion, until it was possible for Tex Rickard to give Jack Dempsey $500,000 for defending his title against Luis Angel Firpo, the Argentine giant.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight was by far the greatest fight of history. It set new financial records and it provided more action per second than any other prize fight in history.

The great Dempsey, for the first time since his early days, was knocked off his feet three times in the first round. Once he was knocked clear out of the ring. Firpo was downed seven times in the first round and three times in the second.

The year 1923 always will be remembered for this fight.

In two big fights, Dempsey did much to prove that he is the greatest of all the heavyweight champions.

On 4th July, in Shelby, Montana, he won a fifteen-round decision from Tommy Gibbons and, in winning on points, he outboxed a fighter who is generally regarded as the most finished boxer and the cleverest fighter of years in the heavyweight class.

In beating Firpo, Dempsey outslugged one of the hardest hitters and wildest sluggers that has ever appeared in the ring.

There are no other ways in which Dempsey could have proved his all-round fitness as a champion, because in the Firpo fight he showed for the first time, for the reason that he had never been called upon before, that he is able to "take it," as few other fighters have been able to take it.

The Dempsey-Gibbons fight at Shelby will also help to make 1923 noteworthy in that it provided the biggest bust as a financial venture that has been recorded in boxing.

* * * * *

As Dempsey showed himself to be worthy of his title, so did Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion.

Like Dempsey, Leonard far outclassed all the rivals in his class. Lew Tendler was the only lightweight figured to have a chance with him, and Leonard gave him such a terrible beating in fifteen rounds that Tendler admitted he would never have a chance to beat Leonard.

After seeing Leonard at the heights of his mastery against Tendler, some old-time critics were ready to admit that Joe Gans, considered the greatest of all times, had nothing on Leonard.

* * * * *

While Dempsey and Leonard proved themselves as real champions, the other titleholders showed themselves as anything but real champions.

Not a champion of the other classes would, or will now defend his title against a first-class contender.

Mike McTigue won the world's light heavyweight championship on a decision from Battling Siki in Dublin on St. Patrick's Day. McTigue then turned out to be the worst champion that has ever held the title.

Johnny Wilson, after being forced into an extended retirement, came out of his shell and lost his middleweight title to Harry Greb. Greb is a better champion than Wilson, and that lets him out.

Mickey Walker kept his welterweight championship stored away in the safety deposit vault and named such impossible conditions for defending it that promoters gave him up.

Eugene Criqui, the Frenchman, knocked out Johnny Kilbane and won the featherweight championship and in his next fight lost a fifteen-round decision and the title to Johnny Dundee. Dundee used to be a great fighter, but he made three bad fights after winning the title.

Joe Lynch, the bantamweight champion, runs McTigue a close second as being the worst of all champions of all time. Lynch, without doubt, is afraid to fight, and he has done so much "monkey business" that he is in bad all over the country.

Jimmy Wilde, the little Welshman, was another world's champion to drop out during the campaign of 1923. He was knocked out by Pancho Villa, who became flyweight champion. Villa is no better than the other danger-dodging champions. He refuses to fight any good flyweights, and prefers to compete with second and third class bantams.

* * * * *

One of the most important events of the year was the change in the personnel of the New York Boxing Commission, which is perhaps the most important supervising body of the sport in this country.

Will Muldoon, who, as chairman of the commission, had almost ruined the sport, was trimmed of his authority, and William McCormick, who succeeded him as the active leader of the commission, immediately began to make changes which have been of immense benefit to the sport all over the country.

His most important ruling was that championships could be won and lost only in the ring, and that all the rulings that the New York Commission could approve would not make a champion.

DEMOCRATS FAVOR SOLDIERS' BONUS

Statement in U. S. Senate Amid Christmas Outburst of Oratory.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The United States Congress got away yesterday on a wave of oratory for a Christmas recess that will end on January 3. Partisan policies held the center of the stage, but taxes, the recognition of the Russian Soviet Government and farmers' aid figured in the debate, which, in the Senate, at least, was the most extended of the session.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, opened political discussion there, by twitting the Republicans upon what he characterized as their apparent inability to act upon "the really courageous" message of President Coolidge.

In the House, Representative Howard, Democrat, Nebraska, urged Republican insurgents to form an alliance with Democratic "progressives" for the purpose of liberalizing house rules and of supporting progressive legislation.

The Day in Washington

The United States Department of Agriculture announced that cotton ginned to December 13, totalled 9,548,805 bales.

A bill to create a $50,000,000 fund to be loaned to farmers of the north west was introduced by Representative Burtness, Republican, North Dakota.

Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, declared the Democrats favored a soldiers' bonus

Secretary Hughes' disclosure of a Soviet movement to overthrow the American Government caused a debate in the Senate during which the authenticity of the Secretary's evidence was questioned.

NEW TYPE SEWER IS NEARLY BUILT

Monolithic Type Concrete Sewer For Outfall at Park Street Is Innovation Here

The construction of the new outfall sewer on Park street which is proceeding rapidly, marks a new departure in this work in Peterboro. While a small storm drain was constructed a few years ago on Rink street on the same plan, this is the first extensive work of its kind attempted here. The monolithic concrete sewer construction has been widely used in other cities for many years, and is generally conceded to be the most satisfactory and the cheapest.

Roy H. Parsons, City Engineer, today explained the construction in detail, and pointed out the superiority of this type over the pipe system. Yesterday, he said, the construction was completed in one day of forty feet of concrete sewer. In all of this stretch there was not a single joint, whereas in using the pipe sewer there would have been ten joints. The joints are conceded to be the weak points in sewer construction.

Joined pipe is especially troublesome in ground of the nature encountered on Park street south, where the level of the sewer is some feet below the level of the gound water, and seepage results. Sinking or settling of the soil also cause the joints to droop or move with resulting dissatisfaction and trouble.

The new sewer will be virtually a solid unit from end to end by reason of the longitudinal reinforcing bars which run the length of each section constructed and overlap into the next. The concrete is poured in molds which form it in horse-shoe shape, and in addition to the longitudinal reinforcement there are cross bars which are imbedded in the curved portion. This forms a continuous coarse network of reinforcement.

Outfall Sewer.

The sewer now under construction will carry all the city's sewage to the outfall at the river, and from here it will ultimately be carried across to the disposal plant. The inside measurement of the sewer is 42 inches across.

Mr. Parsons believes this type will be much more satisfactory than the joined pipe, since it is not so liable to damage. He also thinks that it will be cheaper.

Jack Thirnbeck is in charge of the construction work.

JAPAN TO HAVE TRIAL BY JURY.

Men Will Be Trained in Jury Duties and Will Study System in Western Countries.

TOKIO, Dec. 21.—(Associated Press)—In addition to manhood suffrage, the Yamamoto cabinet purposes to bring into force next year a jury system and a system of industrial insurance. A number of men will be trained as jurors; jury trial courts will be established in different parts of the country, and men versed in law will be sent to America and Europe to study the jury systems there.

Under the industrial insurance scheme workmen and women earning not more than 1,200 yen ($600) a year will be benefited, payment of a small sum out of their wages entitling them to compensation in case of illness, casualties or unemployment, and providing for payment to their relatives in case they die. In the case of women the insurance plan will provide for illness incident to childbirth.

COMMUNITY FUND GAINING HEADWAY

Six Organizations Are Willing to Enter the Scheme.

The last meeting of the Community Chest Fund held in the Chamber of Commerce showed that six organizations out of eleven were prepared to participate in the fund as is expected by the Young Men's Section of the Chamber of Commerce, who are trying to organize this Chest Fund that it will be carried throught in time. All the organizations who have not stated one way or the other will be approached by the young men and asked to give a decision. Another meeting will be held in the near future to decide for ther action. At the last meeting will be held in the near future to decide further action. At the last meeting particular emphasis was given to co-operation and not control. The young men's policy is co-operation and not control. Their motto is "One appeal, once a year, give once, but enough for all."

Mr. R. G. Kiagan who has just returned home from Battle Creek, Michigan a city with a population of about thirty five thousand and where the Community Chest Fund is being used gives a few statements on the fund there.

In 1921 when this fund was started there were nine organizations participating and in 1924 there were fifteen organizations, this speaks well for the fund.

The organization is being conducted there the same way as it will be conducted in Peterboro, if it is successful in getting started. There will be an executive committee, Community Fund Council, Budget Committee, Publicity Campaign, Special Committee Industrial Committee School Committee and District Committee, The different organizations will hand in their bill for what they require. The committees will look over this bill and if it is satisfactory it will be passed. When all the bills are in they will be totaled up and the amount needed by the different organizations will be forwarded them and there will be no more tag days for the rest of that year. Any money left over goes toward baskets to the poor at Christmas.

GETTING ALONG WITH WIFE

"There's no satisfyin' wimmen" bitterly complained Hank Smith to a fellow commuter. Here's Marjie—wife—naggin' me for months to let her have a maid. I gets her one and thinks everything'll be hunky for a bit. But is it?"

Smith snorted. "Now she wants new china, glass and furniture. Says she's ashamed before Olga, the maid, of all our old stuff. Its up to me to keep peace so I'm going to—"

"Fire the maid?"

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Annual Christmas Tree in the Public School —The Program.

Millbrook, December 21. — Quite a number of the mothers and friends gathered in the primary room of the public school on Thursday afternoon for the annual Christmas tree, and the programme given by the children. Miss C. McConnachie, the popular and efficient teacher, had spared no pains to make her class room attractive for the occasion. Appropriate mottoes and verses, with green holly wreaths and bright red berries, Santa Claus, Christmas bells, etc., adorned the blackboards on three sides of the room. Bells also were hung from the ceiling, and other convenient points, and rosy-cheeked apples filled ledges, making a note of bright color round the room. The Christmas tree, laden with gifts, together with the long line of large Christmas stockings which hung nearby, was to the children at least, the centre of attraction.

Ballots had been passed a few days in advance and the children had each drawn a name for whom they were to place a gift on the tree, so no scholar could be overlooked. Many had remembered their teacher also, and when the tree was unloaded the latter's desk was piled with various shaped boxes and parcels.

The programme, which was most enjoyable, consisted of the following numbers:

Opening chorus, "Christmas Bells" by the scholars.
Recitation, "When Santa Knocks," by Bryer Edmunds.
Recitation, "Jack Frost," by Evelyn Todd.
Song, "Pussy Willow," by the Primary Class.
Recitation, "Santa is Coming," by Bonna Clarke.
Recitation, "Hark! Santa is here," by Muriel Blue.
Song, "Who's Coming o'er the Hill " by the scholars.
Recitation, "When I Grow Up," by Mary Burnham.
Recitation, "Summer," by Willie Betton.
Song, "Long ago at Christmas," by the Senior First Class.
Recitation, "Sing a Song," by Gertie Richards.
Recitation, "A Little Mischief," by Walter Todd.
Doll song, by Bryer Edmunds, Mary Burnham, Marjorie Vance, Blue, Madeleine McDowell, Mary Nattrass and Gertie Richards.
Recitation, "Two Little Hands," by Marjorie Bance.
Song, "Old Santa Lives Far Away" by the scholars.
Recitation, "When Santa is Heard" by Leon Raper.
"A.B.C. Song," by the scholars.
Address, Rev. A. H. McConnachie on the "Meaning of Christmas."
Distribution of gifts from the tree.

Miss McConnachie had personally provided a Christmas stocking for each of her pupils, and much merriment was aroused by the strings of peanuts which were given to most of the grown-ups; these had formed part of the decorations of the tree. The dull rainy afternoon made the advantage of the electric lights apparent. Until the recent remodelling of the building no lights were in the school. Among those present were Rev. A. H. and Mrs. McConnachie, Mrs. O. B. Johnston, Centreville; Mrs. H. J. Grassett; Mrs. A. J. Vance Mrs. C. Thorndyke, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, Mrs. F Smith, Mrs. H. R. Armstrong, Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs B. C. Whyte, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs H. Weeks, Mrs G. Freelove, Mrs B. R. Raper, Mrs. J. Sloan, Mrs. E. Mitchell, Mrs P Stinson, Mrs Gautt, Mrs. E. Todd, Mrs. M. Todd, Mrs. H. Nattrass, Miss M. Needham

BANK OFFICIALS TRIAL BY A JURY

Order Issued by Attorney General Nickle to This Effect.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Promptly upon issuance by Mr. Justice Middleton yesterday of an order of mandamus granting President H. J. Daly and Home Bank defendants right to a single trial, judge trial, Attorney General Nickle, exercising his prerogative under Section 825 of the Criminal Code, instructed that the men must stand trial on conspiracy charges. Hon. Mr. Nickle at the same time instructed D. L. McCarthy, K.C., to launch an appeal, in connection with charges under the Bank Act, against the order of Mr. Justice Middleton, granted yesterday. In so far as the conspiracy charges are concerned, the Ontario Attorney General has authority under the Criminal Code to order jury trial where the offense charged is punishable with imprisonment for a term exceeding five years. It was this authority that he exercised yesterday under issuance of Mr. Justice Middleton's order.

In case of charges under the Bank Act, however, he has no such authority, because they are punishable with imprisonment terms of less than five years. He took the sole course open to the Crown and ordered an appeal.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 18.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:

The published annual bank reports.

The Merchants Bank memories.

Mr. W. C. Good, M.P's letters.

And the general newspaper comment, on our banking system.

All seem to lead us to the one conclusion viz:

That Government inspection, or any other kind of inspection, was of little or no guarantee to the depositors or stockholders, and provided no excuse for Government guarantee. That Government guarantee of deposits in ordinary banks is unsafe, impractical, and impossible.

That the Dominion Government should issue and benefit by all the circulation notes.

That the Dominion Government Post Office Savings Bank Department should receive all deposits offered at 5½ per cent., thereby directly paying to the people an additional 50 million dollars, without costing the public a single cent in taxation or otherwise, giving absolute Government security to the depositors.

That all Canadian banks are altogether too large, as the Merchants Bank investigators reported, and that no one man, or one set of directors, could begin to properly look after them.

That if the banks were all smaller, and did business on their own stockholders' money, and credit balances, where the local Directors were well acquainted with the probable borrowers and customers, there would be no danger of their making such loans as are reported in the Home Bank case.

If looks as though the depositors money was considerably used in risky loans.

A thousand local banks in Canada would be very much better than our 15 general banks with 5,000 branches, and the people would be 50 million dollars ahead, and all local applications for loans would be considered by local Boards of Directors, and every man would get all the credit his local circumstances, his financial standing, and his honesty of character would warrant.

In this way, all worthy borrowers would be accommodated and all Savings Bank Depositors would be absolutely safe, and the local depositors have 50 million more money to spend, instead of that amount being wasted in extravagant buildings, extravagant administration and extravagant loans.

Your truly,
W. O. SEALEY,
6t Hunter St., W.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: I was surprised to hear to-day (Wednesday) that the Rev. James Rollins, lately of St. Andrew's, left the impression on his congregation at the last moment that I was attempting to wreck Prohibition by wrecking the Ministerial Association. This apparently was his whole defence to my attack upon the higher critics, and upon the base treachery of the average minister both to the Saviour and to his own vows.

Mr. Rollins did well not to make that statement until he was leaving. If that is his only defence there will be very few people to believe that the charges I have made can be answered in that way. He did not dare deny what I said. Why? Because it was true, and is true. His only shift therefore under the press of criticism was to find some knothole to escape by.

If the Ministerial Association thinks I am trying to wreck it all they have to do is to assure us that they believe the whole Bible to be he Word of God, and, moreover, that from cover to cover it was written by the inspiration of God. Further that when Jesus referred to the Old Testament He was right, and the Higher Critics wrong; and, further, that they will not belie the vows that they took at ordination to defend the Bible, but will stand up for the Bible as the direct revelation of God to man, as they promised to do.

These higher critics do well to tremble for if they expect the people to desert their faith and Christ, they make a mistake.

My references to Prohibition were made simply to show that a prohibitionist is really also attacking God for not having prohibited the various means of evil (misuse) as he (the prohibitionist) is now seeking to do. We can't blink facts, unless we are hopelessly wrapped up in our own self-righteousness and stupidity we must see that prohibitionists are doing just what the higher critics in the pulpit are also trying to do. The one is attacking the Bible, and the other the works of God in nature. We can't escape the penalties of our misdeeds in that easy fashion.

GREEKS WANT THE EX-PREMIER BACK

ATHENS, Dec. 21—(United Press) —A determined effort to persuade ex-Premier Venizelos to overcome his hesitancy and the fears of his newly acquired bride and return to the helm of affairs in his native land, was made to-day by the present Government.

Premier Gonatas and Colonel Plastiras of the Military Directorate, the strongest two men in Athens at the moment, answered the demand of a committee to plead with Venizelos to return to Greece.

Simultaneously they persuaded 250 deputies—a majority of the Chamber—to cable the veteran statesman urging him to come to Athens.

Thus for the moment, they save their own positions, because they enjoy the prestige as Venizelos' former associates and likewise the support of 10,000 Cretan officers who are for the former Premier.

It is said that Gonatas and Plastiras plan to hand over the reins to Venizelos.

VERA CRUZ, Dec. 21.—(United Press.)—De La Huerta's Press Bureau to-night reported minor successes in the various operations, the taking of five prisoners and twenty horses near the city of Tepic and says that in Guerrero, "all volunteers are organizing for a march on Mexico City."

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"DRIVIN' FOOL," FASTEST PICTURE HERE THIS SEASON, NOW PLAYING AT ROYAL.

Speed is the dominant quality of "The Drivin' Fool" at the Royal Theatre, and properly so. Within the space of an hour, spectators not only are carried clear across the continent in an automobile racing against time, but the beginning and end of a romance are also revealed. It is the fastest film seen in Peterboro this season. From the first flicker, every scene is cut and trimmed as closely as possible without destroying the continuity of the plot. The result is a realistic effect of breathlessness, quite in keeping with the title and the spirit of the story.

Wally Van, who acts like an aspirant for the place of Wallace Reid and looks like Grant Mitchell, plays the title role. Patsy Ruth Miller is the heroine and Alec Francis is her father. The engagement of the lovers is broken by Wally's mania for speeding, but he gets a chance to gain all he has lost when a rail strike ties up transportation and a check must be sent from Los Angeles to New York in seven days. Wally undertakes to deliver the paper in an automobile. All this is shown in about five minutes and the rest of the film is devoted to the cross-country trip.

Of course there is more scenery than acting, more excitement than are in the pictured progress of the speeding car — and this also is as it should be. All sorts of mishaps are encountered and overcome, from snow slides to stolen shoes, and the race is vividly pictured.

"THE SIGN OF THE FOUR" TREMENDOUS SHERLOCK HOLMES SUPERPICTURE.

Royal Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday

This film production is one of the most popular successful motion pictures that was ever exhibited on the other side. Everywhere in England, "The Sign of the Four" played to extended runs and repeat bookings and was met in all cases by a wave of popular enthusiasm and approval.

The picture is a big super-production which takes the spectator from the magic land of India to the streets of London and plunges him into a mystery and adventure story which is colorful, compelling and fascinating. The famous characters of the members of "The Sign of the Four," as so vividly pictured in the book, are made to live by the stellar actors who make up the cast, and "Sherlock Holmes" Watson and the girl in the case are interpreted by no less brilliant performers.

Let the reader take a glimpse into the opening setting of the production:

A pearl grey autumn afternoon in Baker Street, London, and Sherlock Holmes, the greatest detective the world has ever known, was filling the room with sweet music. At least the strains of Chopin's "Berceuse" should have been sweet, but "my dear Watson" had a poor opinion of Holmes as a violinist and, wearied with the eternal scraping, dropped a book noisily upon the floor. Just then Mrs. Hudson announced "His Highness the Prince."

"Mr. Sherlock Holmes," said the prince, "I am anxious to trace a certain young English lady. Are you clever enough to find her for me? I offer one thousand pounds to find for me this lady."

A shake of the head from the detective and the visitor doubled the offer. Again Holmes shook his head and the prince inquired why he refused.

"Why? Because you have lied to me. You, sir, are no Russian. You are a Hindu, and that headgear hides your caste mark."

Hatred glaring from his eyes, the visitor turned to go. Then he paused and made another appeal. "Mr. Holmes, your pardon. I was foolish. My name is Abdullah Khan. Reconsider your decision and I will pay you well."

"I am not interested in money," Holmes replied. Then, more sternly, "But in the detection of crime and criminals."

The action of the picture includes colorful scenes in the magic land of India and amazing adventures and mysterious domiciles, and startling disappearances through secret trapdoors, and the remarkable chase of two motor cars right through the heart of London, right through the main thoroughfares of Piccadilly Circus, along Trafalgar Square, through every maze of traffic, culminating in an even more thrilling chase in motor boats through the port of London.

AT THE REGENT.

"JUNE MADNESS" LATEST VIOLA DANA PLAY

Viola Dana's popularity grows and grows with each new production showing the little Metro comedienne going through the plot with her characteristic verve and charm. Her latest picture is "June Madness," directed by Harry Beaumont, which begins a 3 days' showing at the Regent Theatre yesterday.

In this picture Miss Dana is seen as a modern young miss who goes to the altar in uncertainty and trepidation to marry Mamma's wealthy choice. A combination of circumstances at the church provide her with the inspiration to effect a spectacular getaway just as the clergyman is about to tie the knot.

It is a scene which will go to the heart of any modern young miss—the bridegroom left at the post, and the bride picking up her skirts and running. Of course, he isn't a very fascinating bridegroom,—not half so fascinating as the young fellow, played by Bryant Washburn, who passes along in his roadster at the opportune moment and helps the young miss evade her pursuers. And they do pursue her.

This is only the begiuning of Clytie's adventures. It is a story full of unexpected twists, with Clytie always doing what your expect, which is the unexpected. Her rescuer has his troubles with Clytie, too. She is decidedly not the sort of miss for self-assuring young men. As played by Miss Dana, with the added attraction of modish gowns and spectacular dancing novelties, "June Madness" is the sort of madness which looks very well on the screen. Crosby George wrote and Harry Beaumont adapted "June Madness."

CURTAIN DOWN ON WILD LIFE OF GREENWICH.

Customs and Liberties of An Easier Going Civilization Have Passed From the Village.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (Associated Press).—Greenwich Village— the Greenwich Village which was a remnant of the old New York, which was a link with the Old World, where the customs, manners and liberties of an easier-going civilization provided a haven for refugees from the hustle and bustle of modern America —has gone.

New York has been robbed of its Latin Quarter, its artists' colony has been disbanded by Broadway, Brooklyn, and the Bronx, aided by prohibition and a housing crisis. The onslaught was begun during the war, when the rest of the country poured into the Village, young and old thirsting for lives of art and liberty, and it has today overcome the last barriers. Gone are the Villagers, and with them the spaghetti "meccas," the "chip-in" sketch classes, and the "open-house" studios that only a short time ago made the locality famous.

Time was when painters, playwrights, writers, musicians and artists of no particular profession fore gathered in the headquarters which have now disappeared. The rule was work hard and play hard. There were those who seemed not to work at all. But that was no one's business If the idler was a wit, if he loved the beauty the workers tried to create, he was received with open arms. But the interloper, the seeker after atmosphere, was quickly frozen out and sent packing.

The war sent many of the Villagers to foreign fields; many never came back. Most of those who served in France returned there after the war, having found that Paris offered what the Village had once had. Others achieved the upper rungs of the ladders of their dreams. Still others merely disappeared. All are gone from the old haunts.

In place of the cheap studios and flats hewn out of buildings hoary with age, appartment houses as splendid and as expensive as those of Park Avenue have progressively reared their ten or fifteen stories from 14th Street down to Eighth, and hundreds of picturesque old houses have been renovated into similar apartments to contribute to the real estate agents' paradise.

The pleasant Italian and French table d'hotes where once one dined in old-world fashion for a small sum, now offer food as an acessory to their red wine. The closed blinds hide from passing policemen groups of men and women who seek their amusement with as much efficiency as they put into their chores in the skyscrapers of workaday New York.

The younger generation is in charge in the tea-rooms. The flapper and her mate, the collegiate (who is more often a clerk), dance and drink and bask in the knowledge that they are emancipated.

In striking contrast are the serious minded men and women, young and middle aged, who have come to the Village to dwell and work among the artists. They live for the most part alone, hope against hope for the great success for which their people are waiting, and write glowing letters of progress back home.

The Village has become an outpost of America, the symbol of changing America.

MANY FAITHS ARE HELD IN THE DAWSON FAMILY

KINGSTON, N. C., Dec. 21. — (United Press).—John H. Dawson, 75, treasurer of Lenoir County for many years, and Mrs. Dawson recently celebrated the 52nd anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson are heads of an unusual family. Their sons and daughters include an Episcopalian, a Disciple of Christ, a Catholic, a Hebrew, a Presbyterian and members of other faiths. Dawson himself is a Primitive Baptist.

The best known member of the family is John G. Dawson, who wields the greatest political power in North Carolina as Democratic State chairman. Though he has held public office many years, it has been more than a decade since Dawson has had to make a campaign for re-election. Many Republicans vote for him.

WEDDED AFTER SEPARATION OF HALF CENTURY

Civil War Veteran Wins Romance Cut Short in Long Ago By Frowning Parents.

LOVE NEVER DIED.

DETROIT, December 22. — Some say romance has gone from the world, that this is an age of commercialism. But Mrs. Catharine Eckhart, 67 years old, and William D. Frost, 75, a veteran of the civil war, believe life is romance, and love is the only real thing in the world.

The couple after a separation of 50 years, have been re-united. The romance of their youth which ended back in the 70's, has again become a reality, and they will spend their remaining years together in happy companionship.

The marriage ceremony took place Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. J. A. Wendworth, 218 Woodward avenue north, Birmingham, a sister of the bride. The children and the grandchildren of the two were present. There were pink roses, Christmas holly, and wedding cake for the gala ocacsion, and there is to be a honeymoon to Florida, where they will remain for the winetr.

The bride, dressed simply in a dark silk gown, seemed as proud as a girl of her handsome diamo t and platinum engagement ring, and of her fine, carved wedding ring.

Recall Courtship.

As the two sat in the parlor waiting for the ceremony to begin they talked of that other diamond ring which a girl, dressed in wide flounced skirts and a tight basque of the 70's, had worn and loved, and given back when she was just 17.

Then Mr. Frost took out of his pocket a picture of that girl of long ago. It is a picture he has treasured all these years.

"But she is more beautiful now," he declared gallantly as he looked at her snow white hair, blue eyes and pink cheeks.

The difficulties which resulted in their separation 50 years ago arose because their parents interfered in their romance. Both married, but always they remembered, and afterwards they always kept in touch with one another's life.

A Lasting Love.

When Mrs. Eckhart first met Mr. Frost he was a hero of the Civil War which had ended only a short time before. He came to Brooklyn from his home in Grand Rapids, Mich. It was love at first sight.

"And I guess it never died," Mr. Frost added.

Mrs. Eckhart recently obtained a divorce. She had not seen her husband for several years. She has made her home in Birmingham for five years.

White Christmas In Merrie England

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Snow fell all over the country Friday and many roads in Derbyshire, Cheshire and Yorkshire are impassable.

The Christmas rush from London has already commenced. It is estimated that 250,000 business houses in London will close today, to re-open after Christmas. Shop assistants will have a holiday until Thursday.

MANY DEATHS IN MEXICAN QUAKE

Heavy Toll of Lives on Wednesday Evening After People Retired in Two Neighboring Towns.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)—According to a report received at Colonia, Morelos, the Sonora, Mexico, earthquake has taken a heavy toll of lives in the town of Granados and Huasapas, three miles apart. Persons who had retired by 9.30 o'clock on Wednesday night when the 'quake was said to have occurred, make up the big proportion of fatalities, having been killed as the houses collapsed.

Oputo was said to have suffered but slightly by comparison, the report declaring a few were injured, no deaths and but very little damage was reported.

No reports have yet been received from Bacaduci and Nacoricho, small towns to the east of the volcanic range of mountains believed to be the center of the disturbance and located 15 miles from Granados.

DEBATE ON SPEECH FROM THRONE ENDS

Most Protracted and Hotly Contested in Last Nine Years of Quebec House.

QUEBEC, December 22. — After the longest drawn out and most hotly contested debate on the speech from the throne within the last nine years, there came as a distinct surprise to nearly everybody in the House the sudden motion for the adjournment of the House at four o'clock yesterday afternoon by Provincial Treasurer Nicol and the adoption of the motion for reply to the Speech from the Throne without division.

At the time of the action there were but four members of the opposition in the House while the government benches were nearly half empty.

The feature of the afternoon session was the clash between Hon. Anton Galipoli and A. Duranieau, of Montreal, when the latter claimed that the Minister had made promises during the last election in Brome county.

The only business of the House in the afternoon in addition to the debate was the unanimous choice of Hector Laferte as Deputy Speaker.

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday the temperature was up to 57 degrees, the highest of the present "heated" spell, and mild conditions still prevail over all Canada, even in the farthest civilized north. Recently I heard that Dan Whetung prophesied a mild open winter, and that as a fact he thought we might not have any. This morning I received a letter from him written at his Curve Lake wigwam. He says: "I think we are not going to have much of a winter, as long as the moon keeps away from the cold. As you will notice the moon is away down south. As long as she stays south, we cannot expect to have much winter. Another sign I have is on the little cedars—no seed on them this fall. Dr. Deyell has a sign, too. If muskrat has no hair on his tail, sign of mild winter. A man of Douro asked me last September: 'What kind of winter are we to have?" he said to me. I said, 'We will have a very mild winter. We will get snow, then rain to take it off.' It has been that way no. twice this fall."—W. P.

CHURCHES SEEK BUSY MEN

BERLIN, Dec. 22.—(Associated Press)—In an effort to attract business men to religion several Berlin churches are holding services every morning and evening. The Lord's Supper is administered every Saturday night because of the tendency of the city population to spend Sunday in the country.

ALBERTA'S BEER BILL TO DECIDE PLACE OF SALE

Hotel Dining Rooms and Restaurants Are Excluded in Measure Coming Before the Government.

TO ISSUE PERMITS.

EDMONTON, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Hotel diningrooms and restaurants will not be permitted to sell beer, according to the bill which the Alberta Government will submit to the Legislature next month implementing the recent referendum, which was endorsed by a large majority, for the legal sale in the Province of intoxicating liquors. Sale of beer by bottle or glass for consumption on the premises will be permitted, however, in "premises specially licensed for that purpose, such premises consisting of a room conformin. to strict regulations of the board," it is announced in a statement issued yesterday by Premier Greenfield following a three-day caucus of his supporters in the Legislature. A liquor control board of three members with "very wide powers" is to be appointed to administer the act.

Permits are to be issued to residents of the Province and visitors, and they may purchase wines and spirits in sealed packages at Government stores in quantities "limited by regulations of the board" for consumption "in private residences only." Beer also is to be sold only to permit owners.

There is to be a measure of local option governing the location of liquor stores and licensed beer premises. Bona fide clubs will be permitted to sell beer to members, subject to regulations.

$500,000 GIFT TO WIFE REVOKED

Charges Against Husband Constituted Ingratitude Under Civil Code.

MONTREAL, Dec. 21.—A gift of $50,000 made in a contract of marriage in 1911 between L. W. Just and Dame E. M. Cornwell whereby Just promised to pay this amount to his wife within ten years, was revoked to-day by Mr. Justice MacLennan, in Superior Court.

The donation was set aside on the ground that grave charges made by Mrs. Just against her husband during the year preceding the institution of the action, constituted ingratitude, a reason for which donations may be revoked under the civil code. An action taken at the same time by Mrs. Just to force her husband to pay the amount of the gift was dismissed with costs.

AFGHAN BORDER MUCH IMPROVED

Mobile British Force and Road Construction Have Effected Good Results.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Well informed opinion here holds that the military position of the northwest frontier of India has not been made worse by recent events. Happenings in Afganistan have not altered British military arrangements on the frontier. The latest official news from the frontier shows that the worst spot—Waziristan—has very materially improved as a result of road construction and the existence of a mobile force there. Practically all sections of the Mahsuds have come to terms with the British.

HAD A RELAPSE.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—(United Press.)—Following a relapse Friday, Thomas Lee, Wolwine, former Los Angeles district attorney, slept well last night and was considerably stronger to-day. Wolwine, who suffered hemorrhages of the liver, passed a restless day yesterday and physicians in attendance planned to consult today regarding a fresh blood transfusion.

Made His Pile $2,000,000 Gives Away His Business

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Having accumulated a fortune of more than $2,000,000 in Wall Street, John Borg, one of the leading members of the New York curb market, has announced his retirement from the brokerage field, and the gift of his business to three junior members of the firm.

"I have made my pile," Mr. Borg said, so I am getting out and letting the younger fellows make theirs. I am giving them the business because they have earned it, and I have no further use for it myself as I have all the money I need.

"While I am going to devote more time to my other financial interests, I'm quitting the brokerage business, in which I have made most of my money, so that I can have more time for play.

Newspaper His Hobby.

"I am particularly anxious to devote more time to my hobby—a newspaper. While I am not a newspaper man, I've got my own ideas about how a newspaper should be run. I think it ought primarily to serve the community in which it is located. My newspaper, the Bergen N. J. Evening Record, is making some money, but with me profit in that enterprise is a secondary consideration."

Mr. Borg started in Wall Street as a $4-a-week office boy shortly after he was graduated from the Union Hill, N.J. High School in 1897. Only a few years later he was in business for himself, executing orders in the old out-door curb market on Broad street. He is now only 42 years old.

Endowed Scholarship.

About three years ago he endowed a $25,000 scholarship fund for the benefit of the graduates of the Union Hill High School. Each year one boy is sent from that high school to Rutgers University.

"I missed a college education because I had to go to work when I got out of high school," Mr. Borg said, "but I realize that a college education is a fine thing, and something which every boy should have. The boy who gets the scholarship at Union Hill must give a moral pledge that within 10 years after graduation he will give to some boy the same opportunity he himself has enjoyed. I hope in that way that my plan will work out as an endless chain of encouragement to poor but deserving lads."

NOVEMBER EARNINGS OF C.N.R. SHOW HEAVY GAIN

Gross Earnings Amounted to $24,209,223, Reflecting Favorable Weather Conditions For Grain Traffic.

FIGURES FOR YEAR.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The November statement of operating results issued by the Canadian National Railways yesterday shows $4,581,318 net earnings, an increase of 135 per cent. over the net for November of last year. Gross earnings for the system amounted to $24,209,223, or $689,579 over November, 1922. The extended favorable marketing conditions in Western Canada, due to the mild weather which prevailed throughout November, largely accounted for the increase in gross earnings. The mild weather also favorably affected operating conditions and had a direct bearing on operating costs. Total expenses for the month were $19,627,905, or $1,942,630 less than November, 1922.

The net earnings for the Canadian National Railways for the 11 months ending November 30th, 1923, were $16,602,603, as compared with $5,772,116 for the corresponding period of last year, an increase of $10,830,487, or 188 per cent.

Three Years Fixed.

Three years was the time definitely fixed last night by Sir Henry Thornton as the period at the end of which Canadian taxpayers might expect to find themselves freed of the burden of deficits on the Canadian National Railways. Sir Henry was speaking before an unusually large gathering of the commercial travellers of Canada.

In the course of his address Sir Henry was able to make the announceemnt that, up to the first of December, the net profits of Nationals had reached $15,500,000, and he could confidently predict, in view of conditions and traffic since that date, that the net operating profits for the year would amount to $18,000,000. That figure had to be set up against the operating profit of less than three millions for the year previous.

Looking into the future, Sir Henry was most optimistic, and he declared that he would be greatly disappointed in the people of Canada if, at the end of next year, there was not an operating profit of $30,000,000. A year after that it should be all clean sailing for the Canadian National and for the people of Canada, so far as their railway problem was concerned. At the same time, in spite of the fact that the present year had made great strides in developing the spirit and sentiment of public ownership of railways, Sir Henry wanted to recall that the operating profit of $18,000,000, which he hoped to have at the end of the year, will not meet the capital charges. So he asked for patience and consideration for another two years at least.

Declines to Hear Christmas Carols

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press). — When Lloyd George was prosecuting his land tax campaign not a few noble landlords brought some derision on themselves by uttering a warning that they would be compelled, if such taxes were imposed, to curtail their donations to charities.

Sir Frederick Garden of Newbury, Berkshire, has written that he cannot this Christmas receive the Wesley Guild carol party, adding that he would like to point out that the unemployed had a remedy in protection proposed by the Baldwin Government, but it was turned down by the people.

Newbury was a Tory stronghold till it returned a Liberal in the last election. Garden's father-in-law was for many years its representative in the House of Commons.

PUT NEW SALES TAX INTO FORCE

Premier King Says the Government Must Carry Out Will of Parliament Which Approved It.

OTTAWA, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)—All doubt as to whether or not the new sales tax will go into effect on January 1 was removed last evening, following a lengthy sitting of the cabinet council, when Premier King stated positively that the tax would be enforced. The Prime Minister said that the Government must carry out the will of Parliament which had approved the new tax. He intimated, however, that the Minister of Customs was prepared to consider appeals against the tax, and that where its operation appeared to work an injustice, effort must be made to remedy this.

The new tax has met with much opposition on various grounds since it passed Parliament and its was suggested that the Government might suspend its operation until such time as Parliament had an opportunity to look into some of the objections made. The Finance Minister was requetsed by one influential organization to repeal the tax substituting a turnover tax in its stead. It was claimed that the latter would realize as much or more revenue than the new sales tax at the same time bearing more lightly on trade. It was objected that the returns to be made to the Government under the new sales tax would necessitate a great deal of labor, inconveience and expense to many business houses.

GREEK PARTIES TANGLED SINCE LATE ELECTION

Attempt to Ascertain the Relative Strength Abandoned Until the National Assembly Convenes in January.

SOME IN TWO CAMPS.

ATHENS, Dec. 22.—Colonel Plastiras of the revolutionary committee conferred yesterday with the chiefs of the various political groups in an effort to ascertain their relative strength before the meeting of the newly elected National Assembly, which has been convoked for January 2.

The present alignment shows the Liberals to be claiming 224 deputies and the Republicans 178 of the total of 402 seats, but owing to the fact that many candidates in the recent elections ran under both the Liberal and the Republican banners they are now claimed by both sides, and the actual lineup cannot be determined with certainty before the assembly meets and proceeds with the election of its president and speaker.

Meanwhile the Republicans, fearing a compromise on the subject of the future regime in the Assembly are in favor of forcing the revolutionary government's resignation and seeizing the reins themselves, thus assuring a republic.

Retain Dynasty.

The Liberals have all along favored retention of the dynasty with limited powers and the establishment of a republic only in case a large majority of the people voted for it in a plebiscite to take place after thorough discussion in the assembly. By forcing out the king, the Republicans are charged by their opponents with breaking a pre-election pledge that there would be no change of government until after the meeting of the new assembly.

M. Djouvara, the Roumanian Minister to Greece, who was the only diplomat present to say farewell to King George upon the latter's embarkation ,yesterday made public denial of a report that he had attempted a deiplomtic demarche against the King's departure, declaring that Roumania merely joined Great Britain in demanding from the revolutionary government assurances of safety for the royal person.

Britain's Interest.

Great Britain, it is understood, proposed to provide a ship for the King and Queen, unless the Greek Government was able to guarantee their safety ,and also insisted that the steamship Daphne, on which the royalties were taken to Roumania, should be under the command of an officer not of republican sympathies.

HOME OF PRIVATE POLICE BOMBED

SUDBURY, Dec. 21.— Unknown persons bombed the residence of Police Inspector Reedy of the International Nickel Company's police force at Creighton mine at about five o'clock this morning. The explosive was placed or thrown at the side of the house and the explosion shattered every window in that side of the house and tore a hole in the wall of the ground floor. The inspector and his family were sleeping upstairs at the time but all escaped injury. Recently there has been an active campaign in Creighton mine against bootleggers, and provincial police, who have taken charge of the case, believe this was an act of bootleggers' revenge. In Creighton court to-day one bootlegger was fined three hundred and costs and a man charged with purchasing from an unlicensed dealer fifty dollars.

Suspect Foul Play

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Police believe tha Eli Venner and Frances Shanauvier, who disappeared Saturday afternoon leaving Petit Cote in a rowboat filled with beer, were either slain by a high-jacker or drowned.

The high-jacker theory was strengthened yesterday when Frank Shaunauvier, father of Frances told police the keeper of the Beer warehouse at Petit Cote informed him a cripple had followed the two men from the warehouse in another boat.

Shaunauvier is 21-years-old and Venner 50-years-old.

Bail of $200,000 Montreal Record

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)—The largest bail ever fixed by a Montreal judge was fixed yesterday afternoon by Judge Monet in a holdup case. Kenneth MacIntosh, alleged holdup man was held for $200,000 bail. There are four counts against MacIntosh and bail was fixed at $50,000 on each count.

MacIntosh was arrested for alleged theft with violence on December 8 and since that date three other charges have been preferred.

NOMINATE MANY ON ALDERMANIC BOARD IN CITY

James Gates is One of Aspirants — Dr. Holloway Declares Himself in Mayoralty Contest--All Old Aldermen Renominated.

CHAMBER CROWDED

Not many surprises were uncovered by the aldermanic nominations last night, and only a few of the nominees publicly acknowledged the honor done them. There was a full gallery of citizens throughout the proceedings, every seat in the Council Chamber being occupied, while many stood in the hallway. The City Council was present in force.

Those nominated for Aldermen are

Walter Stocker, nominated by G. H. Duncan and Roland Denne.

Thomas C. Ephgrave, nominated by George H. Duncan and Roland Denne.

E. Melville Turner, nominated by Walter Stocker and M. J. Maher.

Malcolm McIntyre, nominated by Joseph Crowe and Walter Stocker.

Nagle E. Phelan, nominated by G. H. Duncan and R. Morrison.

James Gates, Sr., nominated by J. A. Foster and W. Thomas.

Robert Noble Jones, nominated by E. B. Fowler and W. H. Lytle.

William T. Holloway, nominated by M. McIntyre and G. H. Duncan.

Francis R. J. MacPherson, nominated by J. Y. Scollard and J. A. Ash.

George H. Duncan, nominated by L. G. Dobbin and F. R. J. MacPherson.

Thomas H. Hooper, nominated by Walter J. Oke and S. T. Wedlock.

Reginald H. Turner, nominated by Manson Comstock and George Leader.

A Few Speeches.

On the meeting being thrown open for addresses by City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, who last night presided at his thirty-first nomination meeting several of those nominated took occasion to address the electors on their aims.

Ald. Walter Stocker reviewed the work of the Board of Works, of which he is the chairman in the present council, and told of his work since his election two years ago as the second largest vote. He remarked that the Board of Works, like the City Council itself, has control of only a small part of its appropriation. Out of the $35,000 allowed the Board of Works, he said, 50 per cent is uncontrollable. This, of course, handicaps the Board in its work.

Referring to the economies effected by the present board, Stocker remarked that the lowest tender received for the Park street sewer was $50,000 or $55,000. Done by the city by day labor it will cost around $30,000. Extensive storm drain trunk lines and radiating arteries were suggested as a relief for the flooding nuisance which annually brings a flood of complaints from citizens in the south centre of the city and elsewhere.

Regarding the police controversy, Ald. Stocker said every member of the council is in sympathy with the common policeman, but the council believes it should have the power to approve the spending of the people's money. "I think you will find we have the say."

Ald. McIntyre said he is undecided as to whether to contest the position this year or not, but if he decided to stand for election he will depend on his record during the past two years. He gave an outline of the work of the Property Committee, of which he is chairman in the present council, and appealed to the citizens to boost the city.

OCCUPATION OF RUHR PRODUCED COAL SUPPLIES

Instead of a 'Probable Zero' France and Belgium Obtained Five Million Tons This Year, Says Poincare.

REMAIN ON RHINE.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Premier Poincare, replying to adverse criticisms of the Ruhr operations from the Government's opposition, yesterday reviewed the entire situation in the Chamber of Deputies.

He produced figures purporting to show that France and Belgium had obtained more than five million tons of coal and coke since January 11, the beginning of the occupation, as compared with what he termed a "probable zero" had not the guarantees been taken. He added that, with twenty-seven per cent. of the entire Ruhr production assured for 1924, the shipments next year will reach more than 26,000,000 tons.

The Premier reiterated the Government's intention not to evacuate the territory beyond the Rhine "until we are completely paid," and lauded the occupation as an effective means of bringing Germany to the realization that she must come to terms.

Approves Experts.

Concerning the experts committee appointed by the Reparation Commission to investigate Germany's financial situation, he expressed the hope that their work would be successful. He dwelt especially upon the importance of the presence on the committee of representative citizens of the United States with the approval of the Washington Government.

He was willing, he said, to resume direct negotiations with Germany now that the passive resistance was ended, provided the Germans would not attempt to engage the French in "conversations that usurp the functions of the Reparation Commission, all of whose prerogatives we intend to respect." He admitted that it was impossible for Germany just now to make any sort of cash payment and that if one was forthcoming it would have to be from the proceeds of a foreign loan.

Drift From Prussia.

M. Poincare asserts that he would undertake no "negotiations seeking again to impose the Prussian influence on the Rhineland from which it is their tendency to drift farther away."

"I do not believe," he added, "that the hour of optimism has yet struck, but when German good-will becomes a reality I am certain the occupation of the Ruhr will be for much in showing the French strength and will."

DOMINION PREMIERS WANT RECOGNITION

If Work of Imperial Conference is to Be Derided Because of Mere Change in Government, They Will Not Return.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press Cable)— With reference to the fate of the Imperial conference protction proposals—"Nation" the "Highbrow" Democratic weekly, declares that the position taken by Premier Massey of New Zealand and Premier Smuts of South Africa is quite untenable.

Preferences announced at the Imperial conference had not been submitted to Parliament. The nation points out, and the furthest the government had gone was to say they would not shut the door in advance of any proposals from Dominions. Nothing could do more harm to the prospects of future conferences, the nation adds, than the acceptance of the doctrine that any and every proposition submitted to the conference was a decree which must automatically be registered by British and Dominion Parliaments.

The Spectator, although its principles are strongly free trade, agrees with Premier Smuts and Massey that the Dominjon will be displeased if Labor expended in connection with the Imperial cgonference is to eb rendered useless my a mre change of government, "We do not favor preferentiai tariffs in the abstract," The Spectator says, "because we nev er have been able to believe that they will effect what their advocates expect of them, but we see the Imperjal conference is in some danger of being brought into derision if all its work may be undone yb a mere change in government here. If this is to be the rule, the Dominion Premiers will not come in future.

MARMORA PUBLIC SCHOOL CLOSING

Interesting Programmes Provided — Marmora News of Interest.

MARMORA, December 22. — The closing exercises of th Public School were held on Thursday afternoon. In order to have room, the First and Second Rooms held their programme together in the Second Room. Miss Riddle, teacher of the First Class, acted as chairman.

The children, though small, gave a splendid programme, composed of choruses, songs, and recitations.

After their programme they went to Miss Riddle's room, where they received their presents from the Christmas tree.

The Third and Fourth Rooms held a joint concert in the Fourth Room. Mr. Prentice, the principal, acted as chairman while Miss Williams helped the pupils in the preparation for their parts.

This was a more varied programme, as the pupils were much older. A pretty wand drill, to the music of the grafonola, was well given by the the girls of the Third Room. The boys of that room presented a drill accompanied by instruments of their own making, as for example a egg-beater, tub, saw, etc.

A number of dialogues were given by the pupils of the two rooms — "Away Down East." "The Ruggles' Christmas Party." "The Court-room Scene," from "Alice in Wonderland."

These were all well prepared, but the best of all was the play, "The Wooing of Miss Canada." The costumes in this were varied and picturesque. It was a splendid thing considered from every viewpoint.

There were numerous other choruses and recitations. The pupils had their Christmas trees in Miss Williams' room.

All the teachers had treats of nuts and candies prepared for their pupils.

Mr. Prentice was presented with the book, "Canadian Cities of Romance," by the pupils of his room. Barbara Reid read the address and Stanley Pearce presented the book.

In both rooms there were quite a number of parents and friends, who were delighted with the programmes which were given.

Concerts Numerous.

At this season of the year there is a succession of Christmas entertainments. At Springbrook the Anglicans held theirs on Wednesday night. The Methodist Sunday School held theirs on Thursday night at which they gave their minister the present of a large turkey for Christmas Day.

Skating One Day.

The young people of the town who have been expecting skating this week are badly disappointed. On Tuesday afternoon and evening the cove looked so inviting that some of them had first skate of the season. The rain and mist which have come since destroyed the prospects. At present it looks as though we are going to have a Christmas without snow.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Money Withheld for Road Improvement — The Municipal Elections.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 22. — Reeve Anderson has received a letter from R. C. Muir of Toronto, chief engineer of municipal highways for Ontario, dealing with the culvert that was put in last year on the county provincial highway near Christ church and over which a dispute has arisen as to the $400 grant.

That was the amount to which the town of Campbellford was entitled for the construction of the culvert. The money was paid the town by the council of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, but now the Government refuses to reimburse the counties council for their outlay and it is now feared that the counties council will get even by stopping $400 out of some future grant to the town.

County Roads Superintendent Grier was here recently and inspected the culvert. Assistant Engineer McVicker of the Department of Highways, also made an inspection some time ago and it was on his recommendation to headquarters that the grant was held up.

In his communication to Reeve Anderson, Engineer Muir says that the culvert was not built according to specifications and that as it is below the standard required on county provincial roads the department has no alternative but to withhold the financial assistance prescribed in such cases.

Councillor Peake Injured.

Russell Peake, member of the Seymour Council, is lying at his home on the English Line, suffering from injuries which he sustained when his team ran away. Mr. Peake was in Campbellford Thursday with a load of chop and while climbing on to his waggon to start for home, slipped and fell upon the whiffletrees. This frightened the horses and they ran for some distance up Rear street before Mr. Peake fell clear of the waggon. He was taken to his home and Dr .H. B .Longmore was called in. Mr. Peake is painfully bruised, but as no bones are broken it is hoped that he will soon be around again.

Mr. Armstrong Objects.

W. J. Armstrong takes exception to the recent reference to him in the Examiner in connection with the coming mayoralty contest. He says that what he did say was that he had spent three years in the public service and considered that he had done his share. What the interview made him say was that he had had enough of public life. He maintains that the latter is a reflection on the people who in the past supported him for office, and besides he had no idea he was to be quoted.

In interviewing Mr. Armstrong the Examiner was following out a policy it has pursued since the campaign began to warm up—of mentioning no man in connection with the election without securing a statement from him personally. During the interview a prominent citizen of the town urged Mr. Armstrong to enter the field but received no assurance that he would do so.

Baptist Entertainment.

There was a happy crowd of little people and a large gathering of well-pleased elders at the Paptist church last night, the occasion being the annual Christmas entertainment. Rev. H. S. Bennett, the pastor, presided, and was ably assisted in all the duties of the evening by David Mason, a prominent member of the choir, and assistant superintendent of the school . The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and a Christmas tree stood in each of the corners behind the platform. The children acquitted themselves in a manner which reflected credit on pupils and trainer alike. The church has a band of Canadian girls in training and one of the features of the programme was a patriotic drill by a number of the members.

Another number that especially pleased the audience was an exhibition by boys from Miss Shore's class, the young fellows apparently being equally at home whether standing on their heads or their feet.

The presents were distributed by Messrs. Bennett and Mason and there was a handsome Christmas token for every member of the school, and then some left over. The following was the programme in full:

"Chorus by school, "Hail to the Lord Who Comes."
Recitation—Elma Carter.
Recitation—Mildred Cochrane.

News Notes

Deputy Reeve Nelson of Percy township was in town yesterday and stated that a spirited contest is expected, that Reeve Hermiston and himself will likely be faced by the same candidate who opposed them last year.

The chorus of all the churches will furnish special programmes of Christmas music on Sunday.

Ralph K. McGregor left yesterday to spend the holidays with his uncle, D. McGregor of Streetsville.

Councillor Carter will spend Christmas with his family in Toronto.

Miss Dorothy Kingston is home from Victoria College spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kingston.

COLLEGIATE WAS GUTTED BY FIRE

Loss Far Exceeds the $60,- Insurance Carried— Temporary Quarters For Pupils.

COLLINGWOOD, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press). — Collingwood's Collegiate Institute was gutted by fire which broke out yesterday in the south tower of the building and had gained considerable headway before it was noticed. The scholars had been dismissed at noon for the Christmas vacation. The building, erected in 1878, was insured for $60,000, but the loss will far exceed that amount. Pending the erection of new buildings, it is expected that temporary quarters will be rented for the accommodation of more than two hundred students that are attending the Collegiate.

SIX ROUNDS WERE ENOUGH FOR MOE

Mickey Walker, World's Champion, Hit Herschovitch With All He Had

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Another world's champion showed his wares in a local ring last night, and once again he met a local opponent. The similarity does not cease there, as the champion, Mickey Walker, the welterweight king, showed ample reason why he is the top-notcher, and the bout with Moe Herschovitch, the Canadian champion, did not go the regulation distance, being stopped towards the end of the sixth, when Referee Lou Marsh put an end to the proceedings after Walker had hit Herschovitch with everything he had and had sent him down for a number of counts of nine.

NOMINATE MANY

Alderman Phelan.

Nominated both for the position of Alderman and Mayor, Ald. Phelan failed last night to indicate what position it is his desire to fill or for which he will be a candidate. He has been a member of the City Council for four years, he said, and has been for 2½ years chairman of the Finance Commitee.

After reviewing the police controversy from its origin, Ald. Phelan reaffirmed his belief in the city's case. "From the way the judges spoke," he said, "it seems certain we are going to win."

Answering objections made by some that the test case will cost the city a great deal of money, he assured them that $200 will cover the case, both here and in Toronto, even if the city lost. "Even if it had cost $1000, it would have been money well spent to gain an interpretation of the act. If the city wins the case, the amount expended will be easily made up by economizing in the police department."

R. N. Jones said that he had served four years in the city council and his record was well known. He had no criticism to offer the present city council, since it had received enough from other sources, and if elected he would do his best for the city.

Ald. Holloway said in deciding to accept the nomination as mayor he had acted under the supposition that the field was practically clear, and had decided "to stop the pussyfooting and say something." "I went in innocently," he declared, "and intend to stay in it."

The council cannot cut down the estimates of the police department below a certain figure without interfering with the administration of justice, he said, in referring o the police situation. "We all felt very comfortable when the appeal was over that we would win."

Conservative expenditures only were advocated by Dr. Holloway, who referred to the sewage disposal plant, construction of which faces the city. This will require careful investigation from many viewpoints.

The speaker thought that a combination school is the ideal toward which Peterboro should look, but its construction should not be undertaken just at present. When it is considered, he thinks it should be referred to the citizens, who should have more voice in matters of that kind.

He referred to the saving effected in bringing 1000 tons of a good grade soft coal into the city during an acute shortage a year ago. This was used in the schools, city buildings and fire hall and gave good service, besides relieving the fuel situation by leaving so much coal in the coal dealers hands for distribution to citizens. The council has been criticized for this he said, but he considered it good business.

F. R. J. MacPherson said he did not think he could give sufficient time to the work of the council, but would make up his mind finally on Saturday.

None of the other nominees addressed the meeting.

Mayor W. H. Taylor was the first nominee to hand his qualifications to Mr. Armstrong, and he is now definitely in the field for his return to the mayoral dais for a third term.

All other nominees must file their qualifications before 9 o'clock tonight after which time it will be understood they do not wish to contest the position for which they were nominated.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

The defeat of the Government candidate in Kent, N. B., coming on the heels of a similar setback for the administration in Halifax, gives rise to many rumors of an election next year.

The situation in the House during the next session with the Government in a minority of four will certainly be far from comfortable, although it is difficult to picture a division that would find Conservatives and Progressives voting solidly together against the Government.

The Progressives may be expected to do what they can to profit from the plight of the administration, however.

Their leader, Mr. Robert Forke, makes no bones about that fact, for he has already announced that the Government can get the support of his party only in proportion to how far it goes in the direction of putting into effect some of the policies to which the Progressives are wedded.

Negotiations for closer relationships between Liberals and Progressives may be expected as a result of the verdict in Kent, and upon the success or failure of such negotiation will depend whether or not there will be an appeal to the people next year.

That seems to be the general view in political circles generally, although after all this prophecy is merely conjective—but, in any event, the next session promises to be of unusual interest.

MR. E. F. MASON RE-ELECTED.

The re-election by acclamation to the Utilities Commission of Mr. E. F. Mason has occasioned no surprise, for there has not been the least talk of any opposition to his return being offered.

There is no department of the civic administration in which the ratepayers have more confidence than the Utilities Commission, and the choosing of Mr. Mason without a contest is both a tribute to his own excellent service and a testimonial of faith in the commission itself.

Mr. Mason is a business man who has made a success of his own business, and his judgment and ability have been valuable assets in the deliberations of the Utilities Commission.

In addition, he has had the advantage of experience in civic affairs through good work as a member of the City Council, and in every respect is well qualified for the honour conferred upon him by his fellow-citizens yesterday.

His re-election is a good stroke of business for Peterborough and should be regarded by the commission as a pat on the back for splendid service in the public interest and an incentive to tackle the problems of their department with renewed vigor next year, fortified by the assurance that the confidence and trust of the community are theirs beyond a doubt.

The Examiner congratulates Mr. Mason and Peterborough upon his re-election.

PICK OUT THE BEST MATERIAL.

With the nominations over and contests practically assured for the mayoralty, Council and Board of Education, it becomes the duty of citizens generally to take a real interest in the selection of the best possible civic material from what is offered.

Personal feelings should be discarded in such a selection.

It is not always the man who is the best "mixer" who makes the best servant of the public when he gets into office, and to vote for a candidate simply on the strength of a sunny smile is making a doubtful use of the franchise.

Among the candidates are men who have had previous experience in civic business.

There is something concrete upon which they can be judged.

Their records are available for the guidance of the voter, and no candidate can complain of unfairness if the story of what he has done in the past is taken as an earnest of what he may be expected to do in the future.

Other aspirants for office have not been parts of the civic machine before.

In their case their ability to successfully handle the city's business can be fairly accurately estimated by how they have succeeded in handling their own.

A candidate's business career can be used as a yard-stick with which to measure his possibilities as a member of one of the civic bodies.

The whole field should be carefully surveyed and an earnest effort made to pick out the men most likely to give the best service.

CHECKING THE MOVIES.

It is not unlikely that the Hudson Bay Company have done Canada a real service by prosecuting for libel a motion picture firm which made a picture showing that corporation in the old days as practising all sorts of corruption and lawlessness in order to compel the poor trapper to sell his furs at less than their worth, says the Montreal Star. The misrepresentation of conditions, life, laws and society upon the screen has almost passed into a proverb, so common an adjunct has it been of the average film. But there is a point beyond which it is dangerous to adventure, and the deliberate distortion of principles, motives and deeds, to comply with the equally distorted imagination of some movie director, is a practice of which the courts, fortunately, are quite willing and ready to take cognizance when it is brought before them in proper form.

The potentialities of the motion picture as a medium of instruction and education are much underestimated as a general rule. But the extent to which false pictures of, say climate, modes of living and the routine of daily habits can militate against a country's prosperity has yet to be fully realized. That the British courts have grasped this is clearly shown. It will be a very good thing if the American producer and the Canadian exhibitor grasp it also. For Canadians to show upon our screens pictures of this country made in the U. S. A. and representing life here as it never has been and never could be lived is not only an astounding anomaly, but the worst possible advertisement for Canada from the viewpoint of immigration that could well be devised.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The prospects of an election by acclamation in connection with the Board of Education are happily shattered by the nomination of thirteen candidates—the five retiring members and eight new nominees—to fill the five vacancies on the board.

It is regarded as certain that enough of those named yesterday will qualify to ensure a contest, and that is a matter for rejoicing inasmuch as it indicates some awakening on the part of the ratepayers to a realization of the fact that there is a school problem of considerable importance to be settled and that the Board of Education is by no means unanimous as to the best course to adopt.

In view of the difference of opinion existing in the board it would have been unfortunate, to say the least, if there had been no contest and therefore no opportunity to test the community's views in regard to school matters.

Every candidate for the board, in view of the circumstances, should be prepared to discuss this matter of additional Collegiate Institute and technical school accomodation and to state definitely what policy he or she can be counted upon to favour.

The two main plans are as fallows:

To provide the required Collegiate Institute accomodation now and to build, some time in the future, a separate technical school; or

To enlarge the present Collegiate Institute, providing the necessary accomodation for academic work, and at the same time furnishing facilities for technical education; in other words, to establish a combined Collegiate Institute and technical school.

There may be candidates who favour neither of these plans, and who believe that any building operations should be deferred.

But whether aspirants for the Board of Education support one or the other or neither of these policies they should leave the ratepayers in no doubt as to where they stand.

The danger of handing a blank cheque to any candidate does not need to be emphasized.

A NOTABLE IRISH TRIUMPH.

One of the most notable and most encouraging things to happen in Ireland within living memory has just been recorded in the Free State. It is that the Protestant Church in Ireland took up $1,250,000 of the Irish Free State loan. The event is remarkable not alone in the fact that it indicates a willingness of the Protestant minority to co-operate with Catholics to make the Free State go, but remarkable in the more striking fact that the head and centre of Protestantism in Ireland is at Armagh, in Ulster, and that it was from there the decision to subscribe to the loan was taken. Ten or twenty years ago such a thing could not happen. That it happens now is proof of the remarkable, almost unbelievable change that has come over Ireland. It reveals not only a new spirit of mutual confidence and of give and take, but it shows that Protestantism in Ireland has not alone confidence in the Free State Government but belief in ultimate union of the North and South.

Hardly less remarkable than the subscription of the church was the subscription of Trinity College. Trinity, in the old days, stood in the eyes of Irish Nationalists as the strong right arm of the "Castle." It was regarded—as, indeed, it was established to be—as the bridgehead of the ascendency in Ireland; and it stood aloof from the aspirations and the lives of the vast majority of Irishmen. Today, as Protestant and as Saxon as in the past, it is represented in the Free State Parliament, flies the flag of the Free State, and assists a Free State loan. Two of the leading men in the university have let it be known (in an interview with the Freeman's Journal) that they resent some sneering comments in the London Morning Post. "The success of the loan means the success of the State, and we felt it to be our duty to help the State," wrote Mr. Russell, bursar to the college. "There is no such thing as bowing before any storm," said Professor Thrift. "Nor was any money of Trinity subscribed as a result of any threat as to the imposition of income tax. The loan is a good investment, and if it is taken up by small investors, it will have a great deal to do with the stability of the country, for the more people you get financially interested in the Free State the more likely it is to be successful."

Well may Ireland prepare to celebrate a joyous Christmas. For never for centuries will the Star of Bethlehem have shone upon an Erin so far advanced upon paths of progress and peace.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Perhaps Jack Frost and his pals did not receive any invitation this year to drop around for the Christmas festivities.

A lot of good men have been nominated. In the general interest they should be persuaded to stay in the contest.

Controller Singer entered the Toronto mayoralty contest merely because Tommy Church is attempting a comeback. The Controller evidently wants to fight with someone with a reputation.

Hearing that Mayor Taylor was starting out after his former record, Tommy Church of Toronto decided to begin a new one himself.

The Toronto contest looks like a Church-Singer battle. And a church singer argument is usually a warm one, as any choir leader can testify.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 22.—The sharp falling off in receipts of cattle at the Union Stock Yards this week, corrected the slump in prices which had gone on for the previous three weeks, and which culminated in the lowest prices for a year. Less than 3,000 cattle were received during the four days, and these with 600 left from last week, were all disposed of by Thursday's afternoon. The recovery in quotations was quite pronounced in all butcher's cattle, except cows, and the change here was mainly observable in a better demand owing to limited offerings.

The exporters paid up to $7.50 a cwt. this week, and packers were quite willing to take some of the loads at the prices paid for use as domestic beef. The advance in export steers was almost 50 cents p cwt., even allowing for the carrying charges on those bought a week ago.

Choice medium weight butcher's steers and heifers were up to $7.25 a cwt., and good butchers, medium and handy weight, sold from 6 to 6½ cents. Medium quality butchers brought 5 to 5½ cents, an average of 4½ cents. Baby beeves were not in too good demand, and one only sold as high as 11 cents a pound this week. Butcher's cows were not badly wanted, and only in one or two instances was 5 cents a pound paid for choice one. Good cows brought 4 to 4¼ cents, and medium cows around 3¼ cents. Canners were weak, and very few sold above 1¾ cents a pound. The small number of good bulls offered were taken for export from 4 to 5 cents.

There was a Christmas market in the calves this week, and it was difficult to get real choice ones, and the prices mounted to 14 cents a pound in one instance. Good calves brought 12 cents, and good mediums 10 cents a pound. Grasser calves made no advance, and sold from 2½ to 3 cents.

Following Monday, lambs were slightly draggy and reasonably good lambs were down to 10½ cents a pound on Thursday. The high price touched for the week for some fancy stock was 11½ cents. Sheep have held firm owing to the outside demand for breeding ewes.

Hogs are up a full 25 cents a cwt. from last week. The runs have slowed down and packers are bidding $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b. A good many hogs are going over at 15 cents a cwt. higher than this.

EGGS AND POULTRY.

OTTAWA, December 22 (Canadian Press). — The egg market is firm for fresh gathered graded stock. Storage offerings show some weakness. The poultry market is somewhat erratic. United States market for turkey is reported firmer, one car reported sold Boston at 26 f. .b. Toronto.

Toronto easy, specials 80, extras 75, storage extras 43, firsts 38, fancy fresh killed turkeys pobbing 28 to 32, undergrades difficult to move.

Montreal firm, active, specials jobbing 85, extras 63 to 65, firsts 50. Storage prices easy, with extras 39 to 40, firsts 35, seconds 28 to 29. Dressed turkeys in large supply weak at 26 to 27.

Western markets unchanged.

Chicago fresh spot 38, refrigerator standards 24.

New York weak, unchanged.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, December 22 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand	4.45 3-4
Cables	4.46 1-8

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, December 22 (Canadian Press).—Egg quotations yesterday: Fresh specials 80, fresh extras 60, fresh firsts 45, storage extras 39 to 40, storage firsts 34 to 35, storage seconds 28 to 30.

Butter — No. 1 pasteurised 41 1-2 to 42; No. 1 creamery 40 1-2 to 41. Turkeys 27 to 30 a pound.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 22 (Canadian Press). — Assertions that enormous substitution of Canadian wheat for domestic wheat is taking place all over the United States, had much to do yesterday with bringing about a material setback in prices here.

The market closed heavy, 5-8 to 1 5-8 to 1 3-4 net lower, May $1.06 1-2 to $1.06 5-8 and July $1.05 to $1.05 1-2.

Corn finished 3/4 to 1 1-4 down.

Oats at 1-8 to 5-8 decline.

Provisions were unchanged to 17c off.

Special significance was attached by leading Chicago traders yesterday to a pronounced drop in wheat quotations at Minneapolis. The action of the Minneapolis market was taken to be a reflection of the great extent of duty paid imports from Canada into the United States this season, and it was estimated that nearly 13,000,000 bushels had thus moved into domestic use in this country without counting that current month's total, or without considering an immense quantity which entered and was milled in bond. In this connection the fact was pointed out that owing to the close of lake navigation the imports for December were likely to exceed the aggregate for any previous month.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, December 22 (Canadian Press). — Cattle, receipts, 60,000; beef steers and fat she stock uneven, generally steady; closed weak; most short fed steers, $7.00 to $9.00; few loads, $9.25 to $9.50; no choice yearlings here; most fat cows $3.75 to $5.00; beef heifers sharply lower for week at $4.00 to $5.50; some buyers taking better grade beef heifers in place of yearling steers; canners strong to 15c higher; bulk, $2.50 to $2.85, vealers, 25c to 50c up; bulk to packers around $9.50; stockers, $9.75 to $10.00; country demand for stockers and feeders only fair. Finishers wanting kind averaging 650 pounds up and carrying considerable flesh.

Hogs, receipts 60,000; slow, uneven, around 100c lower; bulk 240 to 300 pound butchers, $6.85 to $7.00; top, $7.00.

Sheep, receipts 8,000; fat lambs strong to 25c higher; bulk good and choice fat lambs, $12.75 to $13.00; top, $13.10; best fall clipped, $11.65; top yearlings, $11.00; feeding lambs and aged sheep scarce, odd lots fat ewes steady.

ELECTRICITY FREE TO NEW GOLD TOWN

IDITAROD, Alaska, Dec. 22.—(Associated Press)—This town, in the heart of a gold placer district, finds is unnecessary this year to make a tax levy.

The municipality has a reserve of $3,500 in the treasury. Revenues from federal licenses will amount to more than the expenses of the town government.

It is planned to build a municipal electric plant out of the surplus and to furnish the current free to residents.

Iditarod has a winter population of about 22. In the summer, during the mining season, several hundred are here.

TESTING AND FILLING SERVICE FOR ALL MAKES OF Storage Batteries

The price of batteries to the consumers having been greatly reduced, while the price to the dealer remains the same, it is inevitable that a "charge for service" policy be inaugurated.

The undersigned Battery Service Stations of the city will issue cards to car owners to cover seven inspections at a cost of one dollar and fifty cents ($1.50). Single inspections, twenty-five cents (25c).

Inspections will include testing cells with hydrometer, adding pure water and cleaning and putting vaseline on terminals where necessary. Where the battery has to be removed for recharging or repairs there will be no charge for inspection.

The undersigned trust that the motoring public will appreciate the reason for doing away with the so-called "free service," and they can be assured that the new policy will mean for them still better service and longer life for their batteries.

To The Electors!

I beg to announce that I am a candidate for re-election to the position of Deputy-Reeve, an office to which I was elected a year ago, lacking only three votes to poll as many as were given altogether to the two candidates who opposed me. So far I am the only candidate in the field who has a military record. I served overseas, and as a member of the Council always advocated the erection of a suitable memorial to the brave men who lost their lives in the Great War. I assure the people of Campbellford that if re-elected I will pursue the same course until the town has honored itself by paying some material tribute to its heroic dead.

I have no apologies to offer for my general record in the Council. I have striven at all times to do the best for the interests of the town. My official acts are before the public, and I confidently leave the issue to the voters.

Deputy-Reeve of Campbellford.

ROUMANIA EAGER IN QUEST OF OIL.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 22.—(Associated Press)—Oil is one of the big factor's in Rumania's dominant position in the Balkans, and the government's decision to develop the oil-fields with the aid of foreign capital will open up, it is hoped, big economic possibilities for the nation.

Economic necessity is now proving of greater concern to Rumania than political alliances and the practicing of unsound theories, such as maximum prices, export taxes and other restrictions at the expense of foreign capital employed in the development of the country's resources.

Rumania today has title to vast areas of rich oil-bearing lands, which have been leased so far only in small lots to purely Rumanian companies. The government now apparently realizes that the best interests of the country demand that these state-owned lands be intensively developed, and plans have been drawn up for drilling 3,000 wells on them during the next ten years, provided, of course, that foreign capitalists can be induced to come in and "carry the load."

Great Britain, and more particularly France, if only for political consideration, would like to extend their hold on the Rumanian fields, but it is felt here that American participation, which would presumably be entirely non-political in character, would be preferable.

FOREIGN ART MUST BE KEPT SEPARATE.

PRAIS, December 22 (Associated Press). — The Committee of the Independent Salon has raised a tempest among its members by deciding that in future foreign artists at the Salon shall be separated from the French and grouped in special rooms. Some of the most important French artists have resigned from the Salon and most of the foreign artists are expected to follow suit.

The dictum that art has no country even if artists have, has pleased, and it is pointed out that no foreign country separates French artists from its own.

The Independent Salon has always been noted for what may without exaggeration be called eccentricity. It has no jury and grants no medals or other distinctions. Each exhibitor pays according to the space he occupies.

Foreigners, especially Russians, have always formed a very high proportion of the exhibitors, and the reputation of the Salon as a freak show is generally attributed to the foreigners, hence the movement to separate the artists according to the nationalities so that credit and censure may fall where they are deserved.

BY SANTA CLAUS

TOY LAND, North Pole, Dec. 22.

My Dear Friends: You'll probably be surprised to know that Little Miss Muffet and Little Jack Horner are right here with me in Toy Land. They have just stepped out of Dollville and have asked me to pick some nice child to send them to.

Through a big doorway that's made out of a clown's face, I can watch the Midgets at work in Dollville.

Did you ever see a doll that didn't have any mouth, or eyes, or hair? My but they look funny that way!

But, dont' let that worry you. We always put these things on the doll before we load them into my sleigh.

The Midgets are doing that now. One of my helpers is painting red cheeks on the dolls while another is sqeezing a big tube of glue and sticking hair on the dolls with it.

If anyone were to try and put your eyes into place, it surely would hurt. But it doesn't hurt the dolls. They are so glad to get eyes, so they may see the little girl who gets them, that they don't mind having their eyes put in at all.

It is interesting to watch the funny little Midgets tuck dolls into little white beds. They are finding out if the dolls fit. If you get a doll and doll bed Christmas morning, you can be sure your doll's legs or arms won't hang over the side of the bed.

In my next letter I will tell you something about myself and my sleigh and reindeers.

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a family supply of really dependable cough medicine. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

PRIZES TO HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS AT LAKEFIELD

Annual Conversazione of High School Emphasized Creditable Results Shown at June Examinations.

GOOD PROGRAMME.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 22.— The ninth annual "conversat" of the Lakefield High School was held in the Memorial Hall last night and was attended by about 150 pupils, ex-pupils of the school and their friends. The hall was very prettily decorated ,the High School Colors, black and yellow, being displayed in the window decorations.

Rev. T. L. White acted as chairman and his bright, affable manner and happy mode of address made him a favorite with his audience. A good programme of music and recitations was rendered, and was interspersed by brief speeches by members of the school board, and local clergy. A pleasing feature of the occasion was the presentation of a prize to Miss Loretta Gibson, who led her class in the Normal entrance examinations in June. The fact that Miss Gibson is just fourteen years of age makes the distinction much greater. Special mention was made of the work of Miss Beulah Northey and Miss Sadie Young, both of whom did exceptionally well. All three girls, who were friendly rivals through the year, passed their Normal Entrance examinations, but were all too young too attend the Normal School.

Won Special Prizes.

Miss Yvonne Stuart, who won the country prize at the Entrance Examination last June, also received a prize. These prizes were personal gifts from Mr. J. M. Simpson, the principal of the High School who has done so much to encourage the pupils, Mrs. W. M. Graham spoke on the value of good citizenship and pride in the country and the village. Mr. Marling and Dr .J. C. Smith urged organized athletics in the school as a means of developing the body as well as the mind.

Rev. P. L. Jull and Rev. C. S. Reddick gave brief addresses which showed their interest in the progress of the school. Mr. Simpson referred to the fact that this was the first year that the Lakefield school was actually a high school. When he came to Lakefield seven years ago there were forty-five pupils and now there are ninety-five.

J. R .Hill, an ex-pupil, paid a strong tribute to the efficacy of the cadet corps and what has been accomplished by the local corps in the past. Most of the members of the volunteer fire brigade are recruited from ex-cadets.

COUNTRIES SETTLE POSTAL DEBT FUND.

France and Bulgaria Settle Controversy Over Basis of Payment.

SOFIA, Dec. 22.— (Associated Press)—Bulgaria and France have settled their controversy relative to a French debt to the Bulgarian postal service. Before Bulgaria entered the war in 1915 France owed the Bulgarian postal service 18,300 francs. In 1921 the French postal service offered to pay the debt in leva which, before the war, were equivalent in value to French and other continental francs.

Since the war, however the lev has declined in value so that it is now quoted at about 638 to 100 francs, and Bulgaria declined the offer, demanding settlement on the pre-war basis of francs. After some negotiations the French postal service consented to settle on the franc basis.

RUMANIA AND RUSSIA BEGIN NEGOTIATIONS.

Commissions Endeavor to Arrive at Trade Treaty Agreement.

BUCHAREST, Dec. 22.— (Associated Press)—Much interest is being manifested here in the negotiations at Tiraspol between Rumanian and Russian commissions, which are endeavoring to reach an agreement on a commercial treaty between the two countries. It is semi-officially declared here that the negotiations will be confined strictly to trade matters and will not extend to any political arrangements which the Russian negotiators may propose.

The work of the commissions is somewhat simplified because of the recent minimization of the Red Russian campaign for the maintenance of the Bessarabian issue as an open question. From the highest quarters it is estimated that Rumania regards the province ceded to it under the terms of the armistice with Soviet Russia as definitely Rumanian, never to be ceded back to Soviet Russia.

Grafton Co. Purchase Land At the Rear of Hotel Grounds For New Extension.

The history of the commencement and growth of the Grafton Company's business in Peterboro is an interesting one. Their first stand was in the store now known as the "Redfern" store, which was opened up in 1892. The next step took them in what is now the Cressman Store, one half of which was occupied by Cressman Co., and the other half by Graftons. Sometime later the Stevenson building was purchased and occupied it being the north half of the present store. As business continued to expand more room was looked for and secured in the adjoining store then occupied by C. B. Routley, which was purchased from the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. Dividing walls were first removed and the two lower floors thrown into one, steel beams taking the place of the brick and bearing the weight of the walls of the upper stories. The next step was the replacing the double fronts with one of Peterborough's finest store fronts, 47 feet wide and of a unique design, the idea of a Peterboro architect.

Still the big double stores was inadequate to properly handle the growing demand for Grafton clothing, and now comes the latest step in the purchase of the first slice of the Oriental Hotel property to be disposed of, which now gives the Company sufficient land to build a rear extension of 50 feet, the entire with of the store. This addition will be gone on with as soon as possible next Spring, and when completed will give Graftons a store of a depth of 165 feet, a ground floor space probably unequalled in Ontario outside of the big departmental stores. The recent land acquisition was secured from the Dickson Company, and is the first encroachment of the business section on the Oriental property, which may not eb the last as other needs arise.

Grafton & Company thank all patrons whose support has so rapidly built up their business and extend to them the compliments of the season.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner,
Dear Sir,—

In writing the letter which appeared in your columns, on the 18th, I did so as a "Veteran". The heading under which it appeared seems unfortunately to have given the impression that the writer had some close connection with the P.A.A.A. but such is not the fact. He is only a subscribing member, as are so many others. The letter followed your editorial on the previous day and was meant to give the viewpoint of the average Veteran, as gathered from time to time around the hall and which is largely that of the man in the street. This viewpoint prompted the questions asked of the aldermen at our meeting.

We want to see an A1 population in Canada. We think that a universal indulgence in healthful sports tends greatly to that end. We know that all children are not adapted to any one line of sport and that therefore, many lines of sport are necessary. How to attain this, is a question of ways and means. All sports cost money and the days when the young people were willing to entirely pay for their sport, are gone with top hats and many other landmarks. Some sports are spectacular and draw crowds others do not, though equally good for the physical development standpoint. In the absence of such private backing or municipal expenditure, the money can only come from subscription lists or from the paying sports.

The Business men seriously object to the innumerable subscriptions. The P.A.A.A. was looked upon much as the Community Chest scheme is looked upon as a simplifying, unifying, clearing house where profit from sport could be used as far as it went, and a general subscription in the form of municipal fee would do the rest. Last year seemed to point to the scheme working out in a general impetus to sport and some new lines got started. Therefore it seemed to us that a distinct step backward had this spring been taken by the City Council, when it leased the City amusement park to the representatives of one sport, even if that were by all odds the leading, best organized and most popular of summer sports. The disappointment and disapproval found voice in the questions asked of the Council at our meeting with them; and when your editorial missed our viewpoint, the letter followed to try to give it more plainly; not at all to air the views of the author, and was naturally signed "Veteran", there being no objection to the author's name appearing.

To judge by subsequent letters, some hard feeling has been aroused and for that we are sorry, as the purpose was not in the slightest personal, but that our views should be so plainly given, as to be unequivocal The criticism heard in G.W.V.A. Hall, is this line has been constructive, rather than disruptive and if the former letter has brought the matter out into the open, considerable good may have been accomplished. The list of Officers of the Baseball Association shows men of excellent caliber. The men at the head of the P.A.A.A. are recognized as such also. May we who have no direct contact with either body, commend our views and aims to their consideration and may we suggest that common ground can be found where they can get together.

DANCER CANNOT USE GOULD NAME

Edith Kelly Gould Was Defendant in Suit in Paris Courts.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—(United Press.)—The French courts to-day denied Edith Kelly Gould the right to use her divorced husband's name to advertise her stage appearances.

The dancer will be fined 500 francs each time she makes use of the name.

In his suit to prevent his ex-wife from bill-boarding the Gould name, Frank Gould sought to obtain a million francs damages.

The courts decided, however, that neither Edith Kelly nor the theatre where she has been appearing should be fined but the management must pay 1,000 francs each time it prints the Gould name hereafter if the dancer reappears.

(By Frederick G. Neumier, United Press Staff Correspondent).

The rebel leader, General Estrada will be forced to fight within a day or two.

Rebels on the east front are taking their defeats with bad grace according to the staff officers in the Federal army, who reported that upon entering Esparanza Obregon's forces found the rebels had destroyed oil tank and caused other wanton damage.

The Obregon army now has arms, munitions and equipment for 200,000 men if necessary, but it is maintained the need for such a force will not arise.

COMMITTEE FIND CURES DOUBTFUL

Faith Cures Did Not Turn Out as Good as Reported.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)— Report of committee appointed by Vancouver Ministerial Association to investigate "faith cures" of Dr. C. S. Price, who conducted an evangelistic campaign here last April, issued to-day, finds that of 350 typical cases considered, five amenable to mental treatment were cured, 39 have died, five have become insane and four additional insanity cases developed in families of persons who were annointed.

The 10,000 word report was signed by all but three of the Board of Inquiry composed of 11 clergymen, three university professors, eight medical doctors and a lawyer.

"After most earnest consideration and study," states the report, "we are forced to the conclusion that of the cases under survey which may fairly be classed as cures, all come very clearly within the group of what are commonly known as functional disorders."

The New ESSEX A SIX

Built by Hudson under Hudson Patents

Essex closed car comforts now cost $230 less than ever before. Also with this lower price you get an even more attractive Coach body and a six cylinder motor built on the principle of the famous Hudson Super-Six.

It continues Essex qualities of economy and reliability, known to 135,000 owners. It adds a smoothness of performance which heretofore was exclusively Hudson's. Both cars are alike in all details that count for long satisfactory service at small operating cost.

You will like the new Essex in the nimble ease of its operation. Gears shift quietly. Steering is like guiding a bicycle, and care of the car calls for little more than keeping it lubricated. That, for the most part, is done with an oil can.

The chassis design lowers the center of gravity, giving greater comfort and safety, at all speeds, on all roads. You will be interested in seeing how this is accomplished.

Greater fuel economy is obtained. The car is lighter, longer and roomier. You will agree that from the standpoint of appearance, delightful performance, cost and reliability, the new Essex provides ideal transportation.

CHRISTMAS LOT LIQUOR SEIZED IN CITY TODAY

Two Cases Consigned to "J. H. Bradley" Fell Into Hands of Inspector Stewart in Raid on Freight Car.

MARKED CASINGS

Somebody's Christmas was spoiled this morning by License Inspector Joseph Stewart when he raided a freight car at the Canadian National freight shed on Charlotte Street and seized a consignment of about 500 bottles of liquor. The raid was carried out with the assistance of Provincial Constable R. F. Davis and Canadian National Constable W. H. Howard. Inspector Stewart had been looking for the shipment since yesterday, he told The Examiner.

Packed in two large cases labelled "casings," the liquor was well protected by old hay. The cases were double sheeted, a second thickness under the outer boards being of tongued and grooved sections.

Some of the bottles bore labels marked "Quebec Liquor Commission," but the shipment was consigned as "casings" and rated in that class, the total freight charges being $4.76. On re-classification after discovery of the nature of the goods, the freight charges were raised to $15.41.

For J. H. Bradley.

The shipment was made from Montreal Bonaventure Station on Thursday, consigned to J. H. Bradley, Peterboro, and billed from the Dominion Stores. It arrived on the "moolight" early this morning from Port Hope and found Inspector Stewart waiting for it. Knowing the number of the car, 11939 G. T., Inspector Stewart had the seals broken and the car entered, and examined the cases immediately. He then made arrangements to ship the wet goods to Toronto, to the Ontario Government Dispensaries. No one applied for the cases, and it is not considered likely that a capture will be effected locally in connection with the shipment.

B. S. ARMSTRONG MADE A SUCCESS

Left Peterboro Twenty-Four Years Ago for a Visit in Cincinnati Where He Stayed.

Friends of Mr. Bolton S. Armstrong, formerly of Peterborough, will be glad to learn of his advancement in the world of business.

The Cincinnati Inquirer, in its artgravure section, in printing the photographs of a page of men prominent in Cincinnati affairs, includes Mr. Armstrong in its list.

Mr. Armstrong as a boy was employed with Mr. Joseph Mills, in his hat and fur store of this city and left her, twenty-four years ago to visit an uncle in Cincinnati, who persuaded him to reside there.

He went into the business of the Mabley and Carew Company, learned it from the ground up, until now he is the president of that company, which is one of the largest departmental stores in that section of the United States.

Mr. Carew, the former president and large holder in the company, has recently died and turned over to Mr. Armstrong a life interest in the business and succeeding Mr. Carew as president.

Mr. Armstrong occasionally visits Peterborough, his old home town, and meets many friends who are greatly pleased to learn of his business success.

Up until late this afternoon only one qualification had been entered in the Mayoralty contest— Mayor W. H. Taylor.

Of the thirteen names in the Board of Education field, four had qualified. They are John J. Craig, E. B. Fowler, H. J. McCannon and W. A. Richardson.

BIG BURGLARY IN NORTH END OF CITY

Loot Valued at $1200 Taken Last Night—Police Are Reticent.

The north end of the city was visited last night by thieves who carried out a $1,200 burglary. They concentrated their efforts on the stealing of valuables.

The oplice are reticent regarding the affairs, but it is learned that the burglars effected an entrance by picking a Yale lock. It is reported that they made a second attempt, but were unsuccessful and fled, leaving a key in the lock.

The police are awaiting developments before making any disclosures.

It is stated that the undue publicity the city has been receiving by reason of the dispute between the city and the police force is responsible for the local increase in crime but those who contemplate any local criminal activity had better remember that the policemen are still serving the city, even though they have not received any pay for several weeks.

SHELTER KIDDIES ARE ENTERTAINED

Santa Claus Had a Busy Time Distributing the Presents.

The Young Women's Christian Association is contributing its share to upholding the Christmas spirit of jollity and fun by its usual round of parties. The whole lower floor of the big building is decked out in holiday garb of evergreens and bright red paper streamers and cheerful holly. Two trees are in evidence; one in the gymnasium and one in the hall. Last evening, the Senior girls of the association came dressed as children, for a pleasant evening of games and sing-songs around the fire, followed by service of coffee and doughnuts. The girls also brought gifts for the children of the Shelter and the Orphanage, who were invited to a party of the Juniors at the Association this morning. This morning, nearly two hundred children gathered for a jolly kiddies' party, at which the children of the Shelter came as guests. Little ones of the Orphanage were unable to be present, but the other children made up a box of toys to be sent to the absent ones. Santa Claus was present this morning and distributed the gifts with oranges and candy and nuts for each child.

On New Year's Day, the usual open house at the "Y" will be observed, when friends of the Association come in during the afternoon, and girls away from home are entertained around the cheery fire in the evening.

It is necessary to go 300 miles up the Nile before reaching remains of temples.

LOCAL MARKET HAD BIG RUSH

Turkeys About as Cheap as Beefsteak -- Eggs Easier Today.

Three sturdy guardians of the law strove to keep some semblance of order at the farmers' market this morning. The basket section had a real jam. It was difficult to make a way through the crowds of men and women and children that swarmed in the big hall and milled around the loaded tables. Fowl was plentiful enough, even at a late hour. Turkeys and geese were most prominent, the former selling anywhere from 30 to 20 cents a pound, the latter from 20 to 25 cents. Ducks and chickens were scarcer, ducks selling generally at 28 cents a pound, chickens at 20 and 23 cents.

Butter varied greatly in price. In a five-pound crock, it could be purchased for 38 cents a pound, but wrapped packets were as high as 55 cents a pound. Eggs were fairly plentiful, both upstairs and down, and sold from 65 cents a dozen for the ordinary size to 55 cents for the little pullets' product.

Cream was a little higher in price this morning, selling at 30 cents a print. A two-pound glass jar of basswood honey was 35 cents, while honey downstairs in pails was 10 and 15 cents a pound.

From the Caughnawaga Reserve near Montreal came the tall, dark vendor of Indian bead work, in tiny, soft moccasins selling at half a dollar a pair, ornamental boxes at $1.50, and little yellow and green, beaded canoes for a quarter.

On the open market the crowd was small. "They want turkeys this morning, instead of onions and cabbages," remarked a cheerful vendor. Potatoes were conspicuous by their absence. Apples were fairly plentiful, Spys selling for 75 cents a peck, Baldwins and Greenings for 50 cents, and Canadian Reds at 40 cents. White and red onions were 75 cents a peck, parsnips 50, carrots 40 and turnips 20 cents.

Pork was 14 and 16 cents a pound, and lamb 20 and 25 cents.

One of London's last farms, near Dulwich Park, is now being razed to the ground to make way for houses.

THE WORD WOman is always associated with the word duty. It always has been and it always will be. Now the question of economical style is uppermost in her mind. TO-DAY'S CHILD LIVES TWELVE YEARS LONGER

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press). — A child born to-day has the prospect of twelve more years of life than had one born 25 years ago, said Sir William Wheeler, president of the Royal College of Surgeons of Ireland, in an address to the students yesterday. Medicine and surgery, he declared, had made greater advances during the last twenty-five years than during the 25 preceding centuries. He admitted that there were still some great problems to be solved, but he said that very probably before the students had reached the zenith of their careers cancer would be under control.

TWENTY-FIVE CONVICTS GET CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY

William La Trasse, train robber, whose escapades have kept him confined in penitentiaries of Middlewest most of the time since 1911, is one of those released for holidays.

BARN BURNS IN EARLY MORNING

Caused by Spontaneous Combustion from Wet Hay Put in Short Time Ago.

This morning at 5.40 a barn on Stewart street north and owned by C. B. Thornton, was partly destroyed by fire. The roof and the upper part of the building being destroyed. The fire started in the hay-mow from spontaneous combustion, caused by the gas from wet hay which was put in the barn about two weeks ago. The burning hay caused a dense smoke which spread throughout the building, suffocating a horse that was on the bottom floor. The fire destroyed a couple of sets of harness, one ton of straw, one horse and a little over a ton of hay. The fire had a good start before it was noticed and when the Fire Department arrived on the scene the building was in flames. They succeeded in saving the lower part of the barn.

"BLACK OXEN"

by GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Published by arrangement with Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Watch for the screen version produced by Frank Lloyd with Corinne Griffith as Countess Zattiany.

(Copyright, 1923, by Gertrude Atherton.)

XXVIII.

He called for Madame Zattiany at ten o'clock. This time she was standing in the hall as the man opened the door, and she came out immediately. A lace scarf almost concealed her face.

"I didn't order the car," she said. "It is such a fine night, and she lives so near. Do you mind?"

"I much prefer to walk, but your slippers——"

"They are dark and the heels not too high."

"I'm not going to make the slightest preliminary attempt at indifference tonight, nor wait for one of your leads. How long do you intend to stay at this party?"

"Oh, an hour, possibly. One must not be rude." Her own tones were not even, but he could not see her face.

"But you'll keep your word and tell me everything tonight?"

She gave a deep sigh. "Yes, I'll keep my word. No more now—please! . . . Tell me, what do they do at these parties besides talk—dance?"

"Not always. They have charades, spelling matches, pick a word out of a hat and make impromptu speeches——"

"But Mon dieu!" She stopped short and pushed back her scarf. Whatever expression she may have wished to conceal there was nothing now in her face but dismay. "But you did not tell me this or I should not have accepted. I never bore myself. I understood there were your intellectuals. Charades! Spelling matches; Words in the hat! It sounds like a small town moved to New York."

"Well, a good many of them are from small towns and they rather pride themselves on preserving some of the simplicities of rural life and juvenescence, while leading an exaggerated mental life for which nature designed no man. Perhaps it is merely owing to an obscure warning to preserve the balance. Or an innocent arrogance akin to Mrs. Oglethorpe's when she is looking her dowdiest. . . . But Gora often has good music .... . . still, if you don't want to go on I'm sure I do not."

"No," she said hurriedly. "I shall go. But—I am still astonished. I do not know what I expected. But brilliant conversation probably, such as one hears in a European salon. Don't they relax their great minds at outdoor sports? I understand there are golf links and tennis courts near the city."

"A good many of them do. But they like to relax still further at night. You see we are not Europeans. Americans are as serious as children, but like children they also love to play. Remember, we are a young nation—and a very healthy one. And you will have conversation if you want it. The men, you may be sure, will be ready to give you anything you demand."

"I had rather hoped to listen. Is this the house?"

Several taxis were arriving and there were many cars parked along the block. When they entered the house they were directed to dressing-rooms on the second floor, and Clavering met Madame Zattiany at the head of the staircase. She wore a gown of emerald green velvet, cut to reveal the sloping line of her shoulders, and an emerald comb thrust sideways in the low coil of her soft ashen hair. On the dazzling fairness of her neck lay a single unset emerald depending from a fine gold chain. Clavering stared at her helplessly. . . . It was evident she had not made her toilette with an eye to softening a blow!

"Am I overdressed?" she murmured. "I did not know. . . . I thought I would dress as if—well, as if I had been invited by one of my own friends——"

"Quite right. To 'dress down' would have been fatal. And Gora must spend a small fortune on her clothes. . . . But you . . . you . . .; . . I have never seen you——"

"I am fond of green," she said lightly. "Couleur d'esperance. Shall we go down?"

He followed her down the stairs and before they reached the crowded room below he had managed to set his face; but his heart was pounding. He gave Gora who came forward to meet them, a ferocious scowl, but she was too much engaged with Madame Zattiany to notice him; and so, for that matter, was the rest of the company. Miss Dwight's gown was of black satin painted with flaming poinsettias, and Clavering saw Madame Zattiany give it a swift approving glance. Around her thin shoulders was a scarf of red tulle that warmed her brown cheeks. She looked remarkably well, almost handsome, and her strange pale eyes were very bright. It was evident that she was enjoying her triumphs; this no doubt was the crowning one and she led Madame Zattiany into the room, leaving Clavering to his own devices.

ITALIAN CARDINALS FAVOR THE SOVIET

German Cardinals Oppose Political Recognition of New Russian Government.

ROME Dec. 22.—(United Press.)—A News Agency states that Cardinal Gasparri is polling the Cardinals as to whether they consider it opportune politically to recognize the Soviet and establish diplomatic relations between the Vatican and the Moscow government.

Cardinal Gasparri and the Italian Cardinals are said to favor the suggestion and the German Cardinals to oppose it. The views of the others are not known.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS TREE FOR CHILDREN'S SHELTER

Mr. R. J. Devey Made the Distribution and Was in Charge of Programme.

The annual Christmas treat for the children of the Shelter proved to be a very jolly time for the youngsters last evening, when the tree in the big playroom was decked with gifts for every child, Mr. D. J. Devey acting as an unconventional Santa Claus and distributing the gifts with much vigor and cheerfulness. Mr. Devey also had charge of the programme, which included several selections by a well trained children's chorus, a piano solo by Miss Linda Blowers, vocal solos by George Houghton and Eric McKinstry; a vocal duet by Phyllis and Bob Coleman; a part by Phyllis and Bob Coleman and Dorothy Patterson, and an impromptu dialogue, capitally given by several of the Shelter children, Nellie Londsberry, Jennie Edwards and Sydney Turner. The president of the society, B. F. Ackerman, acted as chairman. Most of the members of the Board of Directors were present for the occasion.

Donations for the Christmas treat were received as follows: The Cressman Co., writing paper, books; Miss V. Fusee, King Edward School, dolls, mouth organ; Mrs. McCloud, nuts, from Grant Breckenridge, Melville Robinson, Clifford Cad and Harold Wright, nuts, candy, oranges; Mrs. S. T. Medd, candy canes; Messrs. H. Bickell and R. Sneigrove, eighteen tehatre tickets; Mrs. H. E. Stenson, cake; Mrs. Adam Hall, cake; A. J. Madill, cake; Mrs. R. M. Waddell, hockey sticks, table and chairs, wagon and croquet board; Mr. Moscrop, oranges; the Misses Dickson, flannelette and gingham; Mrs. Nicholls, a quilt; Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, chicken; McCarthy and Johnston, barrel of apples; Master Askinson, 1 dozen nut bars. Brown, candy, nuts, oranges, apples, stockings; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kidd, nuts; Dr. Greer, mixed fruit basket; Mrs. H. C. Winch, oranges, apples, mince meat, figs, nuts, candy, cranberries; John Edgar, handkerchiefs.

POLITICAL ACTIVITIES QUIET AT CHRISTMAS

LONDON, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press Cable.)— In view of the near approach of Christmas there is complete cessation of political activity in the United Kingdom.

Meanwhile, as a result of the general election, the committee which was appointed by Premier Baldwin to advise the government in connection with preparation of proposed duties from manufactured goods, of which committee Lord Milner is the chairman, has decided to dissolve. A memorandum of the work done by the committee during eleven meetings it has held, is being handed to the Premier.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

PLUM PUDDING

Plum pudding seems almost as much a part of Christmas as candy. And while we are usually so surfeited with good things before we get to the plum pudding stage a bit of rich "mummy" pudding is needed to make the dinner perfect.

Formerly a most intriguing deliciousness was given to the pudding by pouring brandy over the mold and sending it to the table in fascinating blue flames. Now we must fill the pudding so "chuck full" of richness that this flavor is not missed.

A rich pudding can be steamed and kept almost indefinitely. This makes another delightful Christmas gift from out of the kitchen. Steam the puddings intended for gifts in small bowls, unmold and drop them in sparkling paper and tie with red ribbon bows threaded with holly.

All fruit should be cleaned, seeded or shredded before beginning to mix the pudding.

The true English plum pudding is boiled in a floured pudding bag. However, we prefer to steam our puddings in attractive molds suitable to send to the table garnished with holly or in tiny individual molds.

The pudding may be as rich as desired. The first rule is for a very rich pudding that can be kept indefinitely.

Plum Pudding

Two cups cleaned currants, 2 cups seeded raisins, 1 cup candied orange peel (shredded), 1 cup shredded citron, 1 cup suet (½ pound), 3 cups stale bread crumbs, 4 eggs, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup brown sugar, 4 tablespoons molasses, ½ cup flour, 2 tablespoons currant jelly, 1 tablespoon strong cold coffee.

Chop fruit and suet with flour. Add bread crumbs and mix well. Beat yolks of eggs until thick and lemon-colored and add to first mixture. Add spices, salt, sugar, molasses, jelly and coffee and mix well. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a large buttered melon mold or buttered bowls, cover with a floured cloth fastened securely and steam two and one-half hours. Steam again when wanted to use the same length of time. Serves 12 persons.

Pudding Sauce

Two eggs (yolks), 1 cup powdered sugar, 1 cup whipping cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Beat yolks of eggs with sugar until very light. Whip cream and add to egg mixture. Beat well and add vanilla.

Plain Plum Pudding

(Without Eggs)

One cup suet, 1 cup chopped and seeded raisins, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 cup molasses, 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 teaspoons cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon grated nutmeg, ½ teaspoon cloves.

More fruit can be added if desired and one cup of chopped and blanched almonds.

Mix fruit and suet chopped fine with molasses. Add soda and stir until foamy. Add milk and flour mixed and sifted with salt, spices and cream of tartar. Mix thoroughly and turn into a well-buttered mold. Steam four hours.

This recipe is calculated to serve eight persons.

Lemon Sauce

Two eggs, 1 cup powdered sugar, 4 tablespoons cream, 2 lemons.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dr. Slowly beat in sugar. Heat cream to the scalding point and beat into first mixture. Add juice of lemons and grated rind of one. Beat slightly and serve.

Hard sauce flavored with the grated rind and juice of a lemon is always good with a steamed pudding.

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

The honest promoter is necessary. He should not be confused with the get-rich-quick promoter who usually tries to fleece the investor.

Practically every new company must go through a development stage before it can be recognized as successful. During that time, its success is, of course, speculative.

Some one must guide the course of the company through the speculative period, and this is the work of the honest promoter. He and the investors who back him with their money must assume the risk of this development.

If the business is successful, of course, the promoters' make a good profit, which is only right since they risked their time and money on the outcome.

On the other hand, the get-rich-quick promoter has no interest in making a success of the company; all he wants is money.

Care should be taken to distinguish between the two types of promoters.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

A RIDDLE THAT'S EASY TO SEE THROUGH

"When I've a smudge upon my nose, you tell me!"

The Riddle Lady must have sat up late writing, for the riddle she asked next day in Riddle Town was a long one. "Now think hard everybody," she said. "I'm pretending I'm a little girl talking to the thing you are to guess.

"When I've a smudge upon my nose,
You tell me!
When I've got mud upon my toes,
You tell me!
If I have torn my petti-skirt,
Or dragged my muffler in the dirt,
No matter if my feeling's hurt,
You tell me!

"If I have grown an inch or two,
You tell me!
If there are freckles breaking through
You tell me!
And if I make a snoot at you,
As quick as scat you make one too;
It doesn't matter what I do—
You tell me!

"If I've been very bad in school,
You tell me!
Whene'er I break the smallest rule,
You tell me!
I'm sure I can't guess how you know,
Because to school you never go.
I s'pose my tell-tale eyes must show!
Now tell me!

"If I am lazy and won't work,
You tell me!
If I've a duty that I shirk,
You tell me!
You never say a word, it's true,
But every time I look at you,
You look at me as though you knew,
And tell me!

"And when in school I've done my best,
You tell me!
If I am ahead of all the rest,
You tell me!
And when from school I gaily race,
And stand before your shining face,
Down in the hall (for that's your place)
You tell me!

"Sometimes I do get cross at you,
For tell me,
Why do you mimic all I do?
Do tell me!
If I just give the tiniest wink,
Right back at me you promptly blink,
Why, if I even dare to think,
You tell me!

"Now, then!" said the Riddle Lady. "What is it?"

Nobody answered.

"I'll help you out!" said the Riddle Lady. "A wicked queen owned one once and asked it who was fairest of the fair. It was the only one that I ever heard of that could talk, for it answered her!"

"A looking glass!" cried Nancy.

"Right, my dear!" said the Riddle Lady. "And there is a dear little mirror for you to keep in your pocket."

PREPARATIONS FOR THE PAS DOG RACE

THE PAS, Man., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Dogs that look like cup winners are being transported to The Pas daily from hundreds of miles distance, and owners and drivers have begun active preparation for the annual dog derby to be held on March 11 next, for the newly-donated Matte Cup and prize money amounting to $2,500.

It is expected that fourteen teams will start in the 1924 race, and wiseacres are already speculating on the probable winner of the 200-mile grind. A great many substantial bets have been made that A. ("Shorty") Russick, who finished second last March, and who later won the race at Banff, Alberta, will finish ahead of the field, while odds on Charles B. Morgan's old team have also been wagered.

Morgan's team, which won the race three years in succession, commencing in 1921, will be driven by Bert Hayes. Morgan won the Burns Cup outright, and is now after a leg on the new trophy.

YANKS IGNORE ONTARIO HOCKEY AUTHORITIES

Tell O. H. A. That Slightest Interference in United States Hockey Will Not Be Tolerated.

"COURTEOUS" REPLY.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., December 22 (Canadian Press). — Migration of hockey players from Canada to the United States, officially "disapproved" by the Ontario Hockey Association, last night brought the statement from W. S. Haddock the president of the United States Amateur Hockey Association, that "we will under no circumstances allow the slightest interference in American hockey matters."

Pressure has been brought to bear upon the United States Association to "absolutely ignore the Canadian hockey authorities," President Haddock declared, adding that "if they are not satisfied with the manner in which hockey is conducted in the United States, unpleasant as it would be to us, we would simply have to let them go their way and we would go ours."

No notification of the proposed conference between the United States and Canadian hockey officials at Niagara Falls, Ont., on 3rd January, suggested by the Ontario League, has been received, Haddock said, but when the invitation is forthcoming, "we will decide whether we shall attend."

Commenting on the order of the Ontario Association forbidding its clubs from taking part in exhibition games with teams of the United States Association, Haddock stated that "we have been importuned frequently to bar Canadian teams from coming into the United States for exhibition purposes because of the fact that they frequently make contracts with our teams and then send a patched-up aggregation."

The question of migration, he declared, also affected teams in the United States. "Discipline might start with some of their clubs which take players from United States teams; for instance, Milks and Darragh, of Pittsburgh," President Haddock concluded.

The Nut Cracker
by Joe Williams

A baseball reform is somewhat like a silk stocking ad....It looks all right but it doesn't mean anything.

Because they didn't get enough publicity the minor league magnates aren't going to meet in a big league town any more. ....This at least explains why baseball conferences are held.

The minors have accepted the modified draft ....Under the modified draft the minors name their own price for players, and take what they get.

The big-hearted major league magnates are always eager to do something for the little fellows.... and most of the time they do 'em for plenty.

All of Judge Landis' reform measures have been adopted, but the gent who used to pay two bits for a bleacher seat will be asked to keep right on paying 75 cents to see the athletes perform.

Rogers Hornsby is selling Christmas trees.....This may explain the report that he has the St. Louis club owners up a tree.

"I have nothing against Landis," asserts Ban Johnson....But the suspicion exists he'd like to have a couple of stone mallets against him.

Despite the fact that the leagues again went on record as opposing freak pitching, Ty Cobb will probably use Collins and Francis as often as ever next year.

Somebody broke into a Chicago store window and stole three dummies ....It was probably one of Clark Griffith's agents looking for a new manager.

"The principle of the bonus system in baseball is all wrong," declares President Heydler ....Not to mention the frightful way it cuts into the magnates' bank roll.

Mr. Huggins charges he was insulted by the owner of the Philadelphia Nationals ....Probably called him a master mind.

It is said that Judge Landis offered to tear up his contract and resign if the magnates didn't like his administration ..Even the Judge must have his little joke.

HASTINGS LEFT OUT OF LEAGUE

President Whitty, Stirling, Gives Explanation to Hastings Manager.

Manager Clapper received word on Thursday from President W. J. Whitty, of Stirling, that Hastings had been dropped from the Trent Valley League.

Pres. Whitty informed Mr. Clapper that the reason for same was that at the annual meeting the delegates from Norwood said Hastings was not entering a team, which was not correct.

This leaves in the Trent Valley League Marmora, Madoc, Tweed, Stirling, Havelock and Norwood.

With Hastings out of this league it looks as if a league comprising the following towns would make some good hockey: Campbellford, Warkworth, Keene and Hastings.

M'GRAW DENIES HORNSBY DEAL

Says He Has No Important Deals in View — Home From Trip to Europe.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—John J. McGraw, veteran manager of the New York Giants, celebrated his return aboard the Leviathan yesterday from a several weeks' tour of Europe, by settling a number of questions that have been moot topics of winter baseball discussion during his absence.

Taking advantage of the delay caused by the grounding of the big liner down the bay, McGraw, in an interview, denied that a deal was pending whereby the Giants would obtain Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis star, and declared he had no important trades in view, but disclosed that he had practically completed negotiations for a tour of Europe by the Giants and White Sox at the close of the 1924 season.

McGraw declared the Giants had offered $300,000 for Hornsby in 1920.

OLYMPIC COMMITTEE STUDY SCORING PLAN

Would Give More Points to Winners of Events—Not Yet Approved.

PARIS, December 22 (Canadian Press). — The committee handling the Olympic sports is studying a plan of point scoring which, if finally adopted, will prove a radical departure from the system used at all the Games since the modern revival.

It would give 10 points to the winner, and 5, 4, 3, 2 and 1 respectively to the next in order.

It is understood that a majority of the committee favour the plan which, although not yet officially announced, is causing some adverse criticism as being too liberal to the winners and contrary to the spirit of the previous scoring method. This method gave 6 points to the winner, the others in order receiving 5, 4, 3, 2 and 1, and has had the result, its supporters claim, of bringing to the fore the best balanced teams.

PROPOSE TO MATCH SPALLO AND FIRPO

Argentine Is Willing If Italian Can Go to Buenos Aires in February.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 21.—Luis Firpo, the South American heavyweight championship, announced to-day that he had been approached by a local promoter who proposed to match him with the Italian heavyweight champion, Erminio Spalla, for a bout in Buenos Aires. Firpo expressed the opinion however that unless Spalla was able to come here early in February there was little chance of the match materializing.

Firpo said negotiations were still continuing in an effort to bring a boxer here from the United States for a bout prior to his departure for the United States early in March, the proceeds of the match to go to charity.

New York Athletic Commission Also Adopts New Rules For Ringside.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The New York State Athletic Commission's warfare upon gambling took definite form to-day when the ring solons adopted a new rule providing that persons caught betting or recognized as professional gamblers be barred from all boxing matches in this State.

At the same time, the Commission adopted three other rules designed to minimize the opportunity for criticism of fight decisions which has been particularly apparent since the verdict by which Johnny Dundee regained the junior lightweight title from Jack Bernstein. Ringside in that contest aws almost unanimous in favor of Bernstein.

The new rules in this connection provide that no person be allowed to sit at the ringside on the side where the judges are seated except the timekeeper, who must be at least six feet away, that no one may remain standing during the progress of a match at any club, and that no one except managers and seconds may enter the dressing rooms.

MAYOR TAYLOR PRESENTS CUP TO CHAMPIONS

Belmonts, Champions of the City Softball League, Honored at Banquet in Empress — Many Speakers and Good Programme

FUTURE OF GAME.

Last evening in the Empress Hotel the Soft Ball League gave the Belmonts, the city champions, and two representatives from each of the other nineteen clubs a banquet at which C. S. McLean occupied the chair.

The banquet was opened by the singing of "O Canada."

Rev. W. Harold Young sang "Let the rest of the world go by," and A. Kay, E. Lebarr, J. McMartin, A. Frick and Bob Mackey, the umpires for the season, sang "Smile Boys Smile."

Mr. McLean in a short address stated that soft ball in the city in the last year had been progressing steadily and a very successful season had just ended.

He pointed out the great improvement the L.O.L. 50 had made during the past season; last spring they were one of the tail enders when the league ended and this fall they were one of the fastest teams in the league being nosed out of the play off by the Belmonts the city champions. He said it was a game in which both old and young could participate and he hoped that they would be able to carry on as successfully in the spring as this fall.

Mayor W. H. Taylor said he had attended many banquets this year but this was one of the banquets that he enjoyed the most. This game works in between base ball and hockey and does not interfere in any way with any other sport, and at the same time it helps to keep the boys in shape for other sports. He congratulated the Belmonts on winning the championship for the second time in succession and wished them good luck next season. His Worship presented the beautiful cup to the Belmont club.

Frank Jobbitt, captain of the Belmont team, in his reply thanked the league for the banquet and congratulated Mr. McLean on behalf of the Belmont club on the good work he had done during the year.

Could Give Pointers

The past president of the league J. E. Sullivan congratulated the Belmont club and said that a good many of the other teams could take a few pointers from this team. He said their play was clean throughout the year and that they will have harder and faster teams to meet next year. He congratulated Mr. McLean, president of the league, on the successful season he had had, also T. Holyman, secretary, and the executive. He said he hoped that the Garrison League which has just started would not interfere with the city league in the spring. Mr. Sullivan referred to rumors that are current questioning the bona fides of some players on the Gunners team. In the interests of true sport only bona fide players should take part in league games, he said.

N. Staples sang "A Vagabond," which was enjoyed very much by all.

Mr. McLean presented the Belmonts, winners of the club section and City champions with a beautiful shield. He also presented the De Laval, the Mercantile winners with a shield.

C. Stuart replied on behalf of the Belmont Club and A. Frick replied for the De Laval team.

Divide Teams

Rev. Mr. Young proposed that in the spring the teams be divided up so that one team would not have all the good players and another team be without any and in this way have faster and closer games. He hoped that next spring the soft ball league would have the most successful season yet.

Mr. McLean wished the Garrison league good luck and said he hoped that the two leagues would not interfere with each other. He then presented the president of the Garrison League Major Winterbottom with a cheque for $50 and expressed the hope that it would help to finance this league and make it a success.

Major Winterbottom in his reply mentioned some of the hardships they had had in trying to carry on this garrison work since the Armistice was signed. He said that the officers and non-commissioned officers were all returned men and they had to handle the boys with kid gloves to obtain any success in their drills and this is partly why the Garrison League was formed to try to hold these boys together and to try to obtain new recruits. Several years ago soft ball was tried by the officers of the Garrison but it was a failure. In the garrison league this fall there have been no quarrels of any kind, which speaks well for the recruits who are trying to learn this game thoroughly. "My opinion of any good sport is, either be good winner and a good loser or let some body else take your place. We will try and not interfere in any way with the City League in the spring. He said that he hoped in the spring the fans and the city league players will give the garrison league a boost and try and help them along.

Mr. McLean congratulated Mr. Kay and his staff of umpires on the splendid work they had done during the year, and presented them each with a token.

Mr. Kay stated that after to-morrow nights benefit game between the De Laval and the Lindsay post team he will have umpired his three hundredth game this year and he intends to retire from the umpiring staff next year. This season there were several bad mix-ups in the games and I have heard several times managers on the bench tell players to "get' such a player. If any of this ruffianism is used in the spring these players will be put out of the league. I expect to play in the games myself next spring if everything turns out all right.

Mr. Lebarr said that his idea of a ball team was the De Laval team which was a bunch of fighters who never gave up until the last man was out. He congratulated the Belmonts and also the De Laval on the good showing they made in the past season.

Mr. Sullivan said that without Kay, Leabrr and the rest of the umpires the league would be practically a failure and he hoped that by next spring Kay would change his mind and would be seen on the umpiring staff once more. It was hoped by the speaker that the Garrison league would co-operate with the city league next spring and have a great success. Mr. McLean hoped that when a meeting was called in the spring they will be able to better the organization.

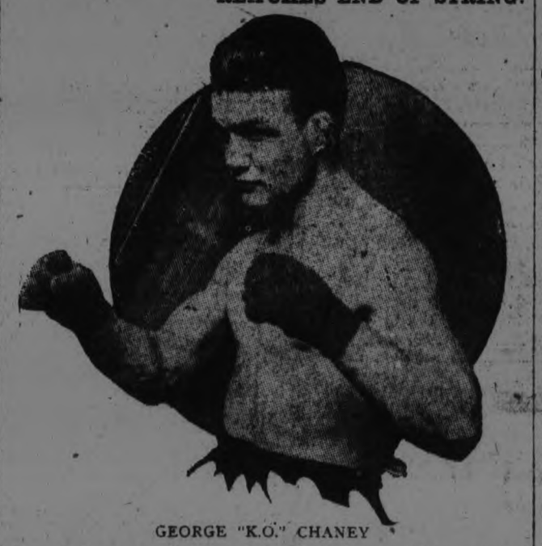
GREATEST OF K. O. LADS REACHES END OF STRING.



GEORGE "K.O." CHANEY

One of the greatest little punchers of all time, George "K.O." Chaney of Baltimore, has finally reached the end of his string.

The other night Chaney went against Ted Merchant, visiting English lightweight, and was badly beaten. To save himself from a knockout Chaney struck the Britisher low in the third round and was declared loser on a foul. At the time Chaney was in a bad way and had the bout progressed, would probably have been put to sleep.

Chaney, a southpaw, first attracted attention at a featherweight, piling up an amazing run of knockouts. He was matched with Johnny Kilbane, then champion, and knocked out in three rounds.

Chaney later came back as a lightweight and proceeded to run up another astonishing string of knockouts. In later years Chaney scored most of his knockouts with his right hand, although he was essentially a left-handed fighter. Chaney found that most of his adversaries paid little attention to his right but were always set to block his left. It was then that he changed to slugging with his right and became more effective than ever.

Chaney has been going backward of late and his inability to stand up in front of Merchant's attack indicates that he is about ready to pass into the shadows along with Willie Jackson, Charley White, Rocky Kansas and other star lightweights who have slipped into semi-obscurity.

TWENTY-TWO GAMES IN OLYMPIC HOCKEY

Canada and Sweden Are Favorites in Their Group —United States in Other.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The schedule for the Olympic hockey games at Chamonix next months calls for twenty-two matches among the nine nations entered. The teams are divided into two sections in one of which are Canada, Sweden, Switzerland and Czecho-Slovakia while the other comprises the United States, Belgium, France, Austria and Great Britain. All the teams in the first section will meet one another once and the leading two teams will meet the two teams finishing first in the second section draw of ten games.

The experts favor Canada and Sweden for qualification in the first section and United States and France in the second of the fore cast is correct it will mean that Canada will meet either the United States or France in the semi-final, since the qualifying teams in either section will not meet before the playoff.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"Sherlock Holmes" in Tremendous Super-Picture, "The Sign of the Four," By Sir Conan Doyle, at the Royal Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

This film production is one of the most popular successful motion pictures that was ever exhibited on the other side. Everywhere in England, "The Sign of the Four" played to extended runs and repeat bookings and was met in all cases by a wave of popular enthusiasm and approval.

The picture is a big super-production which takes the spectator from the magic land of India to the streets of London and plunges him into a mystery and adventure story which is colorful, compelling and fascinating. The famous characters of the members of "The Sign of the Four," as so vividly pictured in the book, are made to live by the stellar actors who make up the cast, and "Sherlock Holmes," Watson and the girls in the case, are interpreted by no less brilliant performers.

Let the reader take a glimpse into the opening setting of the production:

A pearl, grey autumn afternoon in Baker Street, London, and Sherlock Holmes, the greatest detective the world has ever known, was filling the room with sweet music. At least the strains of Chopin's "Berceuse" should have been sweet, but "my dear Watson" had a poor opinion of Holmes as a violinist and, wearied with the eternal scraping, dropped a book noisily upon the floor. Just then Mrs. Hudson announced "His Highness the Prince."

"Mr. Sherlock Holmes," said the Prince, "I am anxious to trace a certain young English lady. Are you clever enough to find her for me? I offer one thousand pounds to find for me this lady."

A shake of the head from the detective and the visitor doubled the offer. Again Holmes shook his head and the Prince enquired why he refused.

"Why? Because you have lied to me! You, sir, are no Russian. You are a Hindu, and that headgear hides your caste mark."

Hatred glaring from his eyes, the visitor turned to go. Then he paused and made another appeal. "Mr. Holmes, your parden, I was foolish. My name is Abdullah Khan. Reconsider your decision and I will pay you well."

"I am not interested in money," Holmes replied. Then, more sternly, "but in the detective of crime—and criminals."

The action of the picture includes colorful scenes in the magic land of India and amazing adventures in mysterious domiciles, and startling disappearances through secret trapdoors, and the remarkable chase of two motor cars right through the heart of London, right through the main thoroughfares of Piccadilly Circus, along Trafalgar Square, through every maze of traffic, culminating in an even more thrilling chase in motor boats through the port of London.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The genial Walter Hiers appears at the Capitol again to-day in a two day showing of "Mr. Billings spends his Dime," a comedy that gives its audiences a good laugh, from start to finish. The fat hero is romantic minded haberdasher's clerk who loses his job through tardiness caused by his uoon-hour adoration of a lovely 'movie' lady, appearing in a sensational film. The lady's face is reproduced on a band surrounding the cigar, "Flor de Suzanna," and Mr. Billings spends his last remaining dime to purchase a cigar-band portrait of his lady-love. It is this cigar that causes all the trouble, for it contains a secret message from the intriguing general of the little republic of Sans Souci. This gentle man wishes to depose the president and gain the office for himself, and his group of conspirators include a gentleman who is aide to the president, but proves a traitor to his cause This stiff aide loves the president's niece, the lovely Suzanna, played by Jacqueline Logan. When the chubby Mr. Billings becames involved with the mysterious cigar band, and is taken into the confidence of the conspirators and made a secret agent of the villains, he is presented with the sum of five thousand dollars, which takes him to Sans Souci and into the company of his inamorata. His further adventures with Mardi Gras processions, bombs, and plots, make a laughable series. Joef Swickard plays the part of Rene Prevost the president of the republic, and Robert McKim is the villain, in the role of Captain Gaston, Tony the president's private detective, is well played by Clarence Burton.

The comedy that precedes the feature picture is a hilarious affair, illustrating the difficulties of a gentle man who essays to transport five small and lively children from New York to San Francisco, via a Pullman car. There are some new and interesting stunts devised by the youngsters to add to the pleasure of existence of the aforesaid guardian.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(United Press.)—Quiet trading continued to characterize the general list on the stock exchange at the week end, the volume of dealing falling under the shrinking influence of the pre-holiday distraction. Although speculative enthusiasm was at a low ebb, the market displayed a consistently strong tone and the spurts of activity which developed were almost invariably on the side of rising prices, with Consolidated Gas favored among the Public Utilities and General Asphalt in the Oil group. Stocks developed more signs of life in the final dealings under the stimulus of a burst of strength in the Motor shares under the leadership of Studebaker and Chandler. This class of stocks is being accelerated on the theory that a bullish demonstration will be staged before the auto show in January. Continental Can was another strong stock in the industrial list, being bid up to a new high on the movement at 55. The weekly trade reviews reported holiday business of unprecedented proportions, calling attention to the great prosperity of the whole country. Stocks directly benefitting from the enormous volume of Christmas buying naturally headed the opening demonstration in the stock market, which was based on the optimistic character of these surveys. National Department Stores was active at the best levels of the year at 42 1-2, while good sized gains over the previous close took place in most of the industrial leaders. No great activity developed during the first hour but the general list displayed a strong tone, bullish demonstrations taking place in various groups. One of these was the Oils, stimulated by price adavnces in three grades of eastern crude. Stocks fluctuated without definite trend at the start of the second hour. Many traders had already departed for the Christmas holiday and it proved hard to stir up interest in special movements. With the general list quiet, trading in industrial specialties fell away almost to the vanishing point, American Ice scored a fractional advance to 86 3-4.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS TREE AT THE PROTESTANT HOME.

Rev. W. H. Young Related An Interesting Christmas Story to the Old Folks.

The annual Christmas tree and entertainment for the residents of the Old People's Home took place yesterday afternoon. The old people passed a pleasant afternoon, receiving the gifts with which the tree was loaded. The tree itself was one of the prettiest ever seen in the Home, and the Christmas spirit was carried out in the decorations and general atmosphere of good-will. Rev. W. H. Young told the audience a very interesting Christmas story, and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Park, accompanied by Mrs. W. H. Young, gave several enjoyable vocal solos and duets. Many of the board of directors were present.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"Sherlock Holmes" in Tremendous Super-Picture, "The Sign of the Four," By Sir Conan Doyle, at the Royal Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

This film production is one of the most popular successful motion pictures that was ever exhibited on the other side. Everywhere in England, "The Sign of the Four" played to extended runs and repeat bookings and was met in all cases by a wave of popular enthusiasm and approval.

The picture is a big super-production which takes the spectator from the magic land of India to the streets of London and plunges him into a mystery and adventure story which is colorful, compelling and fascinating. The famous characters of the members of "The Sign of the Four," as so vividly pictured in the book, are made to live by the stellar actors who make up the cast, and "Sherlock Holmes," Watson and the girls in the case, are interpreted by no less brilliant performers.

Let the reader take a glimpse into the opening setting of the production:

A pearl, grey autumn afternoon in Baker Street, London, and Sherlock Holmes, the greatest detective the world has ever known, was filling the room with sweet music. At least the strains of Chopin's "Berceuse" should have been sweet, but "my dear Watson" had a poor opinion of Holmes as a violinist and, wearied with the eternal scraping, dropped a book noisily upon the floor. Just then Mrs. Hudson announced "His Highness the Prince."

"Mr. Sherlock Holmes," said the Prince, "I am anxious to trace a certain young English lady. Are you clever enough to find her for me? I offer one thousand pounds to find for me this lady."

A shake of the head from the detective and the visitor doubled the offer. Again Holmes shook his head and the Prince enquired why he refused.

"Why? Because you have lied to me! You, sir, are no Russian. You are a Hindu, and that headgear hides your caste mark."

Hatred glaring from his eyes, the visitor turned to go. Then he paused and made another appeal. "Mr. Holmes, your parden, I was foolish. My name is Abdullah Khan. Reconsider your decision and I will pay you well."

"I am not interested in money," Holmes replied. Then, more sternly, "but in the detective of crime—and criminals."

The action of the picture includes colorful scenes in the magic land of India and amazing adventures in mysterious domiciles, and startling disappearances through secret trapdoors, and the remarkable chase of two motor cars right through the heart of London, right through the main thoroughfares of Piccadilly Circus, along Trafalgar Square, through every maze of traffic, culminating in an even more thrilling chase in motor boats through the port of London.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The genial Walter Hiers appears at the Capitol again to-day in a two day showing of "Mr. Billings spends his Dime," a comedy that gives its audiences a good laugh, from start to finish. The fat hero is romantic minded haberdasher's clerk who loses his job through tardiness caused by his uoon-hour adoration of a lovely 'movie' lady, appearing in a sensational film. The lady's face is reproduced on a band surrounding the cigar, "Flor de Suzanna," and Mr. Billings spends his last remaining dime to purchase a cigar-band portrait of his lady-love. It is this cigar that causes all the trouble, for it contains a secret message from the intriguing general of the little republic of Sans Souci. This gentle man wishes to depose the president and gain the office for himself, and his group of conspirators include a gentleman who is aide to the president, but proves a traitor to his cause This stiff aide loves the president's niece, the lovely Suzanna, played by Jacqueline Logan. When the chubby Mr. Billings becames involved with the mysterious cigar band, and is taken into the confidence of the conspirators and made a secret agent of the villains, he is presented with the sum of five thousand dollars, which takes him to Sans Souci and into the company of his inamorata. His further adventures with Mardi Gras processions, bombs, and plots, make a laughable series. Joel Swickard plays the part of Rene Prevost the president of the republic, and Robert McKim is the villain, in the role of Captain Gaston. Tony the president's private detective, is well played by Clarence Burton.

The comedy that precedes the feature picture is a hilarious affair, illustrating the difficulties of a gentle man who essays to transport five small and lively children from New York to San Francisco, via a Pullman car. There are some new and interesting stunts devised by the youngsters to add to the pleasure of existence of the aforesaid guardian.

SOCIAL AND CHRISTMAS TREE.

The class of Miss H. Spenceley, from George Street Methodist Sunday School, spent a very enjoyable evening at her home on Friday, 21st December. Miss A .Simmonds played the accompaniments for singing and helped with refreshments. They received many presents from the prettily decorated tree, and their teacher was presented with a pretty box of correspondence cards and a bottle of perfume from her class. Mr. William Spenceley acted as Santa Claus, which the children enjoyed very much.

SOCIETIES HAD SOCIAL EVENING AND GAMES.

A very enjoyable time was spent in the Sons of England Hall last evening, when the members of the Sons of England were hosts to the Sons of Scotland, for a social evening spent in games, followed by refreshments.

Four games of carpet bowls were played, the Scotsmen coming out three shots ahead, the final score standing: Sons of Scotland 42, Sons of England 39. The Englishmen won, however, in the games of billiards, getting three games to the Scotsmen's one. Some of the members played cards, no score of which was kept.

Music followed the games, when community singing was heartily entered into, with Alex. Clark at the piano. Messrs. Clark and Stazicker supplied vocal numbers also, and Mr. Joseph Grierson gave a humorous Scottish reading.

On behalf of the Sons of Scotland, the president, J. Grierson, tendered the thanks of the society to their hosts for the pleasant evening, intimating the desire of the Scotsmen to have a return visit from the Englishmen early in the New Year.

B. G. Lemmon, in replying for the Sons of England, said that the same social spirit which prevails in the Old Land should be carried on in the new country.

The evening concluded with the singing, with clasped hands, of "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem.

In the morning his subject will be "The Joy of Christmas," and in the evening "The Finality of Jesus," while for the Junior congregation, which is a special feature at St. James' church, and to which all boys and girls of the ages five to twelve years are invited, there will be told the beautiful Christmas story of "The Birthday Song of Korthan, the Minstrel."

MARKSON RELEASED.

Bernard Markson, charged early this year with publishing false news likely to injure the city of Peterboro, and sentenced in the fall to two months' imprisonment, was released about three weeks ago and is now reported to be in Toronto.

Markson appeared for preliminary trial in March before Magistrate O. A. Langley and was released on bail to appear at the fall assizes. On October 23 he was indicted by a grand jury and stood trial by jury which returned a verdict of guilty. Mr. Justice Kelly sentenced him to two and a half months' imprisonment, but deducted the two weeks which Markson had already spent in jail awaiting trial.

It had been understood that the Ottawa authorities had arranged deportation for Markson, but this has not materialized, and Markson was released.

IN MEMOD'AM.

McCLURE. — In loving memory of my dear little sister, who departed this life December 21, 1921:

We little thought when she left home,
She would return no more;
That she so soon in death would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
We did not know what pain she bore,
We did not see her die,
We only know she passed away
And never said Good-bye.
Never absent from our minds,
Light from our household gone,
A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our hearts
That never can be filled.
We loved her, oh, no tongue can tell
How dear we loved her and oh, how well,
God loved her too, and thought it best;
To take her home with Him to rest.
Greatly missed by family.

Madman in Maine Murders Five in Two Families Then Shoots Himself

ONLY BABE IN CRADLE ESCAPED BLOOD LUST OF INFURIATED POLE

Denied Use of Motor He Slew Sheriff's Wife and Son — Speeded to Own Home and Killed Wife, Her Mother and Aunt.

WAS ON PROBATION.

COOPER'S MILLS, Maine, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Christmas happiness has been superseded by tragic sorrow in this little community where today six persons lay dead as the result of the savage lust for murder of a madman on Saturday.

In one little cottage lay the bodies of John Snow, who, according to county authorities, murdered his wife, Mrs. Ida Snow, her aunt, Mrs. Eva Eaton, and her mother, Mrs. Ruth Brann, and then turned his revolver with fatal effect on himself.

In the little homes of Deputy Sheriff Frank Jewett in North Whitefield, ten miles away, lay the bodies of Mrs. Jewett and her fifteen year old son Kenneth, killed, it was alleged, by Snow before he wreaked havoc in the Cooper's Mills home.

Was Refused Auto.

As the county authorities pieced together the tragedy, Snow, a Polish national, who could neither read nor write, killed Kenneth Jewett because he refused to permit him to take the Sheriff's automobile, and killed the mother because she appeared on the scene in time to witness the killing of her son. Taking the automobile, the madman speeded to Coopers' Mills, where he shot his wife and the mother and the aunt of his wife. The five months' old son of the Snows was asleep in the house, and escaped injury when Snow shot the three women to death and then shot himself.

Snow had been in the United States about two years and his wife was born and lived all her life in Maine. The man was employed in lumber camps in this section and was of powerful build. He was recently employed by Deputy Sheriff Jewett, who was his probation officer under a court order placing him under bonds to keep the peace as a result of threats he had made to harm his wife.

No Witnesses Alive.

There are no living witnesses of either shooting affray, only the mute evidence that Snow went to his wife and asked that she again come to live with him and that when she refused he shot her dead.

It is thought the other two women upheld Mrs. Snow in her decision and that he then wreaked his vengeance upon them. The report of the medical examiner showed that each of the victims at Cooper's Mills died after a single shot, but that the murderer fired eleven shots into the bodies of the Jewetts.

The murders at Coopers' Mills were discovered by Mrs. Eaton's seven year old son, who had been playing in the yard. Terrified at the sight of the three women lying dead and Snow dying, the boy ran to the home of a neighbor. Others living nearby were notified and their first thought was to send for Deputy Sheriff Jewett. A messenger was dispatched to Whitefield. When he reached the Deputy's home there was no response to his ring at the doorbell and he entered the house. There he found Mrs. Jewett and her son dead on the floor.

Shot Through Head.

Investigation showed that all the victims had been shot in the head at close range. The body of Mrs. Jewett was found under a bed. At first it was thought that he had been killed there when attempting to hide after witnessing the murder of her son, but later it was believed that the murderer had shot her when in the pantry and then had hidden the body.

At the Brann place, the position of the body of Mrs. Brann indicated that the 80 year old woman was shot down as she attempted to escape through a window.

CANADA'S DOPE IMPORTS DROP

Figures Cover Only the Supply Received Through Regular Channels For the Year.

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press)—A decrease in the quantity of narcotic drugs which reached Canada through legitimate channels during the 12 months which ended with November in comparison with the preceding corresponding period is shown in a report made public by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

During the period under review, 1,782 ounces of cocaine was imported as against 3,516 ounces for the same time in 1922. Morphine also shows a decline, 9,239 ounces reaching Canada in 1923 as compared with 10,609 in the previous twelve months. The quantity of crude opium imported during the period dealt with by the report was 1,100 ounces as compared with 1,153 ounces for the twelve months ending with November 1922.

BUYS PARIS HOTEL FOR C.N.R. OFFICES

Alternative Was Lease of Twenty Years — Rent Conditions Unacceptable

PARIS, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—Regarding assertions made recently in Canada that a hitch had occurred in the negotations for the acquisition by the Canadian National Railways of the Hotel Scribe here for office accommodation, the Canadian Press learns that there is no dissatisfaction whatever on the part of the railway officials in Paris. The situation resolved itself into a question of leasing accommodation for 20 years or buying. The railway company was unable to rent space at the time under acceptable conditions and consequently decided to buy.

For the convenience of the management the building is being incorporated under French company laws.

LONDON WRITER SAYS PREMIERS TALK POLITICS

Preferences Recommended By Conference Depend on Ratification By Commons As Mackenzie King Pointed Out.

WHAT OF DEFENCE?

LONDON, December 24. Canadian Press Cable. — Harold Cox, the well known journalist and writer an economic subjects, writing in London Sunday Times on Sunday, challenges the Smuts-Massey assumption that the preferences announced at the Imial conference ought to be granted, regardless of the result of the recent election. Mr. Cox says the implication is that the conference was empowered to tax the people of Great Britain, a power which was denied by and since Magna Charta.

Mr. Cox notes that no such "false conception of the power of the conference" was entertained by Premier Mackenzie King, of Canada, who "soundly declared that the conference was neither a cabinet nor a counteil, and its members had not mandate." Mr. Cox points out that if the Baldwin government had remained in power the House of Commons might still have rejected the proposed preferences. He assumes that Premiers Smuts and Massey are trinking less of imperial considerations than of political influences in their own countries.

Mr. Cox proceeds to discuss the Dominions' existing preference relations with Great Britain which heargues are one-sidedly in favor of the former. He also discusses the question of Imperial defence in regards to which he says the views of the Dominions appears to be that it is the duty of the people of Great britain for all time to bear the whole cost of Imperial defence and concludes that it is not on such lines that the empire can be held together.

Only Half Japan's Deaths Reported.

NEW YORK, Dec. 25.—Official figures issued by the Japanse Government on loss of life in the earthquake were one-half of the actual losses, said James F. Abbott, commercial attache at the American Embassy at Tokio, yesterday. He is in this country on sick leave.

He added that insurance policies carried by property owners in Japan do not carry earthquake coverage, and as a result the Government stepped in and insisted the companies pay 10 per cent of the losses. The money will be furnished by the Japaneses Government at small interest.

Capture of Cuertavaca Forty Miles South of Mexico City Reported From Vera Cruz.

SEIZE FOOD SUPPLIES.

VERA CRUZ, December 24. Canadian Press. — Cuertavaca, capital of the State of Morelos, and about 40 miles south of Mexico City, has been captured by the rebel troops under General Figueroa, according to a statement issued by the revolutionary headquarters here.

City in Panic.

IRAPUATO, Mexico, Decemzer 24 —(Delayed.) — Refugees who escaped two days ago from Guadalajara report that the city is verging on a panic. They asserted that General Enrique Estrada, the insurgent leader, has taken possession of extensive food supplies for the use of the army, thus causing the cost of living to quadruple during the past few days.

As Guadalajara has no artillery the inhabitants are in fear that the ar-Federal troops may open on the city at any moment. Hence numerous attempts are being made to escape from the besieged city. Rebel troops seeking to escape are shot immediately. There have been a number of shooting of this kind during the last two days, but this does not prevent desertions.

POINCARE GETS DEPUTIES' NOTE

Question of Public Service In Budget Statement Caused Recent Adverse Division.

PARIS, December 24. Canadian Press. — The Chamber of Deputies gave a vote of confidence to Premier Poincare early on Sunday morning. The vote was 330 to 192.

DEFENDS POLICY.

PARIS, Dcember 23. — Premier Poincare's speech to-day on the occasion of his decorating with the war cross the manufacturing suburb of La Courneuve consisted largely of a defence of his Ruhr policy and a declaration that events were justifying it. He repeated France's determination not to leave the Ruhr until she had received payments.

Trapper and Dogs Drowned in River.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 26. — Word has just been received from Dinorwic of the drowning in Big Sandy Lake, nine miles north of the village, on Friday last of James Isbister, aged 52, on his way from his trap lines to spend Christmas at home. He just had time to shout to his son-in-law, George Kerr, who was with him: "Bring some poles," when the ice gave way beneath him and he and his dog team went into the icy water.

While Kerr was trying to get poles to make it safe to reach him, the second dog team dashed towards the drowning man and their companion dogs, and all of them were drowned.

THE WEATHER.

"A green Christmas makes a fat churchyard." This is an old saying whose origin is shrouded—yes, that's the word—in the misty past, but it is possible that even yet we may have a white Christmas. Several elderly gentlemen whose memories extend back for many years have given me dates of mild winters. One winter that of 1877-8 seems to be recognized as a phenomenal one, while the one preceding that winter and the one following were also exceptionally mild. The winter of 1893 (at least until well on towards spring) was unusually mild. While there have been numerous occasions when we had no sleighing at Christmas, it is rare indeed when there is absolutely no snow. With the exception of the few flakes that fell on S day there has been no snow this December. I extend to each reader of these little weather notes my sincere good wishes, and trust that each one may have a merry (or perhaps still better) a happy Christmas.—W.P.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men."

A LINDSAY MAN KILLS POSTMAN

Frank J. Carew's Car Crashed Into Mail Wagon As He Avoided Auto at Curb.

LINDSAY, Dec. 24. — William Kent, aged 24 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Kent, King Street, died at 2 a.m. as a result of being thrown from a light delivery rig when it was struck by a car driven by ex-Mayor F. J. Carew.

The accident occured about 7 oclock Saturday night, on William Street north, while Kent and a companion, George Peppiatt, were finishing up a local street delivery of Christmas mail, they being letter carriers. The mail was a heavy one and a rig had been used from early morning.

One of two men had just completed their task and were about to turn around. Ex-Mayor Carew passed out to avoid hitting a car standing at the curb, which had no lights, and crashed into the mail wagon Kent was thrown head first to the pavement breaking his collar bone.

Later it developed that the base of the skull had been fractured. Peppiatt was uninjured. Kent is survived by his wife and two children.

Ex-Mayor Carew reported to police and stated that he never saw the mail wagon at all, also that he was travelling very slowly which statement is borne out by all eye witness of the accident.

Coroner Logan presided at the preliminary inquest Sunday afternoon, which was adjourned till Thursday, December 27th.

Chinese Game is Played in Court

OTTAWA, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press)—After some five hours had been spent in taking evidence in police court Saturday, during part of which time Crown Attorney Ritchie, W. G. McCarthy, counsel for the defence; Inspector McLaughlin and Hum Wing You, chief witness for the prosecution, actually played a game of fan tan to illustrate to Magistrate Hopewell how the game was played, the 44 Chinese who were recently arrested as the result of the raid made by the officers of the morality squad on the Chinese Club, were remanded for a week.

Christmas Spoiled This Goose's Plan To Surprise World

Not a golden egg, but one almost as rare, was found when a goose was being cleaned in the J. G. Joplin & Sons' store on Saturday.

Geese in the ordinary courses of events are not scheduled to start laying until March, in fact, most people think if they start by St. Patrick's Day they are doing well. This particular goose, however, if its life had not been taken away in order that its succulent flesh might provide some family with a Christmas dinner, would have commenced laying in a few days. Mr. Jopling said the egg was well formed and perfect, the only strange thing about it being the fact that it was three months too early.

POLLING TODAY FOR TWO SEATS

Provincial By-Election In Manitoba Has Had All the Vigor of Federal Contest.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 24. — Two weeks strenous campaigning in the provincial constituencies of Carillon and Mountain came to a close on Saturday and today the electors vote in the by-elections caused by the acceptance of portfolios by Hon. Albert Prefontaine and Hon. S. R. Canon, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Education, especially.

The campaigns had had all the elements of a general election fight and the hustings have been occupied nightly for two weeks by speakers of the United Farmers and Conservative parties which have had their strongest orators in the field attacking and counter-attacking in regard to provincial issues.

Mr. Prefontaine, member for Carillon, is opposed by Maurice Duprey, former member for that constituency, where he was elected in 1920 by a majority of 48 votes over Mr. Prefontaine, in 1922.

Mr. Prefontaine reversed the verdict and was elected by a majority of 316 over Duprey. The latter was nominated as an Independent in this by-election but has had the platform support of the Conservative speakers.

George H. Fraser, Conservative, is running against Mr. Canon in Mountain, where the Minister of Education was elected by a majority over Fraser.

The loss of one seat to-morrow would deprive the Government of its majority of one in the Legislature.

FRENCH AIRSHIP CAUGHT IN GALE DRIFTS TO SEA

Big Dirigible With Crew of Fifty Swept Over North African Coast With Gasoline Supply Low.

WARSHIPS FOLLOW.

PARIS, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The great French dirigible airship Dixmude, with fifty officers and men on board, was drifting helplessly in a violent gale Sunday over the Gulf of Gabes, on the north coast of Africa.

French warships are reported to be proceeding at full speed toward the gulf to render aid, if this should be possible.

The last direct news received from the airship was that it was headed over the Gulf of Gabes and requested aid. The Ministry of Marine later received confirmation of the distress of the airship from a land station over which the dirigible had been seen drifting steadily eastward. Some of the stations reported that the Dixmude apparently was badly damaged.

Previous reports received from the airship said that a number of the members of her crew were ill.

Gas Supply Low.

The Dixmude left Cuera-Pierrefqu, near Toulon, at six o'clock last Tuesday morning for a three-day flight to Insalah, southern Algeria. This trip was successfully accomplished. The six motors of the airship were used until Friday afternoon fighting its way eastward to Tunis in a strong head wind that spread southward from the French coast. The gasoline supply of the airship became diminished and it was impossible for it to return to France. Then the craft began to drift with one motor running. Occasionally it used another to run the wireless plan so as to be able to send out distress signals.

The French cruiser Mulhouse and all the torpedo boat destrovers in the region were hurriedly sent towards the Gulf og Gabbes, and the garrisons in the Tunis district and southward made ready to help the Dixmude land or to send aid if the airship was wrecked.

To Break Record.

The Dixmude is commanded by Naval Aviation Lieutenant Du Plessis De Grenada, but owing to the fact that the aircraft was out to exceed its world duration record of 4,500 miles, made in September, it carried a number of aviation officers as observers, including Captain Yvon, Assistant Director of Military Aeronautics, and Captain Hetnique, commander of the Cuers-Pierrefeu Aviaion District. The Dixmude reached Insalah after thirty-five

CHILDREN HAVE REAL FAITH IN A SANTA CLAUS

Their Letters Flatter and Cajole the Old Gentleman and Bring Demands For Every Kind of Toy--Some Want Clothing.

HIS MAIL SACK.

If the Santa Claus who inhabits Turnbull's Toyland were to fill to their fullest extent the demands of the children who indite Christmas tide epistles to him, he would be a very busy gentleman. He would need a large and commodious pack, for the little boys and girls want a good deal.

Some cynical person has said that "gratitude is a lively sense of favors to come." That may or may not be the reason for the introduction to a long list of wants, in many of the letters, which records the writer's thankfulness for the gifts received from the old gentleman last year. Some of the little things, too, promise to be good, others proudfully declare that they have been good all year, one little man saying that "I am a very good boy, and always do as I am told," while still another, perhaps under a watchful parental eye, confesses that "I haven't been a very good boy, but I will try and be better."

In the little letters, written on all sorts of paper, from the blue-veined foolscap to the white back of a bill form, in pen and pencil, some in baby hieroglyphics, impossible to decipher, others bearing the unmistakable imprint of an older hand, most of the children enquire about the health of Santa, and also about the well-being of his faithful steeds. "I hope you are well and your reindeers," says one, and another, "I hope one of your reindeers won't break one of his legs this year, like you said it did last year. I was awfully sorry when in your letter last year you said you were very poor. I hope you won't be poor this year." They wish him the compliments of the season, and "a merry Christmas for yourself and your wife and your little boy." One tells him to "put your reindeers in our staple, there is lots of room. I hope you did not get your noze frozed off this year coming to Peterboro." They promise him cups of tea and glasses of milk and pieces of cake, and some of them say they will leave out money for him. "Come down the kitchen stove pipe," invites one little boy, another informs him that "My stocken is the second smallest one," others include requests to "be good to all little boys and girls" in their lists.

Motherly Hearts.

The ruling passion is evident in most o fthem. There must be quite a motherly little heart in the small lady who is thinking of the comfort of her inanimate family when she asks for "a Mama talking, walk, sleeping doll, some clothes for my doll and a doll carriage with rubber tires, and some quilts"; another wants "a big mama doll with curly hair and shoes and a blue dress and a blue bonet, a red carriage, a big cradle and a big doll's sleigh," a small potential housewife yearns for "a laundry set, 98 cents, a stove for dolly's kitchen, a broom and a dustpan," while there is a touch of the future vamp in the lassie who requests "a pair of bracelets, a vanity pencil, and a vanity box," and the other letter that asks for a "can of powder, a powder puff, a bottle of perfume, and a party box." This little girl must have her eye on some small swain.

There is a wide range of taste in the girlie who seeks to satisfy sporting and housekeeping instincts alike in her desire for "a game of old maid, a housekeeper set, a big dresser, a baking set, a doll and doll's bed, a sleigh and lots of squibs."

One little letter records gratitude for other year gifts, enquires politely for Santa Claus' health, and goes on to a finale with a long string of the kisses which so many of the children lavish on their patron. An empty space in the missive's middle indicates an absent - mindedness about the list of wants. One lassie, who signs her letter "Miss ——" primly enough, isn't at all prim in her tastes, which run to "a pare of bob skates, a tobaccan and a pitcher book," also "any other little thing you can spair."

"An umberela," a "week end companion," religious statues and prayer beads, two little red chairs which the seeker explains are for the use of herself and her little friend "when it is too cold to go out," a request from a small child who has evidently been admiring her grandmother in secret, and wants "a pair of glasses and some knitting needles," a letter from an evidently well-supplied and somewhat bored young lady, whose wants are only for "a gold watch and a camera," but who asks Santa to "please surprise me," a desire for a doll "about three inches long," and for "a pair of overstockings to keep me warm going to school," constitute some of the little girl requests. One lengthy list includes such varying things as "a doll's carriage and cradle, a snow shovel, a toy stocking, a bedroom set, a writing desk and toothe-brush and a violin," and another asks for "a small box of candy. Mother won't let me have much." To write in comfort and ease is evidently the desire of the little one who wants "a book and eversharp pencil and ink and bedroom slippers," while another includes a "rattle for Leona and a Teddy Bear for Billy" in her missive.

Expect Snow.

Several of the children ask for snow shovels. One makes the prediction that snow will be here for Christmas, another confides in Santa that "it is raining in Peterboro tonight. I was glad to hear that you were coming to Peterboro in a train this year." One little girl tells the good old man that "you know what little girls want. Bring a doll that won't break." Another with different desires asks for "a pony and cart, a train, a horn, and a fire engine," and a little boy counters these masculine desires on the part of a lady with a request for a doll.

The little boys' epistles have a chummy atmosphere. One hopes "you are fine and not too cold," another who enquires "how are you getting along?" would like Santa to "feche me a bag of candeis, a pare of rubers, and a wagon too. Thank you," and three little brothers send a modest list of wants "and anything else you can give us," while a third asks Santa to send "to a good little boy whose name is—a hockee stick and a sandee andee." They inform him of the price of things when they ask for a "gun and holster, 29 cents, and a watch, 29 cents," one who says "I am a very poor little boy," would like "a nice tran and a hangkesf, and a busy, and a tope," while a little lad who signs "Mr." before his name wants "a teddy bear about 12 inches long."

"Please bring me the fire chief," is the startling request of one youth, while there is the suggestion of a head cold sufferer in the one that requests "a dozen handkerchiefs."

"If there is snow, bring me a snow shovel," orders one canny-minded child, another wants "an outomobile, a foot long and ¾ of a foot high," one says "I will hang my stocking behind the stove just the same as other years," and there is a rather pathetic hint of want and cold in the little epistle that asks only for warm things, an overcoat and mocassins and overstockings.

One page contains lists from two little brothers, and an appended footnote, "don't bring Buster very much, because he is a bad boy."

Another records carefully his own change of address since last year, and asks for a popular article, a pair of mitts, with star and fringe on them. One wants "mogacons" for self, and for mother, "gloves, swade, size 6½," also gifts for Uncle Jim, Harold and Irvine, one wants a "trumb bone," another a "kettle drumb," and still another a "Spark plug."

Mother and Dad.

The little boys incline to Uncle Wiggily as a favorite, they like the old woman who lived in the shoe and old witch stories. One wants a "box of ninepins that you hit down with a marble, and a dancing man"; one has a list of wants for self, a pair of stockings (silk) for mother and a nice tie for dad, and concludes truthfully with "I will think of more things later on." A young man with a mixture of desires asks for a henhouse and a cornet and an elefant and a radio and fire engine, a talking machine, a picture show, some horse shoes, and an Indian suite? whatever that may be. One wants a "dog or a car or a airaphone," another asks for "a pencil box and a dog for school and a thousand dollars," while a third requests "a car, a bicycle, bedroom slippers, and a book to learn me my a.b.c.s."

A small man who is evidently harassed by reason and sentiment in turn writes surprisingly, evidently trying to get all he can out of Santa, if he does happen to exist, while still flaunting his superior knowledge in the fact of an old and worn-out theory. He reverts to former allegiance, however, in his last sentence. His wants are for "a white sweater with a vey neck, a pair of riding pants, a meccano set, a movie machine, an electric train, skates and boots, punching bag and toboggan. But there is no Santa Claus, it is just the spirit, but I do not tell the other children there is no Santa Claus. I tell them there is. Try and send me a letter."

FUR COMPANY WAS VICTIM OF A THEFT

Thieves Made Clean-up Job at T. E. Curvin's Storeroom.

"What I lost would have very nearly paid the salary of another policeman," declared Mr. T. E. Curvin to the Examiner yesterday in referring to the robbery of his fur house on Water street early Saturday morning, when thieves picked the Yale lock and got away with furs valued at $1,000.

Mr. Curvin declared that although the police did everything possible for him they were unable to send the usual warnings to outside towns because there are no funds available to pay for them and as a result the thieves had many hours' start before on the intervention of Judge Huycke on Saturday evening, the messages were finally sent out.

"My furs are stored over the garage," said Mr. Curvin and I had been in the fur house up to midnight packing up some furs that I had sold. There were four bags of these and a quantity of other furs hung up on the walls. The furs included fox, coon, skunk, mink, bear and weasel, and everything was cleaned out except some culls I had thrown under a counter, and two bear skins that must have been considered too big to handle."

"I did not miss the goods until I called up the express on Saturday morning to call for the furs and found they were gone. The Yale lock on the door har been picked and nothing else was disturbed."

"When the police came and investigated I suggested sending word to outside towns to look for the thieves and the furs, but Chief Newhall told me there were no funds available and said that he had already paid enough of his own money for civic expenditures and did not feel like risking any more.

"I got into touch with Mayor Taylor, but got no satisfaction from him and he told me to call Judge Huycke, which I did. The judge instructed Chief Newhall to send the messages, offering to pay for them himself if necessary and the warnings were finally sent, but not until Saturday evening.

"I am paying for police protection," said Mr. Curvin, "and I don't think I am getting it. I don't blame the police, they are doing all they can, but I do blame the City Council for getting the city into this mixup and putting the police department in a position where it has no funds for such purposes as this.

"It is a bad situation, but most people do not realize it until they get a jolt like I have now."

Mr. Curvin handles furs on a large scale and the goods he lost had all been bought by him during the past week.

MANY IRISH PRISONERS RELEASED FROM PRISON

DUBLIN, December 24 (Canadian Press). — The release of the prisoners from the internment camps and jails in the Free State continues rapidly, sometimes hundreds at a time, but there will still be a substantial number left in the Government's custody.

The character of the release is noteworthy, for they include Republican deputies elected at the last election, and even some of the members of Eamonn De Valera's rival Republican administration.

The human jaw possesses only eight muscles, but these exercise a force of nearly a quarter of a ton.

CHURCH OPENS AT ENNISMORE

St. Martin's Church Formally Dedicated Sunday Morning—Replaces Church Lost in Fire.

The new Roman Catholic church of St. Martin at Ennismore, was formally blessed and dedicated yesterday at a Pontifical High mass celebrated by Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough, assisted by Rev. P. McGuire, Rev. J. McAuley and Rev. P. Galvin of Downeyville. Rev. J. Finn acted as Master of Ceremonies. Other priests present in the sanctuary were Rt. Rev. Monsignor W. J. McColl, Rev. Father Carr, superior of St. Michael's College, Toronto, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, who preached the sermon. The church, which has a seating capacity of five hundred, was filled with parishioners and visitors from the surrounding district. Several cars motored from Peterborough to attend the opening ceremonies of the new building, which replaces the old church, burned to the ground in the fall of 1922.

Rev. Father O'Brien preached an eloquent sermon, taking as his text the words of the Almighty to Solomon, on the completion of the temple at Jerusalem, "My eyes shall be opened and by ears shall be attentive to the prayer of him who prays in this place."

Father O'Brien referred to the occasion as including two of the most august events in the liturgy of the church; the dedication and blessing of a new house of God and the celebration of a solemn Pontifical High mass. The world religion, he said, came from a Latin word that mean in essence the bonds that unite us to God, the outline for us and direct us us in our relations with the Supreme Being. In the heart of every man, even of the savage, there was a consciousness of a Supreme Being to whom homage was due as a matter of jutsice, but that was merely natural religion. Left to natural religion alone, man's mind might turn eventually to nature worship and pantheism. He would worship the works of God in nature instead of God Himself. Direction and guidance were necessary to make known to a man the revealed truths of God, as handed down from our first parents, through generation after generation, committed to the Apostles and to those who came after them; a deposit of revelation leit to the church for distribution amongst its children; the immutable truths of God. And so in revealed religion we have all the direction and guidance required for accomplishing the holy will of God and saving our immortal souls.

"But religion does not consist of outward ceremony alone, nor in building magnificent churches, the externals of religion, as we call them. The first place of religion is internal, in the heart and in the soul, and external religion is not acceptable unless proferred with a humble and a contrite heart. External religion alone may be as unacceptable to God as the blood of oxen and goats in the Old Dispensation, when God said: "If you praise Me with your lips and are far from me in your hearts, I will reject your offerings."

The building of churches in God's honor, the use of rich vestments, the inclusion of gems and precious metals, was merely a desire to glorify God through His own gifts. He was the Supreme Giver, and these things were from His hands to His children, used by them for the glorification of His holy Name. "Worship is religion in action. It is the flower and fruit of religion, and it must not only be individual, but common to all."

The congregation was welcomed by Rev. J. McAuley, pastor of the church, who spoke briefly of his pleasure in the erection of the new church to replace the old St. Martin's "where you and your fathers worshipped for nearly fifty years." Father McAuley also recorded his gratitude to the builders of the church, to the architect and contractors, to the people of the parish who had contributed within the last year the sum of $5,500 towards its erection, to the public in general, Catholic and non-Catholic, who had shown kindness and sympathy in the loss of the old church, to all who had contributed in any way towards its furnishing, and to Rev. J. J. O'Brien, who had made the first donation, immediately after the fire, of $500 towards the re-building of the church.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, at the conclusion of Mass, also expressed his great pleasure in the opening of the new church, and congratulated the pastor and his people on the handsome new building just completed. His Lordship likened the parish church of the countryside to the old homesteads, the cradles of domestic life in the hearts of the people. He hoped that greater inspiration towards religious observance would be fostered in the parish by the new church.

The New Church.

The new St. Martin's is an imposing structure of Romanesque design which can be seen for many miles away, its yellow bricks, its red-tiled tower and its red-patterned roof rising in dignified fashion on the same elevation where stood the old church. Facing the north, the apse at the south end holds the sanctuary and high altar. The arch above is a four-centre one, similar to the new arch in St. Peter's Cathedral, and holds four slender oblong windows. These, with the fourteen similar windows in the church proper, and the four in the choir loft at the rear, afford plenty of light. At present, they are glazed with opaque white sections, but will in the future hold ornamental stained glass.

The seats are of oak and dark oak rafters cross the seiling, terminating in ornamental sections at either side. The interior is finished at present in white stucco. The high altar, the gift of Bishop Scollard, of North Bay, who also donated the handsome dull brass electric light fixtures pendant from the ceiling, is pure white, with three niched sections, decorated with gold.

Two small altars are placed at either side, outside of the arch, and are still without the statues which will add much to their lovely appearance. White, with slender pillars of green onyx, make these attractive. One, the altar to the Blessed Virgin, was given by Bishop O'Brien, the other, the altar of the Sacred Heart, was donated jointly by Messrs. J. P. Flood and Frank Scollard. The handsome sanctuary lamp was the gift of P. J. Scollard. The bell, deep-toned and solemn, blessed last Sunday with appropriate ceremonial, was given by Rev. Father Galvin of Downeyville, and members of his family. Cork matting covers the aisles.

Music yesterday at the High Mass, commented on favorably from all sides, was given by the Ennismore choir, augmented by singers from Lindsay.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

County Council Matters Will Figure in Municipal Elections—Strenuous Sessions.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24. — County council matters, from all indications, will figure as prominently at the coming civic nominations and campaign, as local affairs. It is said that at the nomination meeting on Monday, Dec. 31, prominence by some of the speakers will be given to the fact that at the June session of the County Council the equalized assessment of Campbellford w s raised from $702,000 to $787,584, an increase of $85,584. The Examiner has no desire to take sides in this matter but its only object in dealing with it is to lay the true facts before the people.

There had been no readjustment of the equalized assessment of the Counties of Northumberland and Durham for the past twenty years, and at every summer session the matter came up for discussion. In that time the valuation of the urban and rural municipalities became out of all proportion, the equalization of the townships being greater than their assessed value while the reverse was the case in regard to the towns and villages. For example, the assessed val ue of Seymour township was $1,131,168, and its equalization $1,613,206, while Campbellford's equalization was $702,000 on an assessment of $1,526,730.

It was only natural that the reeves and deputies from the townships would object to this arrangement but a readjustment of values was put off from year to year. Then at the June session of the council Reeve Fowlds of Hastings brought the matter definitely before his colleagues. On his motion Warden Smith appointed a committee of all the reeves to deal with the matter, and the long fight began.

Some Strenuous Sessions.

Reeve Wood of Millbrook was the chairman of that special committee, and the members labored for hours before finally reaching a decision. There was a wide difference of opinion as to the amount of the increase, between the township and the urban representatives right at the outset. The former demanded a 25 per cent. raise on the increase shown in the urban assessed values since 1912. The reeves from the towns and villages were just as insistent for a 15 per cent. rate.

The reeves spent nearly an entire night in the committee room. Finally the township members dropped to 20 per cent. but the others refused to accept the compromise. They did how ever later agree to a 16 per cent. increase and the result was that this figure was unanimously agreed upon. When the report was presented to the council sitting as a committee of the whole it was adopted withou amendment or debate. Warden Smith and Reeve Anderson of Campbellford took the lead in holding out for the 16 per cent. rate.

County Taxes Less.

In spite of the fact that the town's equalization has raised Campbellford's county tax was less by $18 in 1923 than in 1922. This was due to the fact that on Reeve Anderson's motion the county rate was reduced by one mill.

T. A. Brown, who has the contract for building the new High School, has let the contract for the lathing and plastering to E. J. Curry, the wellknown builder of Toronto, who already has started men on the job. The sub-contract will be under the supervision of J. C. Bayes, a young man who formerly resided in Campbellford. Mr. Bayes was doing office work for the government when the Trent Canal was built through Campbellford, but for some years has been in Toronto. He is glad to get back to the old home town again for a short stay.

Two lathers already at work are lightning artists at the business, said to be the best in Toronto. Working on a clear wall they put on in two days 600 yards of lath which means that at nine cents a yard, the reputation price, they earned $13.50 each per day. Of course, they can make no such record when they come up against the cornices and other difficult places.

Removing Old Landmark.

The work of removing the old frame residence which stood near the High School and which belonged to S. J. Moore, who sold it to the board, was begun on Saturday. This was one of the first houses built in Campbellford. Trustee Arnold says that when he went to school 50 years ago the residence had been erected some time.

Special Services Closed.

Rev. John Potter, conference evangelist of the Free Methodist denomination, concluded a two-weeks' series of special services in the local church on Sunday evening. A number of persons professed conversion at these will be put on the probationers' roll provided they answer satisfactorily the following questions:

Have you a conviction that your sins have been forgiven?

Are you willing to abide by our rules?

At the end of six months the probationers, who in the meantime are carefully watched, will be required to answer five more questions, the answer to one of which gives the assurance that they are living in peace and charity with all mankind.

Had Narrow Escape.

James McDowell, who operates a wood sawing outfit in town, had a narro escape from a violent death while working at the residence of Jesse Hunt on Bridge Street. He was oiling his machine when his foot slipped and his clothing became tangled in a revolving shaft.

Mr. McDowell was wound in the air several times when his clothing gave way and he was thrown to the ground, fortunately falling on the side away from the revolving saw.

Although badly bruised and shaken up he resumed work after borrowing pair of trousers from Mr. Hunt.

News Notes.

The absence of snow did not make for a dull Christmas trade, as the town was thronged with automobiles all day on Saturday, and the merchants did a thriving business. The stores were seasonably decorated, and the true Christmas spirit was in evidence everywhere.

The Northumberland Band will give another concert (of sacred music, let it be noted) in the Regent Theatre on Sunday evening, 30th December. Captain Hyland again gives the use of the theatre heated and lighted, absolutely free of charge.

A dance will be given on Thursday evening in the Regent Theatre, under the auspices of the Bemersyde Chapter, I.O.D.E., the proceeds to go to the Soldiers' Memorial Fund.

The Week at the Regent.

Capt. Hyland has provided an attractive holiday programme for the patrons of his popular house of entertainment. One innovation will be the introduction of vaudeville, the manager being satisfied that there is a demand for this class of entertainment in Campbellford. The following are the various offerings for this week:

Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 24 and 25—Mary Pickford in "Suds"

Harold Lloyd comedy.

Special—Thrilling picture of the great Japanese disaster.

Vaudeville—George Bedell, America's greatest singing and dancing comedian.

Wednesday only, Dec. 26, as theatre is rented for dance.

Thursday evening—Pack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish."

"Felix the Cat," comedy.

Serial—"The Timber Queen."

Friday and Saturday, Dec. 28 and 29—

Priscilla Dean in "Conflict."

Brownie, Wonder Dog, Comedy.

Vaudeville and other special attractions.

Special matinee on Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturdays. Admission to all shows: Adults 25 cents, children 15 cents.

Since taking over this theatre at the beginning of the season, Capt. Hyland has provided only high class attractions and the public have shown their appreciation by generous patronage.

ANNUAL CONCERT AT BAILIEBORO SCHOOL

Entertaining Programme By Pupils—Large Audience of Relatives and Friends.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 24. — The scholars of the public school held their annual school concert, on Friday evening in the school house.

The school was packed to the doors by a very attentive audience, while Rev. R. M. Patterson acted as chairman for the evening.

The programme was chiefly made up of dialogues, choruses, drills, recitations, solos, duets, etc. A monologue rendered by the teacher, Miss Jones, also added greatly to the amusement.

Miss Helen Jones, and Miss Dorothy Knox, of Peterboro, added to the programme by several numbers, among these which is worthy of mention was a sailors pipe dance, which was very gracefully given by the young ladies, and a hearty applaud was given to this number.

Miss Jean Dawson presided at the piano, assisted by others.

The receipts taken at the door were about thirty dollars, which will go to the school treasury.

Santa Claus was also present and took the presents from the Christmas tree.

PREHISTORIC SCULPTOR WROUGHT A STONE FISH

OREGON CITY, Ore., Dec. 22.—(Associated Press).—Deep in the original channel of the Willamette River here was found recently a "stone fish," which has been added to a collection of relics of prehistoric life in the possession of O. A. Hollingsworth. The shape was uncovered when excavation was being made for an addition to a local paper mill.

The stone, about 16 inches long and seven inches high, is roughly carved in the shape of a fish, with mouth, eyes, gills and fins. Hollingshead believes the stone, which shows signs of being worn by water, was carried along the river in floods of bygone years from the upper Willamette, possibly from the region of the mound biulders near the present site of Albany, Ore. In his opinion, some early day savage with an artistic bent saw the stone by chance and, noting its general shape was that of a fish, took his rough instruments and carved in the eyes, gills and fins.

A THOUGHT

The seed of evil doers shall never be renowned.—Isa. 14:20.

THE OLYMPIC TEAM DROPPED A GAME

Tigers Forced the Play and Had Champions on Defensive.

HAMILTON, December 24.—Canadian Olympic Team met a defeat at the hands of the Tigers in an exhibition game here on Saturday night by a score of 3 to 2.

Tigers forced play from the start and had champions on the defensive except for he las five minues.

In first period the locals scored two goals and kept the visitors scoreless. In the second Tigers scored their third and champions two.

The remainder of the game resulted in a hard fight on both sides to get the puck into the net but without success.

The visitors lacked the services of Cameron, their regular goal keeper, but Ernie Collett, who took his place, played a steady reliable game under hard pressure. Stewart in goal for the Tigers, had a comparatively easy time and the two goals scored on him were rather flukey.

It was the brilliant checking of the visitors that saved them from a severe beating.

FUEL FOR BROILING.

Charcoal is more porous than coke or soft coal and bursts into a flame at a lower temperature. Hence it is a fuel particularly recommended for broiling meats. Many people think it even gives a special flavor.

PRINCESS MARY'S SON NOT OF ROYAL BLOOD

LONDON, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Ever since Princess Mary's son and heir came into the world last winter there has been much speculation as to wether he is a plain commoner or a prince of royal blood. But speculation is ended, and Great Britain now knows that the King's grandson is not a prince of Royal blood.

This decisive information is conveyed by the 1924 debrett, an unquestioned guide to the geneology of royalty.

The new issue says that the Royal warrant of December 11, 1917, asserts that none but the children of the sons of the Sovereign and the eldest living son of the Prince of Wales shall have and hold style, title and attribute of Royal Highness with titular dignity of the princes and princesses.

WHITE FANS.

Fans of white ostrich feathers are carried this season with the all-white costume.

SINCE August, 1914, the world has endured unutterable suffering, and the Armistice of November, 1918, has brought only a nominal peace. International jealousy and fear are consuming the heart of Europe, and, even in Canada, we are deeply anxious, knowing what a menace these conflicting interests are to the whole of humanity.

But to nations and to individuals there comes at this season a message across nineteen centuries: "Peace on earth to men of good will"—and to all the same voice says: "Come unto Me and I will give you Rest."

MONDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1923.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS.

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

And Joseph also went up from Galilee out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife.

And so it was that, while they were there, the days were accomplished.

And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a miltitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying:

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.—From the Gospel by St. Luke.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The Examiner extends to every citizen of Peterborough and the district its best wishes for a very merry and happy Christmas.

May the Christmas spirit with which everyone seems to be bubbling over on the eve of the year's greatest festival be caught up and carried in every heart through the ensuing year!

Then Christmas of 1923 could indeed be hailed as the happiest Peterborough had ever known.

Mankind seems at its best at this season every year—there is more kindliness of spirit, more generosity, more interest in each other's welfare, more thought for those who have been unfortunate.

If only much of this kindliness and generosity and interest and thought were to be stretched over a period of twelve months instead of crowded into a few days what a different world this would be.

There is unfortunately, however, too much truth in the lines of Susan Coolidge in her poem "Christmas."

"We ring the bells and we raise the strain,
We hang up garlands everywhere
And bid the tapers twinkle fair;
And feast and frolic—and then we go
Back to the same old lives again."

But even though this in the main be true we are all the better for the Christmas festival, and so

Be merry all! Be merry all!
With holly dress the festive hall,
Prepare the song, the feast, the ball
To welcome Merry Christmas.

MAKING IT EASY FOR THE CROOKS.

Another aspect of the Police Department tangle has been presented as the result of the fur robbery on Saturday morning.

Here was a case in which thieves, presumably from outside the city, made a haul of furs costing $1,000, and then were enabled to get a clear lead of many hours because the Police Department, with no funds available, declined to send out the customary long distance warnings to outside towns.

Mr. T. E. Curvin, the victim of the robbery, finding the police unable to operate in this respect and the Chief unwilling to go any further into his own pocket for civic expenditures, had to appeal to the Mayor, who had nothing more to offer than the suggestion to consult Judge Huycke, and it was only when the latter ordered Chief Newhall to send out the messages and offered to pay the cost himself, if necessary, that other cities were notified of the robbery and warned to be on the lookout for the stolen furs.

By that time the thieves had had ample time to make a clean getaway and dispose of their booty.

The situation simply is that, although the police have remained on the job without pay, there are no funds available for expenditures of this kind that may arise, and as the Police Department cannot reasonably be expected to provide the money out of their own pockets, the machinery of law enforcement is on the verge of a breakdown.

SIX FOR ALDERMEN.

No difficulty should be experienced by the electors in making their ballots on New Year's Day in connection with the election for Aldermen.

To fill the five vacancies only six candidates have qualified, four of the retiring Aldermen, N. E. Phelan, E. M. Turner, Malcolm McIntyre and Walter Stocker, R. N. Jones, who has been a member of the Council in previous years, and James Gates.

The electors would be well advised in voting for the five candidates who have had municipal experience, seeing that the only other candidate possesses no qualifications that should cause him to be selected in preference to the rest of the field.

Four candidates must be voted for, and five may be.

THE MAYORALTY CONTEST.

For the chief magistrate's chair the ratepayers will be asked a week from tomorrow to decide among the relative merits of Mayor W. H. Taylor, who is seeking a third term after two years in office, Ald. Dr. W. T. Holloway, who has been an Alderman for the past two years, and Mr. J. J. Turner, who, although out of the Council for some time, has also served his fellow-citizens and the Council board.

It will be the task of the electors to weigh the qualifications of these three candidates carefully during the coming week, to study their records in the public service, to estimate their ability and judgment and finally, to select the man considered most capable of filling the responsible position to which all three aspire.

In doing so they should not fail to remember that some questions of considerable importance are likely to be considered by next year's Council.

The police tangle will have to be unwound, the sewage disposal plant problem will have to be solved and there are likely to be negotiations with the General Electric Company in the very probable event of extensions on a considerable scale to the present plant.

There are matters in which leadership will be required, business ability will play a big part and tact and diplomacy and personality, especially in the case of the General Electric negotiations, will serve the city well.

From which candidate are the citizens likely to get the most along these lines?

That is the test they should apply in endeavouring to select their chief magistrate for next year, and that is the test they must apply if they are conscientiously seeking to reach a decision in the best interests of Peterborough.

WHERE DO THEY STAND?

There is no dearth of good material for the Board of Education with ten candidates in the field from which to select five members.

The five retiring members of the board, Dr. Neal, E. B. Fowler and Mrs. W. A. Morris, elected two years ago, and W. A. Richardson and J. T. Braund, appointed by the board during the past year to fill vacancies caused by the resignation of Joseph Wearing and J. W. Worth, are all standing for re-election. Dr. J. J. Craig, dentist, Dr. Edward H. Wood, physician, Dr. Max Yelland, physician, Ernest F. Reid, gas foreman, and Herbert J. McCannan, real estate dealer, all endeavouring to wrest their positions form them.

That is an excellent field of candidates, and it is unfortunate that 50 per cent. of them have to be left at home.

In personal quality and ability the aspirants rank high, and the electors may have to base their choice on policies rather than on qualifications.

The Examiner believes that each of these ten candidates owes it to the citizens now to state his or her position in regard to the building programme that will be before the board next year.

They should be ready to say whether they believe in providing additional Collegiate Institute accommodation now and deferring the erection of a technical school until later, or in combining Collegiate Institute and technical school and finishing the whole thing off at once, or in getting along as well as possible under present conditions and postponing the expenditure until the time is considered more opportune for embarking upon a building programme.

Where do they stand?

HERE'S A REAL FAMILY.

A man at Sault Ste. Marie is the father of 22 children, most of them living at home, says the London Advertiser.

What a genius that man must be to preside over the table at meal times. By the time he had half of them served the first on the list would be back for more. And when would he have a chance to absorb a little nourishment himself?

And if the old rag still is true that "papa's pants will soon fit Willie," how does he keep his own private outfit from being raided by mother on quest for juvenile trousers?

Then the trip to the shoe store—in they come, girl, boy, two girls, three boys and so on and so on. Oh, how does he do it?

And how does mother find out when they're all in at night. Imagine counting them off, yes here's three small ones in this bed, two large ones there, three more here in the back room over the kitchen.

Bless you, folks, we can't help wondering how under the sun you do it.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A merry Christmas to everyone, and, as Tiny Tim said, "God bless us, everyone."

Peterborough came very nearly losing a dog catcher and getting an Alderman by acclamation.

Some of the candidates should remind the ladies that they have a vote. Otherwise, in the rush of the holiday festivities they may forget all about the franchise.

With all the doctors trying to get in the Board of Education promises to resemble a clinic.

Judging by the number of Kiwanians in the field, the Kiwanis motto of "We Build" is being carried into civic service.

Carry your parcels tonight if at all possible. You'll help materially to lessen the strain of the Christmas Eve rush.

Christmas! A magic word, truly, that sets the whole world a-tingling. And such memories as it brings, and such a rush and hurry. So let's iron out the wrinkles—whatever [illegible] may be—and just be glad, looking to the New Year with greater faith in God, in our country and ourselves.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, Dec. 21.—The funeral took place here yesterday afternoon with military honors, of Mr. Edward Navin Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Navin, town. Gunner Edward Navin enlisted with the 52nd Battery when he was about sixteen years old and went overseas. He was severely gassed at the front and never fully recovered. For several months past he had been in very poor health, and after receiving treatment at a hospital here for some time, he went two months ago to the Christie St. Military Hospital, Toronto. Pleurisy and his weakened condition resulted in his death late Saturday afternoon. He was in his 25th year and is survived, besides his parents, by one brother, Mr. Jack Navin, and by four sisters: Mrs. Allan MacClure, Toronto; Mrs. James Hutton and Misses Frances and Annie Navin, town. His funeral took place with military honors. A short service was held at the family home after which the remains were conveyed to the armouries, where the G.W.V.A. took charge. Rev. Cannon Sawers gave an appropriate and able address a large number having assembled. Headed by Cobourg citizens' band, playing the Dead March in Saul, the cortege proceeded then to St. Peter's cemetery. Three volleys were fired by a firing squad at the grave and "Last Post" was given.

Housing Commission

A subject of moment in almost every town and city is the housing of families, who arrive in the place and in many instances, since the war es pecially, are unable to find suitable accommodation. It is claimed in this connection that the Oshawa Housing Commission has met with a large amount of success in its 1923 building program. Twenty houses, it is stated, have been disposed of and are completely paid for; and twenty-five houses erected under the loan scheme are now occupied. The rapid expansion of industrial growth in Oshawa has made it necessary to take some such step, but nearly every town along the lakefront has been feeling the pinch of the scarcity of houses.

Barn Burned Near Wooler

Mr. V. Manning, who owns a farm near Wooler, met with misfortune on Sunday night, when his barn was burned with the season's crop. A number of hens also perished in the fire. Mr. Manning was attending to his nightly chores and had a lantern in the barn, which, in some way exploded and set fire to the building. There is $1,000 insurance on the building, it is stated, but nothing in the contents.

Purchased Residence at Picton

Mrs. C. N. Ruttan, who with her mother, Mrs. H. M. Johnston, has been residing at the parsonage, Colborne, the home of Rev. and Mrs. Whattam, expects to remove to Picton shortly, where she has purchased a house on Elizabeth St., it is stated.

Death of Dr. Frank Clark

Dr. Frank Clark, a son of the late Richard Clark, M.P.P., who formerly resided on a farm south of Colborne, and who has for some years been a successful practitioner at Tromball, Ohio, died recently in Cleveland. He was born in 1867 and received his early education in the Colborne schools, graduating later from Trinity Medical College, Toronto. He located in Northern Ontario where he remained for a time. He is survived by three brothers: A. J., a druggist of Geneva, N. Y.; W. G., hardware merchant at Honeoge Falls, N. Y.; Harry, a merchant at Lethbridge; and by two sisters, Miss Jennie Clark, of Calgary, and Miss Maud Clark, of Saskatoon.

Successful Bazaar

The Ladies' Aid of the Colborne Methodist church held a successful bazaar and afternoon tea in the Sunday School room in that villaeu bazaar and afternoon tea in the on Saturday afternoon. Many articles suitable for Christmas gifts were disposed of quite readily.

Christmas Oratorio

Mr. Davidson Ketchum, son of the late Judge Ketchum, of Cobourg, a former judge of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, was the director of the Christmas oratorio given by boys' choir of Trinity College school, Port Hope, to mark the closing exercises. Mr. Davidson, who is a talented musician, was for several years a prisoner in Germany, as he was there studying when the war broke out.

Funeral of George Retallick

The funeral took place today at Perrytown, of George Retallick, a well-known resident of the district, whose death occurred suddenly on Monday as he was driving a team of horses with a grist to the mill. Mr. Retallick is stated to have fallen from the load to the roadside. He was in his 82nd year. It is supposed that heart trouble or apoplexy was the cause of his sudden passing.

SOCIAL WHIRL ABOUT APSLEY

Social Affairs in Northern District Indicate Holiday Spirit — Radio Music in School.

APSLEY, Dec. 24. — Under the auspices of the Methodist Church, Apsley and district is revolving in a whirl of social activities. On Tuesday night a moving picture show and basket social was held at Haultain, which netted nearly one hundred dollars. On Wednesday night a concert and basket social was given at Lasswade, which brought in between sixty and seventy dollars, and on Thursday night, in the Orange Hall, Apsley, a moving picture was shown, the proceeds including a collection made by Misses Lulu Knox and Mildred Hales, amounting to about $100.

Geo. Robson's Death.

The funeral took place on Sunday, Dec. 16, at St. Andrew's Church, Owenbrook, of George Robson, an old resident, who died rather suddenly, at the age of 69. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his widow, two sons and two daughters, George and John, at home, Mrs. W. Westcott, also at home, and Mrs. Johnson, Minneapolis.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Easton, of Coe Hill, officiating for the Rev. C. Spence, and was very largely attended. Interment was made in St. Andrew's Churchyard.

Mrs. H. Trickey Dead.

The death occurred last Monday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterboro, of Mrs. H. Trickey, after a long illness. The funeral took place in Apsley on Wednesday morning, service being conducted at the Methodist Church by Rev. E. McTavish, the body being interred in the cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes, testifying to the affection and high esteem in which the deceased lady was held. She leaves, besides her husband, one daughter, Mrs. O'Rourke, of New York City.

Radio Concert.

A Christmas tree and concert by the pupils was given in the Schoolhouse at Owenbrook under the management of the capable teacher, Miss Prouty, on Tuesday evening, followed by a basket social, which was highly successful. In the intervals, a concert from East Pittsburgh was received by Mr. Spence's radio, and gave great pleasure to the audience that crowded the Schoolroom.

The children's programme was executed with exceptional merit, the dialogues and drills being perfect. The Rev. C. Spence acted as chairman. Each pupil received a gift from the Christmas tree, and Miss Prouty was the recipient of a fountain pen, the gift of the scholars. Recitations were given by Charles Winter, Hilda Woodbeck, Morris Woodbeck, Pearl Winters, Kenneth Mac, Nellie and Eliza Daniels, Edna Woodbeck, Alex. Daniels, Leslie Walke, Judd Daniels, Jack and Jim Rosebush. There were also flag and merry Christmas drills, besides the dialogues, "A Dream of Mother Goose," "The Day After Christmas," "Beat it," "Selling the Farm" and "Train Leaves in Ten Minutes."

The sale of baskets and admission amounted to $27, which will be used for purchasing equipment for the school.

Wool, 18-25c pound.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, December 24 (Canadian Press). — Storage extras 39 to 40, storage firsts 34 to 35, seconds 28 to 30, fresh specials 80, fresh extras 60, fresh firsts 45.

Butter, No. 1 pasteurised 41 1-2 to 42, creamery 40 1-2 to 41.

The foreign demand for grain here on Saturday was low. The flour market was without any new feature to note and prices were unchanged. The movement of inter wheat flour was also quiet and the tone was steady. There was no change in the condition of the market for millfeed and prices were well maintained. The trade in rolled oats was dull, and prices were steady.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, December 24 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here on Saturday as follows:

Demand 4.45 3-8
Cables 4.45 3-4

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 24 (Canadian Press). — Liquidating sales on the part of holders of wheat led to fresh declines on Saturday in the prices here, but rallies ensued as a result of the pre-holiday evening up of accounts.

The close was unsettled at the same as Friday's finish to 1-2c lower, May $1.06 1-2 to $1.06 5-8, and July $1.05 to $1.05 1-8.

Corn finished at a range varying from 3-8c decline to 1-2c to 5-8c gain; oats at 1-4c off to a shade advance; and provisions 10 cents lower to a rise of 2 cents.

With Canada sending much wheat into this country and with domestic visible supply figures eloquent of a larger crop than estimates had indicated, the buying side of the market appeared at least temporarily to be losing power to retain adherents.

Dimming of prospects for a German food loan, together with word that francs were at a new low record counted also as a bearish influence, and so, likewise, did the fact that deliveries here on Saturday on December contracts ere again of liberal volume. The resulting weakness of December increased to such an extent that the price at one time on Saturday fell to within 2 cents of the lowest quotation for the 1923 crop.

CHRISTMAS TREE AT TRENT RIVER

Church and School Concerts—Teacher Receives Gift From Pupils.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 24.—The Christmas tree and entertainment held at the church Friday night was a great success. The program consisted of dialogues, choruses, and recitations after which some views by lantern slides were shown. At the close the tree was unloaded and each child belonging to the Sunday School received a bag of candies and other gifts.

The children of the day school held their closing exercises at the school Friday afternoon previous to dismissing for the Christmas recess. The pupils showed their appreciation for their teacher, Miss English, by presenting her with a handsome pocket book and a French ivory piece of manicure set. Miss English very generously remembered each one of her pupils with a gift. The usual tree was in evidence and laden with good things for the children. Miss English, teacher of School Section No. 10, left yesterday for her home at Norwood for the holidays.

OMEMEE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT

Christmas Tree and Concert Provided Special Features For the Little Folk.

OMEMEE, Dec. 21.—The annual Sunday School entertainment and Christmas tree of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday evening, where the parents and many visitors gathered to show their interest and also also to enjoy an evening with the children. The smiles which prevailed on the faces of the juveniles and their eagerness to take their parts was enough to gladden a sad heart and we little wonder that Christmas has been termed Children's Day after attending an entertainment of this sort.

The smallest performer on the programme was Master Gilbert Brockley, who made his first appearance on the platform.

Promptly at eight o'clock the curtain was raised, revealing a gorgeously decorated tree, laden with candy, oranges and various gifts.

Rev. Mr. Black acted as chairman and a lengthy programme of solos, recitations, instruments, choruses and dialogues, etc., was well received.

A dialogue, entitled "Zollefcoffer" was well given by Miss Ilein Black and Mr. Campbell Mackey in costume.

A splendid dialogue was also well presented by six members of Mrs. Lamb's class and a pantomime entitled "Too many irons in the fire," proved to be a source of laughter for the children as well as grown-ups.

As in previous years a prize has been awarded by the Sunday School to the most regular attendants during the year, and this year Misses Emily Mitchell, Rhea Courtney and Jamie Mackey each received a book for having been present every Sunday during 1923.

Following the programme, the jingle of sleigh bells was heard and Santa arrived. No one saw his conveyance but we are certain, he did not drive his reindeers and sleigh, through the mud. After shaking hands with the new pastor who arrived in Omemee since his last visit and making a few remarks to the boys and girls, he at once commenced to distribute the gifts and was soon proceeding on his journey after a hearty send-off from the children.

The following programme was given:

St. Mary's Got a Real Drubbing By Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURG, December 23. Canadian Press. — A team representing St. Mary's of Toronto, got a real drubbing here on Saturday night, when a high class Pittsburg team struck its stride and ran in 12 goals while the visitors were blanked.

Lionel Conacher led the shooting brigade, and his swift shots unnerved "Bozo" Kells, St. Mary's net guardian; who played the worst game he has shown in five starts.

The visitors made no claim to any championship ability. They were a mixed team, with the University of Toronto, Owen Sound, and St.Mary's represented, mostly by junior players.

LAST MINUTE STIR.

Saturday night's declarations in connection with tre municipal elections passed off quietly, although there was a stir in the last half hour when several last minute decisions were reached, and as many names entered on the battle roll. Dr. Edward Wood, nominated for the Board of Education, was still undecided at thirty seconds to the hour, and wrote the last flourish of his name as Mr. Armstrong's watch indicated that nine o'clock had been reached.

As a quarter past eight there had only been one qualification for the mayoralty contest, and only two for the aldermanic board. Before the dead line was reached, however, Dr. W. T. Holloway and John J. Turner had made their declarations in the former field, and E. Melville Turner, Malcolm McIntyre, Nagle Phelan and Robert N. Jones had filed their qualifications as aldermanic contestants.

There are now three in the field for mayor, six for aldermen, where there are five vacancies, and ten for the Board of Education, where there are also five vacancies. Four of the old aldermen are running for the same position, while Dr. Holloway aspires to the mayor's chair. All of the retiring members of the Board of Education are in the field, and as many new names will appear on the ballot.

OWEN SOUND, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Clarence W. Douglas, who for twenty years has been associated with George Marrow in the ownership of the Paterson house, Owen Sound, died very suddenly on Saturday evening. He had been ill for only twodays. He was born in Owen Sound fifty-eight years ago and the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas, and has dived here practically all his life. For some years he was a commercial traveller but for the past twenty years he has been connected with the Paterson and was widely known by commercial travellers throughout the province. Two brothers, T. W. and J. J. of Owen Sound, and two sisters, Mrs. Milford of Owen Sound and Mrs. Knight of Belleville, survive. There is also one daughter, Mrs. Lester Brown, of this city.

CATTLE PRICES LESS THAN COST

U. S. Tariff Has Affected Western Farmers' Market Says H. P. Kennedy — Export Troubles.

"The producers in Western Canada are securing or their live stock a price considerably below the cost of production," declared Mr. H. P. Kennedy, head of H. P. Kennedy, Limited, lives stock dealers and exporters, to the Examiner in the course of a chat over the live stock situation on Saturday. Mr. Kennedy's firm in addition to their own buisiness handle the live stock of the Western Grain Growers and Mr. Kennedy is well qualified to speak with authority on the conditions.

The prices in the West he states are discouraging and trade in general is low. The United States market is practically cut off by the tariff while the outbreak of foot and mouth disease in England has intefered to a great extent with the British market. The conditions are even worse than when the embargo was in operation inasmuch as owing to the epidemic it is now necessary to slaughter cattle within 96 hours of their arrival and as the order applies to Irish cattle as well there is considerable congestion.

Mr. Kennedy's firm has one shipment of 260 head of cattle leaving St. John today on the Laconia bound for Glasgow.

One redeeming feature of the situation is that a much large percentage of Western cattle have gone back for winter feeding this year and they should meet a good market in the spring. Mr. Kennedy's company in connection with the Edmonton Stock Yards Limited is winter feeding 400 head of cattle.

Many hogs are being moved east and distributed over the Eastern Canadian market with a few going across the border in spite of the duty.

The barn is now ready for the galvanised roofing. The weather has been favourable for the work of getting out the timbers, moving the barn purchased and erecting it on the old foundation.

Mr Armstrong's sons and neighbours have worked very hard to get the work completed before the cold weather came.

F. Kerr, crown attorney, conducted the prosecution. The alleged theft occurred on the Saturday night previous, and Provincial Officer Cousins, hearing of it, started out. He found a car abandoned by the roadside, where it had been ditched and later came upon the two young men at the C.P.R. viaduct in Port Hope. Bruce Godfrey, the oldest of the trio, was sentenced to eighteen months at Burwash Farm and Hutchinson and O'Connor were sentenced to 12 months each in Guelph Reformatory. Mr. F. M. Miss Arthur is leaving for New York to-day to be with her sister, Mrs. G. Warnock. After a pleasant social hour had been spent in games, Mrs. P. J. Corkery, president of the Womens' Institute, read an appropriate address and made the presentation.

A Big Sale.

Three half days of steady selling were required to dispose of the effects of the late Mr. Nicholas Chapman at Baltimore during the week. The real estate was offered at the same time, but was not disposed of. There was a large crowd each day and things sold well.

Won Prizes.

William Jenkins won first prize on hen and first prize on pullet at the Oshawa poultry show with his Buff Orpingtons. He also carried off first and second prizes for cock, hen and pullet in Red Caps and also first prize on cockerel.

A stiff sentence was meted out to Charles Squire of Brighton township, when he came up on remand before Magistrate Floyd charged with illegally selling liquor. He was fined $2,000 and three months in jail. Through his counsel, Mr. Charles Payne, of Porter, Butler & Payne, Belleville, he gave notice of appeal an dwas allowed his liberty until the appeal is heard, upon the necessary bond being furnished. Squire and his father-in-law both gave evidence for the defence, denying the sale. Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr conducted the prosecution.

Hutton—Navin.

Owing to the serious illness in the bride's family the marriage of Miss Agnes Navin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Navin was solemnized at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Bendall here on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, Dec. 15th. Rev. Canon F. J. Sawers conducted the ceremony. The bride wore a becoming suit of brown with hat to match and was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Margaret Hutton. The Late Byron Wallace Kellogg.

The death took place in Haldimand township on Thursday of Byron Wallace Kellog, who with his brother, conducted a saw mill near Shelter Valley. Mr. Kellog was sixty years of age. He was a bachelor.

Santa Claus added much to the fun and pleasure of the occasion. In his gay costume of red and white and his long white beard he was much admired by the little folk. When he arrived amid much noise and clatter he found several letters awaiting him telling of th hearts' desires of the writers. These longings he endeavoured to satisfy from the tree.

It was the Christmas treat for the children, and it proved to be a very enjoyable one.

MARMORA CONCERT REVEALED TALENT

In Christmas Concert Given By the Methodist Sunday School.

MARMORA, December 24.— The proper spirit of Christmas was demonstrated on Friday evening in the Town Hall, when the Methodist Sunday School held a Christmas tree and entertainment.

It consisted of short playlets, drills, folk dances, singing and recitations. Mr. H. R. Pearce ably acted as chairman.

Rev. D. R. Clare gave a short address, and he first of all thanked those who had so heartily co-operated and who had shown such great patience in the long and tedious practices. It was a revelation to him, and he believed to the whole village, to learn that the home town had such a great supply of latent talent, which is only brought to light by such an endeavour. He noted that even the little children needed no prompting as they knew their part to perfection.

A hoop drill by the girls of the Sunday School won much praise.

Mr. E. C. Prentice was congratulated on the splendid way in which "The Wooing of Miss Canada." It was made more vivid by the picturesque costumes of the actors. John Bull was very truly represented by Master Percy Archer, Jack Canuck by Stanley Pearce and Miss Canada, played by Miss Ida Clare, won the admiration of all. The little playlet was both entertaining and instructive.

Another playlet entitled "The Child," was also equally well performed, those taking the different parts being: Ida Clare, Ross [illegible] Nellie Williams, Myrtle Potts, [illegible] Grant, and Dougall Sanderson.

The last part of the programme was the arrival of Santa Claus, who distributed the gifts among the children.

The thanks of the community are extended to Messrs. George Aunger D. E. Bell, and E. C. Prentice for the splendid way in which they trained the Sunday School pupils.

Notes From Santa Claus

By SANTA CLAUS.

TOY LAND, North Pole, Dec. 24.

My Dear Boys and Girls: Here it is, the day before Christmas.

Everything is hustle and rush.

The Midget in charge of Dollville has reported that every doll is ready for the sleigh trip. And the same report has come to me from Block Land, Rubber-Ball Village, Engine Town, Wagonville, Skate Land, Bead Burgh, Animal Kingdom, and every other place where toys come from.

It is up to me now to get ready and have my reindeers and sleigh all set for my long ride which starts tonight.

Just now my little Midgets climb all over me, trim up my whiskers and cut my hair. Of course, you won't see me, because I come when you are asleep. But your daddy and mama will and I want to look nice.

Now I am all spick and span and I feel heaps better.

Some Midget just packed a big round watch in my sleigh and I notice it is getting late.

My gracious, my reindeers are all hitched up to my sleigh, and the Midgets are calling to me to hop in.

Here I go, boys and girls! I'm all tucked into warm blankets and as soon as I say "Giddap!" I will be on my way to your house.

And as I drive away from Toy Land, a thousand little Midgets shout—

"Santa Claus is coming!"

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

SANTA CLAUS.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinion and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 24.—(United Press.)—The initial trading in the stock market to-day was rather dull with firmness throughout the list and in some cases evidence of strength. Marland Oil sold up to 37 7-8, a new high record on the recovery while National Lead made a new top at 139 1-4.

Steel Common was up 1-4 at 95, while Chandler Motors showed strength at 64 5-8, up 3-8.

Consolidated Gas was one of the active issues, selling to 60 5-8, a new high on the rally, while the rights sold above two.

Foreign exchange was irregular, with sterling off 1-2 cent at the opening. There were an unusual number of absentees from the street.

For this reason trading was dull with stocks generally firm.

National Lead featured the list with a burst of strength which put it to a new 1923 high at 142, up 4 1-4 points from Saturday's close. Expectation of an extra cash or stock disbursement continues. Some Oils showed strength in addition to Marland's run up close to 38. Pacific Oil sold above 48, while Standard Oil of California continued firm at 62 1-2.

Trading broadened somewhat in the second hour and many stocks showed strength, including the Oils, Retail Merchandising, the Motors, Industrials and some miscellaneous shares.

Among the active issues were those handling retail trade, responding to the Federal Reserve Bank survey that business in 1923 with December partly estimated would break all records. National Department Stores was up nearly a point to its old high of 43 3-8, reflecting the remarkable business year with sales estimated at $70 million and profits of around $7 a share. May Stores and Dry Goods, too, were higher.

Continental Can got to a new high for the year at 55 3-4, representing an advance of about five points in the last few weeks.

A RAID STARTED BOOTLEG SCANDAL

Gives Promise of Developing Sweeping Inquiry Into Oft-Repeated Charges of Liquor-Drinking in High Places

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24. — The United States capitals biggest bootleg scandel which originated from a modest police raid, gives promise of developing sweeping inquiry into oft-repeated charges of liquor drinking in high places.

Sudden disappearances of a portentious list of customers taken during raid resulted in insistent demands from several quarters to-day for explanation There were indications that district attorneys office, which has threatened to prosecute those whose name appeared on list, would investigate thoroughly why evidence vanished into thin air, and that demands for an inquiry would be taken up in Congress immediately after holiday recess.

Meantime, both financial backing of bootlegger ring involving and actual source of its liquor supply are under investigation by several agencies of municipal government of the District of Columbia. An effort will be made to connect prominent banking interests with financing of project and on inquiry already has been made to the State Department as to immunity of liquor stock which police were prevented from seizing by intervention of an offical of the foreign legation.

A CHRISTMAS TREE AT THE ORPHANAGE

Thirty-Two Little Children Visited by Santa Claus at St. Vincents

Yesterday afternoon Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus visited St. Vincent's Orphanage and played Santa Claus to some thirty-two little lads who are at present there, and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent among the happy little fellows. The proceedings took the form of a musical programme, consisting of solos, recitations, and choruses, followed by the arrival of Santa Claus in the person of Mr George Lynch, who played the part in his own inimitable manner. The little fellows could hardly contain themselves, and their shouts of gladness and laughter could be heard a block. Each little lad received a story book, pair of stockings, handkerchief, hockey stick and individual bags of candies, nuts, and oranges, while five of the little ones under two years of age each received a pullover sweater, and it would do anyone's heart good to see the little fellows trying to climb the stairs to the dormitories under their loads. As Santa Claus was leaving one manly little fellow arose in his place and called for three cheers for Santa Claus, and it was given with a vengeance. The good sisters were profuse in their thanks and gratitude to the Knights, and then invited everyone to the dining hall, where a most excellent spread had been prepared. Needless to say, this was not the least enjoyable part of a pleasant afternoon, and the thanks of the Knights was very graciously expressed to the good sisters by Mr. J. E. Sullivan. This Xmas tree at the Orphanage has become an annual affair with the Knights of Columbus, and no other undertaking will ever bring more joy and happiness to all concerned. The little fellows are strong for the Knights, and the committee in charge are to be congratulated on the choice and the success of their Xmas undertaking. Mr. J. J. Dorris acted as chairman of the committee on arrangements.

CHRISTMAS ECHOES.

We will say nothing about the correctness or incorrectness of the date, that a large number of us commemorate in remembrance of the greatest event in the world's history, namely, the birth of Jesus Christ. Certainly the coming of Jesus into the world is of great significance to all mankind. What Jesus has accomplished and what he will yet do is somewhat of a two fold character, and yet make up one grand whole. The (Gospel) glad tidings of the kingdom of God, is the blessing of the little flock (the elect) now, and the blessing of the great amss of mankind in the future. From our limited standpoint of view, in one sense, the blessing of the great mass of mankind, when Jesus comes to reign, seems to supercede the blessing to the little flock, on account of all mankind having a favorable opportunity of obtaining eternal life. True, the little flock has the present realized blessing and the assurance of eternal life in the future. With the one desire that we all may know more perfectly the worth of God's greatest gift to the world, we leave these few words with you.—M. T. Butcher. 1d

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

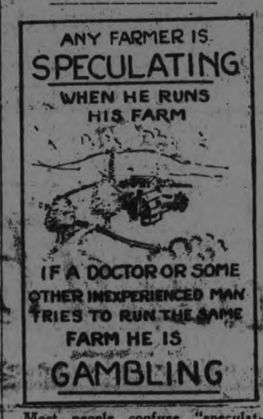
An examination of the meaning of "safety in investment" will show why high interest rates and safety cannot be obtained in the same security.

Safety in investment means eliminating risk. If we eliminate risk, we get a return on our money which is based on safety, alone.

For instance, United States Liberty bonds are regarded as safe. About 4 per cent, then, is the present price which a government or company must pay for the use of money without any risk to the loaner. Any higher interest rate on a security with an equally good market evidently would be to pay the loaner for risk.

If you have a 6 per cent bond, the chances are that the company is paying you a price of 2 per cent for risk, over and above absolute safety, which can be obtained in Liberty bonds. In an 8 per cent bond, the price which is being paid for risk is 4 per cent. In short the risk is apparently just double on the eight per cent bond.

Since our definition indicates that we are to be paid for safety alone, it is clear that we can't get a high interest rate.



Most people confuse "speculating" with "gambling." Speculation, in its true and legitimate sense, is any venture about the soundness and honesty of which the "speculator" is reasonably well informed. Gambling is relying on chance, or luck.

It is speculating for a competent grocer to put money into a grocery store; for a competent oil man to put money into the oil business; for a minister to change his charge; for a good doctor to move to a strange town—all these and every other honest business are speculation. It is not certain that such ventures will succeed, but as they are founded on honesty and experience they have reasonable business opportunity to succeed.

But for a doctor or grocer to go into the oil business, or any other business they know nothing about, with men they know nothing about, is not speculating. It is taking wholly unnecessary and unjustifiable risks. It is gambling.

When you buy stocks in an enterprise that you know personally, or through information from a reputable broker or banker, to be sound and honestly and competently managed, you are speculating. But if you buy stocks in enterprises about which you know nothing and on which you have not reliable information, you are not speculating—you are gambling.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Although the effects of fear are disastrous so far as the full attainment of our life's object may be concerned, its physical effects on body functioning are far greater.

In cases like personal contact with enemies, fear of animals, worry and excitement over financial situations or failure to govern the desire of revenge, the brain cells undergo a destructive change. Subjection to the inroads or stimulus of fear, whether temporary or prolonged, results in a distinct loss in brain power. Without unimpaired action of the brain to do your bidding in the direction of body work, loss in power to act and partial paralysis of real bodily health results.

Whether the brain is exhausted by work or fear, its resotoration is a matter of rest and sleep, together with strong resistance. But fear continues its destructive inroads and unless arrested in time, will cause nervous and brain disarrangements of most serious consequences to your health.

This let-down in brain power seems to start other bodily losses. Fear causes heart impairment through overwork which results from jumps, strain and increased action when fear grips the body. A peculiar sensation of despair and prostration with a sinking feeling, sometimes accompanied by cold sweat, tremors and jerking muscles is produced. At such a time, all bodily functions which are of no direct assistance in the effort towards self preservation are partially or totally suspended. In fact fear may so exhaust the organism that death may result.

Changes through fear are responsible for the hyperactivity of the thyroid and adrenal glands. Both are of utmost importance in governing body action. The thyroids control to a great measure the wear and tear of the body or the process of metabolism. The adrenals produce a secretion which controls blood pressure through the nervous mechanism.

SCOTS ANNUAL CHRISTMAS TREE

Excellent Programme Given by the Children in Victoria Hall.

The Annual Christmas Tree provided each year by the members of the Caledonian Club and Ladies Auxiliary was held on Saturday afternoon and evening, December 22, in the Victoria Hall.

Nearly a hundred youngsters took part in the proceedings. The children retired to the dining-hall where a sumptous feast of good things were eaten until their content, then they retired to the hall where the children provided their own entertainment.

Scots Folk Songs and Dances.

The treat of the evening was the beautiful rendering of Scotch Folk Songs by Miss Mary Ralston, a girl of early years, who sung "Bonnie Scotland" in a clear musical voice with perfect enunciation and had to respond with "My Ain Wee Hoose" as an encore. These two familiar folk songs appealed to the Scot element very much. Another treat was the "Little Scotch Comediene" and "Highland Dancer," Miss Isabel Thompson, in comic dress singing "When I was Twenty-One" and the "Highland Fling" and 'Sword Dance' in masterly fashion to the strains of "Devil in th, Kitchen" and "Duke of Perth" for the Fling and "Gillie Callum" for the Swords played on the Bagpipes by Piper Alex. Milne. Miss Margaret Wylli, showed her ability in memory work by reciting a beautiful recitation about Santa Claus. The children's choir rendered excellent service with their exquisite songs, under the capable tutoring of Mrs. John Wyllie and Mrs. Jackson.

The Programme.

The following programme was rendered by the children, Robert Gilmour, acting as chairman.

Choir—"Hark the Herald Angels Sing."
Dance—Sailors Hornpipe—Frances Edwards and Mary Dunlop.
Recitation—Joe Leith.
Piano Solo—Isabella Reid.
Recitation— "A Christmas Night Adventure," Margaret Wyllie.

Choir—Song, "Jingle Bells."

Songs — "Bonnie Scotland" and "My Ain Wee Hoose"—Mary Ralston.
Choir—"Smile Long"

Recitation—Margaret Dunlop.
Game—"Bee Baw Babbity"
Song—Margaret McLeod.
Song—"Oh Jock Take Me For a Walk," Joe Leith.
Dance — "Sword Dance,,, Isabel Thompson.
Song—Billie Petrie.
Song—Nettie McLeod.
Song—Choir.

Throughout the programme, telegrams were received from Santa Claus telling where he was on his journey until he dropped in on the children amid great excitement. Santa told the children about his trips from the North, then distributed the presents to all the boys and girls in attendance, along with a Christmas stocking, candies and fruit Santa bid everybody a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, then departed to another festival.

After a good four hours enjoyment, the children along with their parents formed up for "Auld Lang Syne," as the finale which ended a most enjoyable treat for the children in local Scots history.

The ladies and gentlemen's committee deserve great praise for the splendid entertainment and supper. Also, the Caledonia Orchestra composed of Messrs Dawson, piano; D. Anderson, Violinist; Craig and Japp, Cornets; who provided music.

FRENCH AIRSHIP

hours of flying in fine weather. The aircraft then started to return, but at Biskra French Headquarters wirelessed her to remain in the south as there was a violent storm along the French coast which would make her re-crossing of the Mediterreanean dangerous.

Blown towards Medenine at a rate of 20 kilometers an hour, respite the efforts of her engines to send her against the gale, the Dixmude next was forced to sea over the Gulf of Gabes. Her commander had no chance to effect a landing on the Tunis Coast. He sent an urgent wire less appeal:

"Heavy tempest; gasoline exhausted; many men sick."

French war vessels, including the cruiser Mulhouse, sped to the rescue. Then the Dixmudes' wireless gave out, her last means of communication with the earth was cut off.

Her propellors were idle when she was sighted from Tunis, and it was believed that she must inevitably be lost.

The crew's only chance seemed to be to rip the huge gas bag and risk a plunge into the sea, trusting to land near some vessel.

May Starve in Mid Air.

The Dixmude had carried rations for two days, by the end of the sixth day the crew faced the prospect of starving in mid-air.

Many became exhausted from seasickness, caused by the tossing of the dirigible and from lack of food.

For 24 hours the naval station here was without word from the Dixmude—then in some way, as yet unexplained, the airship re-established its wireless—its one link with earth.

Late on Sunday the commander reported that he would try to make a landing at Medinine.

Fires were lighted in a ring around the landing ground there and troops waited throughout the night to help the Dixmude to Earth, but the airship failed to be seen.

The Ministry of Marine was without further news of the fate of the naval dirigible at noon to-day.

Grave fears are entertained for the safety of the airship's crew.

It was certainly the "distinguished party" he had promised. There were some eight or ten of the best-known novelists and story-writers in the country, two dramatists, several of the younger publishers, most of the young editors, critics, columnists and illustrators, famous in New York, at least; a few poets, artists; the more serious contributors to the magazines and reviews; an architect, an essayist, a sculptress, a famous girl librarian of a great private library; three correspondents of foreign newspapers, and two visiting British authors. The men wore evening dress. The women, if not all patrons of the ranking "houses" and dressmakers, were correct. Even the artistic gowns stopped short of delirium. And if many of the women wore their hair short, so did all of the men. Everybody in the room was reasonably young or had managed to preserve the appearance and spirit of youth. Clavering noticed at once that Mr. Dinwiddie was no present. No doubt he had been ordered to keep out of the way!

Miss Dwight led Madame Zattiany to the head of the room and enthroned her, but made no introductions at the moment; a young man stood by the piano, violin in hand, evidently waiting for the stir over the guest of honor to subside. The hostess gave the signal and the guests were polite if restless. However, the playing was admirable; and Madame Zattiany, at least, gave it her undivided attention. She was, as ever, apparently unconscious of glances veiled and open, but Clavering laid a bet with himself that before the end of the encore—politely demanded—she knew what every woman in the room had on.

The violinist retired. Cocktails were passed. There was a surge toward the head of the room.

Clavering had dropped into a chair beside the wife of De Witt Turner, eminent novelist, who, however, called herself in print and out, Susan Forbes. She was one of the founders of the Lucy Stone League, stern advocates of the inalienable individuality of woman. Whether you had one adored husband or many, never should that individuality (presumably derived from the male parent) be sunk in any man's. When Susan's husband took his little family travelling the astonished hotel register read: De Witt Turner, Suzan Forbes, child and nurse. Sometimes explanations were wearisome; and when travelling in Europe they found it expedient to bow to prejudice. Several of the Lucy Stoners, however, had renounced Europe for the present, a reactionary government refusing to issue separate passports. You took your husband's name at the altar, didn't you? You are legally married? You are? Then you're no more miss than mister. You go to Europe as a respectable married woman or you stay at home. So they stayed. But they would win in the end. They always did. As for the husbands, they were amenable. Whether they really approved of feministics in extenso, or were merely good-natured and indulgent after the fashion of American husbands, they were at some pains to conceal. All the bright young married women who were "doing things," however, were not Lucy Stoners, advanced as they might be in thought. They were mildly sympathetic, but rather liked the matronly, and possessive, prefix. And after all, what did it matter? There were enough tiresome barriers to scale, Heaven knew. This was the age of women, but man, heretofore predominant by right of brute strength and hallowed custom, was cultivating subtlety, and if he feminized while they masculinized there would be the devil to pay before long.

Miss Forbes was a tiny creature, wholly feminine in appearance, and in spite of her public activities, her really brilliant and initiative mind, was notoriously dependent upon her big burly husband for guidance and advice in all practical matters. When they took a holiday the younger of his children gave him the least trouble, for she had a nurse; he dared not give his wife her ticket in a crowd lest she lose it, far less trust her to relieve his burdened mind of any of the details of travel; nor even to order a meal. Nevertheless, he invariably, and with complete gravity, introduced her and alluded to her as Suzan Forbes (she even tabued the Miss), and he sent a cheque to the League when it was founded. His novels had a quality of delicate irony, but he avowed that his motto was live and let live.

Miss Forbes was not pretty, but she had an expressive original little face and her manners were charming. Janet Oglethorpe was a boor beside her. It was doubtful if she had ever been aggressive in manner or rude in her life; although she never hesitated to give utterance to the extremist of her opinions or to maintain them to the bitter end (when she sometimes sped home to have hysterics on her husband's broad chest). She was one of Clavering's favorites and the heroine of the comedy he so far rejected.

She lit a cigarette as the music finished and pinched it into a holder nearly as long as her face. But even smoking never interfered with her pleasant, rather deprecatory, smile

"It must be wonderful to be an authentic beauty," she said wistfully, glancing at the solid phalanx of black backs and sleek heads at the other end of the room. "And she's ravishing, of course. The men are sleepless about her already. Do assure me that she is stupid! Nature would never treat the rest of us so unfairly as to spare brains for that enchanting skull when she hasn't enough to go round as it is. I believe I'd give mine to look like that."

"She's anything and everything but stupid. Ask Gora. They've met already."

"Well, there's something," she said wisely. "Law of compensation. Although any woman who can look like that should have a special dispensation of Providence. Are you interested in her, Clavey?"

"Immensely. But I want to talk to you about another friend of mine." And he told her something of Anne Goodrich, her ambitions, her talents, and her admiration of the new aristocracy.

Suzan Forbes listened with smiling interest and bobbed her brown little head emphatically. "Splendid! I'm having a party on Thursday night. Be sure to bring her. She'll need encouragement at first, poor thing, and I'll be only too glad to advise her. I'll tell Tommy Treadwell to find a studio for her. I've an idea there's one vacant in The Gainsborough, and she'd love the outlook on the Park. Witt can help her furnish; he's a wonder at picking up things. Mother can furnish the kitchenette. Do you think she'd join the Lucy Stone League?"

"No doubt, as she was brought up in the most conservative atmosphere in America, she'll leap most of the fences after she takes the first. But I don't think she's the marrying kind."

"I shall advise her to marry. Husbands are almost indispensable in a busy's woman's life; and there are so many new ways of bringing up a baby. D'you like my gown?"

It was a charming but not expensive slip of bright green chiffon and suited her elfishness admirably, as he told her.

"I paid for it myself. I pay for all my gowns, as I think it consistent; but I can't afford the expensive dressmakers yet. At least I think I've paid for it. Witt says I haven't and that he expects a collector any day. But I must have, because I told her to send the bill at once so that it wouldn't get lost among all the other bills on the first of the month. Your column's been simply spiffing lately. Full of fire and go, but rather—what shall I call it—explosive? What's happened, Clavey?"

"Good of you to encourage me, Suzanna. I'd thought it rotten. What are you working at?"

"I've just finished a paper on John Dewey for the Atlantic. I was so proud when Witt said he hadn't a criticism to make."

Band Concert

The fourth of this season's series of Concerts promoted by the Peterborough Rangers Band in the Grand Opera House, under the direction of Lieut. Peryer, was given last night, before th, largest audience of the season. The "Children's Chorus," trained by Mr. R. J. Devey, were heartily applauded for their sweetly sung numbers, Mrs. H. F. Doig was heartily encored for splendidly singing "Nights of Nights,' Mr Anthony Thorpe, trombon, soloist, made a first appearance at these concerts; his playing of the cornet solo "Pandora,' varied, with double and triple tongued passages, on a slide trombone was a marvellous exhibition of technical skill, equalled by lovely tonal effects, specialy noticable in "By the Sea," Schubert, and 'O Star of Eve," Wagner. These numbers were heartiy encored.

Bandsman I. Minnnecola scored a success by singing the vocal selection from the well-known work, "In a Monastry Garden,' also responding to an encore.

The numbers by the Band were well played and their reception by such large audiences must be encouraging to conductor and bandsmen. The famous Gilbert and Sullivan operatic selection from "Iolanthe," was exceptionally well played.

DEATH COMES TO GIRL AS CHRISTMAS PRESENT

CAMDEN, N.J., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The Christmas season brought to thirteen-year-old Helen Hamilton a gift she most desired, one for which she had prayed—death.

Racked for months by almost intolerable pain, due to a ruptured heart—the result of a childish prank eight years ago—the heroic little girl died yesterday with her mother's arms about her and her favorite doll clasped tightly to her breast.

The case of Helen Hamilton attracted attention in all parts of the United States. Eight years ago her playmates buried her in a sandpile, and so great was her fright that it caused injury to her heart.

Recently, when it became known that she faced death with such fortitude and poverty, aid came to her from all parts. She prayed that she might live until her birthday, November 26, and newspaper writers wrote columns about her bravery. Yesterday a Christmas tree was arranged in her room. Just a few short hours later she breathed her last with a smile on her face.

"Good will toward men—"

THIS is the spirit of Christmas, "good will toward men." Where there is good will, one toward another, and nation toward nation, peace naturally follows—and with it all those blessings which peace assures.

Good will within each toward all is the world's greatest need in the struggle to re-establish confidence, hope, and human happiness on an enduring basis.

On this side of the water we have advanced so far on the upward trend that we enjoy the dawn of a new era. Let us assess our blessings at their true value and respond to this new hope.

It is our wish that the spirit of Christmas may dominate us all, and that the New Year will herald a period of joy and happiness to you and yours.

THE EVENING SERVICE AT ST. PETER'S CHURCH

Rev. John E. Burke Was the Speaker at the Evening Service.

The evening sermon at St. Peter's Cathedral last evening was preached by the Rev. John Burke, C.S.P., Rector of Newman Hall, and pastor of St. Peter's Church, Toronto. The subject was "The Divinity of Christ." The church was well filled. Before the sermon and immediately afterwards the chancel choir of boys, led by Rev. J. Finn, gave several well-rendered hymns in plain chant.

Rev. Father Burke spoke of the proofs of the Divinity of Christ as being contained in his own words, as recorded in the Gospels, in His works while on earth, in His power of prophetic utterance, and in the fact that the church which He instituted under such unfavorable circumstances has lived and flourished for nearly two thousand years, triumphant and glorious.

The Three-Fold Proofs.

"Christ was intensely sane and intensely truthful," declared the speaker, "and therefore we can accept the words He uttered at their face value, as revealed truth." Father Burke quoted the words of Christ, "but I say unto you," as placing Himself on a par with God in legislating over the commandments delivered to Moses; His words to the men stricken with palsy: "Rise, thy sins are forgiven thee," as tantamount to a declaration of his Godhead; the prerogative claimed by Him of coming on the last day to judge the living and the dead; His words: "Before Abraham was, I am; His answer to the plea of those who asked Him to show them the Father: "He who seeth Me, seeth the Father the Father and I are one;" His answer to the question: "Art Thou Christ, the Son of the Living God?" when He replied "Thou has said it," all as proofs in His own words of His divinity.

Miracles quoted in proof of His Godhead were those of the multiplying of the loaves and fishes, and the occasion when He quelled the storm, and Peter asked: "What manner of man is this, that the winds and the seas obey?"

His power of prophetic utterance was exemplified in His answer to Peter's boast of loyalty: "Before the cock crow twice thou shalt deny me thrice," and His prophesy with regard to the conquest of the proud city of Jerusalem, which was fulfilled to the letter forty years after his death."

A Humble Beginning.

"Could any beginning be more low?" asked the speaker, referring to the birth of Christ in the manger, nearly two thousand years ago, and going on to describe the humble circumstances which surrounded Jesus throughout His lifetime, and the ignominy which attended His death on Calvary. "Born in poverty, living nearly all His life in obscurity, persecuted and reviled, His career ending in ignominy and disgrace, for on that Friday even His own disciples ran to cover and hid their faces in the city of Jerusalem, His religion condemned by the powers of the world, upholding a cross which was a folly to the Gentiles and a scandal to the Jews, as a symbol of a faith whose Founder was an outcast; its apostles martyred, cast into prison, the sport of Roman amphitheatres, its champions ignorant, illiterate men upon whose head there was a price, and yet in spite of all these obstacles, that religion waxed strong and grew in wisdom and grace before God and man. It has numbered through the centuries among its adherents the best men of the time. Under its influence, hospitals and homes for the aged and the orphan began to dot the land, the slave was freed, virtue was exalted, education was fostered, social reforms flourished. And this religion, still fresh with its pristine vigor, continues to dominate the minds of men. Could any further proof be necessary as to the divinity of the Founder of such a religion, a faith which would have ceased to exist centuries ago but for the fact that its Founder is God."

"Let us not be doubters of the truth. Let us consider the words of our of the church He established, power of prophecy, and the grandeour of the churcr He established, and then we will say like Thomas of old, "My Lord and my God, I believe. Help Thou my unbelief."

SAY IT WITH SMILES AND SAVE ANNOYANCE

Saleswomen Have Trying Time at Christmas But Peterboro Girls Take Right Way Out.

Widely different are the reactions of difficult customers on shop assistants, if their stories as told The Examiner are correct. Several of them were interviewed regarding the difficulty of waiting on "fussy" customers during the Christmas rush, and while some said they enjoyed the experience, there were others who said they were driven to distraction by non-buying, hard-to-please people.

"I treat the whole thing as a joke," declared one in the first class. "When someone comes to my counter who does not know what she wants, I think to myself, 'How foolish she is!' and I smile inwardly. It wouldn't do to really smile, you know."

Another young lady in this class said she sympathizes so much with undecided customers that she always pay them special attention.

"I do my best to bring forward the things I think they would like. Most people, when you do that are friendly and easy to satisfy. Anyhow there is something in the Christmas spirit that makes we want to help everybody pick the very best present she can get."

The Other Aspect.

"I don't mind paying special attention to elderly ladies who are not sure what they want,' 'a saleswoman with several years' experience said, but I have gone home often with a headache as a result of waiting on girls who don't know what they want or whether they want anything. They breeze in, stop at the first counter their eyes catch and ask for something. Then they pat their back hair, say they'll come back later and disappear till next year."

"Usually With a Lecture.

"The person I object to," said another, "is the woman who buys something and returns it next day, usually with a lecture. Very often they say the gloves or stockings, or whatever the article is, are the wrong size, but no effort is made to obtain the right size and something else, is taken. They simply change their minds. I like the Christmas rush, but it is trying sometimes."

Generally, The Examiner found, the young ladies like the season with its rush and bustle and the change to new departments or new merchandise that it brings.

TRIED TO ENTER CITY RESIDENCE

Says it is Harder Now Than in Old Days--Wishes Police a Merry Christmas.

While patrolling the residential district early this morning, a local police constable arrested an aged but nimble charcter, it is said, at the point of his gun. The constable had been keeping an eye on the man, who carried a bag of swag, and had noticed him acting in a suspicious manner. When ordered to put up his hands, the constable said, the only reply of the suspect was "Merry Christmas."

At the police station the prisoner gave his name as S. Claus, but letters, mostly from children, showed that he has travelled under a number of aliases. Some of the letters are addressed to S. Nicholas, Kris Kringle, Sanny Claws and other names.

Suspicious Actions.

On his appearance before the Magistrate the prisoner admitted that when arrested he was trying to get into a house. "It's a lot harder than it used to be," he said. "I remember the time when I could drop down a chimney after the big log fire had died down, but now everyone has small stove pipes, steam heating or electric stoves."

"Where do you live?" asked the Magistrate.

"The North Pole," replied Claus.

"Is the man sober?" the Magistrate asked a constable.

"Well, Your Worship, we haven't been able to find anything intoxicating in his pack," said the policeman.

"Does that mean you were looking for it?"

"We sure—I mean, Your Worship, we examined his property."

The Magistrate remarked on the rosy complexion of the prisoner, but several of the constables were called to the stand and corroborated the statement that no traces of intoxicants had been found on the prisoner.

Had a Long Record.

The Chief of Police said the prisoner had a long record and was well-known to the police, although the Peterboro force had not expected to see him this year.

"A peculiar thing about this prisoner," the Chief said, "is that every previous capture has been made by a child. Grown-up people seldom see this man when he is doing a job, but he has been seen by many children. He invariably works around this season of the year and in the dead of night."

"What was in his pack?" asked the Magistrate.

"Nothing of value," replied the Chief. "Just a lot of cheap toys and truck."

The jovial looking prisoner sobered for a moment and the twinkle left his eye as he opened his mouth to defend his pack, which he evidently regarded as valuable, but the Magistrate interrupted to tell him a city by-law prohibits the peddling of goods by outsiders.

"I don't peddle," declared Claus, "I give everything away." This was received with incredulous looks by the members of the force present, who tapped their heads suggestively.

"That's worse," said His Worship. "You must be engaged in some promotion scheme. Are you a promoter?"

"Yes," admitted the prisoner, producing a sensation in the court, but adding, "of Christmas cheer."

This set the Magistrate off on another train of thought, and he called attention to the fact that somebody who tried to bring cheer into the city on Saturday morning was stopped by the License Inspector, who seized all the cheer. "What would you say if we confiscated your sack?" he asked the prisoner.

"Well," said Claus, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "there's a motor car in it that I guess you could do with, and—"

"One police car is enough," interrupted the Chief.

Lenient Sentence.

To prevent the parties entering into a heated discussion on a controversial topic, the Magistrate brought the case to a close by addressing the still smiling prisoner in stern tones. "In view of the fact that the police have no direct evidence against you," he said, "I am compelled to let you go. That fact in itself would not be sufficient to warrant me in releasing you, but since to-morrow is Christmas Day I wish to be lenient. I hope this will be a warning to you not to go climbing around houses at night, especially in a city where the police are as wary as they are in Peterboro—and as little expecting your appearance. An old man like you should have something better to do than to go about giving things away. You may go this time, but don't come before me again."

Claus shuffled out, a free man, but with some of the twinkle gone from his eye. His last remark as he left the court-room was "Merry Christmas."

GERMANY HAS NO NEED TO WORRY.

Peak of Domestic Misfortunes Is Past and Recovery is at Hand, Says Mason.

(By J. W. T. MASON)

NEW YORK, Dec. 24 (United Press).—Germany has passed the peak of her domestic misfortunes and is on the way to recovery. The new monetary system introduced by the government to stabilize conditions is having an immediate effect on prices and the end of the paper mark as a speculative instrument has come.

The German experiment with unsound money has had the effect of creating very large funds abroad for the German government. Foreign speculators in marks have been fooled by Berlin's unscrupulous financial tactics. It is no t unlikely that a billion dollars in Europe and America may have been paid for marks by people who expected to have castles on the Rhine for a few cents when the mark returned to par. The mark will never come back and the money paid for German paper currency has passed forever from foreign purchasers into the coffers of the German government.

A Transfer of Wealth

The only effect of the reign of the paper mark in Germany has been to transfer German wealth from one set of German to another. The wealth itself still remains within Germany, ready for use as soon as a permanent settlement of the reparations problem makes it safe for wealth to show its head. No permanent harm, therefore, has befallen Germany internally from the mark's carouse. At most, there has been temporary misery among a certain class of the population, while the German government has taken ffrom the foreign countries more than enough cash to reimburse it for all the actual cash payments on reparations account.

The fall of the Stresemann cabinet was regarded with dread by those who believed it would mean plunging Germany into chaos. Instead of that, Germany is now emerging from chaos.

There will be a fairly frequent succession of governments to the Stresemann ministry, but the new financial policy now established is not likely to change, in its essentials, however many times the Berlin ministry may be over thrown as an outward concession to the hollow powers of the Reichstag.

There can be no further playing with paper money with any benefit to the German government. Foreigners, having been burned so badly over paper marks, will not speculate again with the new currency. If they were foolish enough to do so, there is no question but that the synical financiers in charge in Germany's monetary policy would start the printing presses as of old and would pass out irredeemable paper in whatever quantities foreign speculators desired.

Can't Play Game Twice

But the Germans have now become persuaded that this game cannot be played twice. Therefore, to depress the new currency would be only to continue confusion within Germany, resulting in no benefit to the state. Hence, it is to be expected that the present stabilizing policy will be permanent, no matter what government changes may follow.

Stabiliz tion is all Germany needs to keep the country busy at work. Even at the height of the inflation of the mark, German unemployed numbered less than one-fourth the unemployment of Great Britain. Now that German employers know where they are on a comparatively inflexible money basis, unemployment is sure to decrease.

Prices have started to fall and the German people are now in a position to await the winter with equanimity. If their own food should temporarily give out, the American government is preparing to grant Germany food credits, to find a market for American grain. So, why should the Germans worry?

Wishing all a very merry Christmas, I beg to remain,

MOTORISTS CAN BE PICKED IN CROWD.

He Acts and Walks As Different From Regular Walkers As Could Be Imagined.

Imagine a motorist out for a walk!

You ought to be able to pick him out of a mob of pedestrians. For he acts and looks as different from the regular run of walkers as does the automobile he drives from the horses it tries to run down.

What changed him so? The helter-skeiter of traffic, whistles of traffic cops, playing children, crossing pedestrians, stopping street cars, scooting busses, night lights, weird signalling, elusive parking spaces, speed traps—and a thousand and one other annoyances.

The result is he had developed a singular expression brought on by an entanglement of emotions, a psychological complex peculiar to auto driving. His features are drawn, taut, determined. His eyes are set and straining. Deep lines on either side of his mouth turn down. He is serious.

On The Alert

When he walks down the street, especially in the crowded sections, you will invariably find him looking far ahead, straining, watching, but still going full speed to a pre determined destination. His expression is immobile, yet his eyeballs move incessantly to right and left, as though he feared another motorist passing him.

People coming toward him he seek to pass to the right, out of habit. By the same token, he speeds up and passes others going his way to the left. New motorists who haven't yet gotten out of their habit of walking, or the despised pedestrians he recognizes by their slipshod, undetermined manner of walking.

His is the essence of the jazz age, today.

And as he becomes more experienced as a driver, can flash in and out of a dense traffic line without a scratch, can judge distances to within six inches, can beat a street car just as it is stopponq, can get away with many a hair-raising stunt any sane driver would refrain from attempting, his face becomes more and more marked and he can be picked out of a crowd more easily.

Isn't It So?

Thus can taxi drivers, for instance, be identified by their nervous, yet carefree, expressions, their haphazard appearance and shifting gait.

And just as the man can be identified as a motorist or otherwise, so can the woman be placed in either category. Hers may be a trifle more difficult, because of the expression already imprinted on her features through the livelong habit of shopping. She still shops, whether walking or riding, so that there is conflict for supremacy between the shopping and the motoring face.

But notice that women walking along the store windows, her nonchalant yet determined face, her steady pace. That's a mixture of shopping and auto habits, but the auto habit is noticeable, nevertheless. She hugs the curb, as it were, not worrying about parking spaces, for she drives into a pay station. Her movements are more direct than those of other women. And she goe about her shopping without much attention to the persons about her.

UPHOLSTERED GOODS.

Upholstered furniture should be dusted with a brush and wiped with an old silk duster. The woodwork must be rubbed with a soft cloth.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

THE REIGN OF KINGS AND OF WASTE.

Sir: The ideal situation always makes a splendid test. Let us test our situation in this city by that test.

And here it is: "Well done good and faithful servant. You have been faithful in a few things. Over many cities shall ye reign as Kings."

For two years ye have had King Taylor, and we have also had the heair apparent, Holloway, as his warm supporter.

Let us test tem by wht they have done:

1st. Our pavements by false economy are filled with holes which are getting deeper and deeper, and more and more costly to repair. A stitch in time would have saved twenty-nine.

2nd. Our streets are lighted by day at a cost of $2000 a year under the divine right of King Taylor and his heir apparent Holloway.

3rd. Our streets are lighted at night by what apepars to be tallow candles, cast in a backwoods home where electric light is unknown.

4th. Our police force are told by tris King and would-be King to enjoy their Christmas on an empty purse.

But why add more. Let us make a change. This city will advance rapidly under the control of a prudent leader wro is at last in sight. Let us give him a chance. The future is in the electors' hands. They have always hated a wilful waste because it brings a woful want.

COMMON ELECTOR.

December 24, 1923.

To the Electors:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having been nominated as a Candidate for your Board of Education, I have decided to accept same for the following reasons:

1—That I am strongly in favour of Technical Education.

2—That I am not in favour of building any addition to the Collegiate Institute or Public Schools at the present time, unless absolutely compulsory.

3—That I am in favour, if necessary, of making any extension to the Collegiate, contain accommodation for Technical as well as Academic Education, and only by vote of the people.

Trusting this policy meets with your approval, and wishing all the Compliments of the Season.

Faithfully yours,

ERNEST F. REID

Ladies and Gentlemen,

At the request of a number of Ratepayers, I am a Candidate for election to the Board of Education.

If elected, I believe I can give faithful and efficient service.

AIRPLANES SOON BE MOVING VANS.

People Will Soon Be Moving From Town to Town By Airplanes.

BOSTON, Dec. 24.—One of these days, when people move from town to town, their furniture will be transported in airplanes. So predicts C. W. Warner of Boston, who's said to be the pioneer in cross-country motor truck transportation of household effects.

"I am speaking carefully when I say the airplane will some day take over the distant transportation of house furnishings," Warner declares. "There is a limit to the capacity and speed of the motor truck. As people move faster, their belongings must move faster in their wake. In years to come, a man will give his new address to the movers. Within 24 hours he should be able to walk in the new front door with his wife and children, and find everything as he left them yesterday 3000 miles away."

Doubt it? Well, it doesn't seem as improbable as our present speed of moving from city to city, by trains and motor trucks, would have seemed to the former generations that moved slowly across the continent in Covered Wagons drawn by oxen or horses.

It's unquestionably within human power to keep on developing the airplane until furniture could be moved through the air for hundreds or thousands of miles without great expense.

Looks, too, as if it will come to pass. But will it be worth while? Are we really any better off, by reason of all this speed and so-called efficiency? Wasn't life more worth living, back in the Covered Wagon days? Weren't people happier? And didn't they have more time and opportunity for the improvement of self—which, after all, apparently is the chief purpose for which we're put on earth?

Don't forget the airplane hearse is coming! Auto-hearses will prove too slow.

Mrs. Kate Morris for Board of Education

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro:

Your support for my election to the Board of Education is respectfully solicited. Should the honour of representing the City in this capacity come to me, the interests of the Electors at large will be served actively and honestly by me to the best of my ability.

The Legend of the Magi

The Legend of the Magi is probably one of the most interesting of Yuletide lore. The origin is the simple story in St. Matthew's gospel to which something has been added almost every century until the accumulated detail almost submerges the original story. The number of the Magi was generally stated to be three, Melchoir, Balthazar and Jasper; royalty was ascribed to them and a complete description given to each.

An old Scandinavian legend has it that the death of Balder, the Apollo of the North, was brought about by the mistletoe bough. His mother had declared that he was incapable of being harmed by anything which had its root in earth, air, fire ar water. Immediately his treacherous enemy the God of Evil made an arrow from the mistletoe bough and gave it to a blind man to test. The arrow pierced Balder and he was slain. Later, however, he was restored to life. After this the mistletoe was declared harmless and it became an emblem of love.

In England today people in certain parts of the country believe that a sunny noon on Christmas Day means a plentiful supply of apples during the coming year.

There is an interesting relic of Druidical fire worship and possibly of the practice of trial by ordeal in the English game of Snapdragon. A person suspected of a crime had to grip a red-hot iron bar or plunge his hand into fire as a test of innocence.

It was believed that superhuman aid would magically appear if the person were not guilty.

In England St. Stephen's Day, or Boxing Day, as it is commonly called (the day following Christmas Day) was the occasion of a curious custom. St. Stephen for some reason which has never been cleared up was looked upon as the patron saint of horses and on this day it was the practice to have all horses bled and thoroughly washed so that they should be preserved from harm during the ensuing year.

One of the oldest superstitions prevalent all over Europe is the idea that animals assume the power of speech at Christmas time. How this belief started is not known, but upon it is founded an old French legend of an old woman, the cat, and the dog. This inquisitive old person made plans for listening to the conversation which she felt sure would take place between her dumb friends. To her great surprise she heard her cat say that burglars were going to break into the house that night. Without stopping to think, she jumped to her feet and ran screaming to her front door, where she was met by robbers who made short work of her.

Girlie and the Ghost

The lordly mansion of the Ravenshaws was as quiet as the grave on Christmas Eve, as quiet and as deadly still. There were tears in the eyes of the young chatelaine, Mrs. Baker, as she surveyed the gaily-decorated drawing-room with its festoons of holly and mistletoe, looking pathetically useless in the absence of merry guests.

"There's no one coming here tonight," she whispered, looking with tear-wet eyes into the blazing fire that was eating up the Yule log.

Gilbert Barket, the master of Ravenshaws, pressed a consoling arm round her slim shoulders.

"So here we are all dressed up and none to entertain," he bantered bravely. "In other words they've all heard of the Ravenshaw's ghost and they funk the visit. In fiction the guests are generally all very keen to meet the spook.

"But this cursed chained lunatic of ours takes every department in turn and scares the occupant to death. Better if I had been a youngest son and got a few quid to start in the world instead of a cold penitentiary and devil a penny to keep it up with. If the ghost would only stick to one season and to one room he'd be an asset in the market instead of a curse. They sat the original was a patriarchal maniac who was left all alone in the house chained by the leg. He broke his chain when he got famished and died while he was wandering about the place searching for a bite. Ah, well, Sheila, if none will give me five thousand for Ravenshaws I'll get some kind of a job and——"

"Hush," whispered his wife and clung to him trembling. She had switched off the light and now was afraid to return to the switch at the other end of the room. Soft footsteps shuffled in an adjacent passage, a door creaked, and a shivering nursemaid ran noiselessly into the firelit room.

"Oh, ma'am," she whispered in tones of anguish. "The ghost ma'am; I'm afraid; I'm afraid."

"Where is it Simpson?" breathed Mrs. Baker. "Which room this time?"

"The nu-the nur—Oh, ma-am."

"The nursery, oh!" Mrs. Baker collapsed in her husband's arms unconscious.

"Hold her!" bade the master of the house, his face white and drawn, and he strode to the door muttering terrible menaces.

The master took the stairs three steps at a leap, and reached the nursery door, teeth and fists clerched in a prodigious effort at self control. From the passage he saw the little cot that contained his only child and, beyond, the bliuk of the fire.

Something clanked and the master stopped dead, bereft of power to move; he had heard that grisly noise before. The hair on his head seemed to move as a sound between a creak and a moan came from the nursery. Then his eyes bulged as he heard the voice of his only child, muffled, mischievous.

"Oh, Santa Claus, I saw you. I heard the bells on your sleigh. Your reindeers must be movin.' They'll slide off the roof—it's all snow."

Then a gurgle of sheer delight that told the quaking father his beloved "Girlie" was hiding beneath the bedclothes from the grisly spectre of a chained lunatic.

He was a brave man Baker, but he had once faced that ghost, and his limbs failed him.

"Santa you're awfully cold," came Girlie's muffled pipe. "Fill my stocking quick! You're making the nursery draughty." Baker strove again to enter but if his limbs had been cold stone they could not have been less responsive. Through his reeling brain kept recurring the legend that if only the ghost were boldly faced and told never to return it would be laid for ever—just as only brutality had quelled the beareded maniac who was its original.

Then came the sound of little feet on the nursery floor, and petulant treble:

"Oh, Santa, I was just going to cuddle you and whisper what I wanted, and you wasn't there."

Again the patter of feet and the plaintive voice: a voice trembling with childish resentment. "If you don't want Girlie go away! You're cold as ice and I can't take hold of you at all. Oh, go away and don't come back." Baker managed to totter into the room as something vaguely resembling a wisp of snow vanished by the window with last rustle and clank. "Daddy, daddy," cried the little girl. "You're too late. I've seen Santa Claus, but he wasn't nice so I sent him away. Oh, daddy, my stocking's empty." She clung to his neck in tears. "Never mind, girlie," consoled Baker, with a new resonance in his voice and eyes that shone in a white face. "Your stocking will be filled all right. You deserve it for you've filled your daddy's tonight."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

ANTI-UNION TRAGEDIES

To the Editor:

Dear Sir:

Your readers, no doubt, read the two recent letters written by E. Scott of Montreal, against Church Union. The first characterized the union as a "backward step" at every turn. This is followed by a worse turn in the disease, and the Union is now said to be a series of "tragedies." Both articles are full of sentiment, showing a stubborn opposition to the Union, and especially a bitterness against and contempt for the leaders of the Union Movement. One can scarcely realize that the mind and pen that speaks through the "Church Record," edited by E. Scott, M.A., D.D., can be the same that can conceive and put in press such extreme contempt for this forward movement, which leaders of Christian thought in three branches of the Church of Christ have inaugurated, and through the courts of the different Churches are carrying on to completion. We are reminded of the question of James the Apostle, —"Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?"

But let us examine a few of his so-called "tragedies." The only tragedy we see in "No. 1" is that of organized stubbornness, and the shame that this opposition is all among our Presbyterian brethren. In No. 2 and No. 3, this is a special thrust at the "Moderator of Assembly." The tragedy we see here is in the fact that any Presbyterian can thus pour contempt upon one whom God has so honored "in raising him to the highest honor among his brethren."

In No. 4, with respect to the vote of the members. The tragedy is again in the fact that the opposition has been for twenty years all within the Presbyterian Church. I am ashamed to think that as Presbyterians we should adopt any "holier than thou" attitude. This "eight-year-old vote" spoken of is a long-drawn scheme to shelve the Union Movement, which should have been consummated years ago. Those who state that the soldiers have not had a chance to vote must know very well that the church member who went overseas did not come back a stickler for denominationalism. A very large part of the increase in membership spoken of are recruits from our Sunday Schools, and these we hope have not been trained to take any exclusive stand in church matters, but the opposite is true, and the opposition is largely from older people.

In Nos. 5, 6 and 7, the tragedy seen is in the suspicion of our trussed leaders and those of the affiliated churches. The effect on men outside the Church will naturally be a commonsense one, as the division of the Protestant Church has been always a source of criticism by the outside world.

No. 10, "The empty church treasury and the hindrance to mission work." It takes a very small excuse to hinder some people from contributing to missions. Christ's Church will continue, never fear. The feeble effort of these people who are diverting their money from His cause and using it to obstruct His work can never succeed in dividing His people. Why should Christian people foster such a spirit of opposition? Our Methodist brethren are engaged in similar mission work in the preaching of the Gospel, and thus carrying out Christ's last command. The people in rural charges can find plenty of room for every dollar they can give in paying the minimum stipend, and in doing all they can to help our mission schemes, and the average rural charge is glad of the prospect of union. I have driven five miles to church all my life-time, and all of this time I have driven past a Methodist church and through a community of Methodist and Presbyterian brethren. This means more to me than it does to the town man who walks possibly across another block or two on a cement sidewalk in order that he may worship in the church of his choice, and I welcome the day of union, not that we may be nearer to church, but that this community as described may be able to get together in one church, making over rural Canada stronger churches, able to pay good stipends to ministers and saving much more of our givings for the mission schemes of our Church. Every rural Presbytery has this same problem. It applies to Ontario, as well as the West or East. It is easily seen if we want to see it.

No. 13, had Dr. Scott been at the great Massey Hall Rally in Toronto recently, he would have been condemned for such sentiment, and would have seen something of the "uplift" that came to those of us fortunate enough to be there.

No. 14, "The last tragedy." The Bill becoming law. The disruption of churches and W. M. Societies! Shame on such a proposition! The man who is in the spirit of the man who asked the Saviour "What wilt thou have me to do?" will never think of disrupting His Church, but will be glad to fall in with the majority of his brethren. Don't worry about our women. They were always loyal to Christ and surely not ready to be disrupted, and should be ready to join in a larger field of labor. Besides many a man has been saved through the influence of a godly wife, and has been saved from bitterness and opposition by the quiet good sense of that same woman. They are used to changing their name, and do not worry about it as their love goes along with the change. As an elder of our church I have been honored and helped by it, and it is my duty as such to take up no "divisive" course, but to be faithful to her courts, as I have promised to do in my ordination service, to cast no reproach on our beloved leaders who are chosen of God for his service. It is plainly my duty to my church and to my Master to obey the voice that so plainly speaks to me. To do otherwise and to accuse our courts and leaders of unfairness, and to call this great spiritual movement a "tragedy" would to me be a tragedy indeed.

EDWARD SMITH GUILTY OF 1ST DEGREE MURDER

BUFFALO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press)—It took the County Court jury two minutes to find Edward Smith guilty of murder in the first degree Saturday. He was convicted of being one of five bandits responsible for murder of Mrs. Mayme Bigham. Speed with which jury determined verdict is unparalleled in local court history.

ROMANCE OF CHRISTMAS

The evening of the 24th of December, throughout Europe, is richer in quaint customs and traditions than Christmas day itself. In many places it is believed that the midnight on Christmas Eve all cattle rise in their stalls or kneel in adoration of the new-born King. The North American Indian applies the belief to the deer which "kneel and look up to the great spirit."

In Scandinavia no one ventures out on Christmas Eve. Between cock-crowing and daybreak is a most dangerous time out of doors as witches, trolls and evil spirits are then abroad and mischievous. In Norway and Sweden there is the belief that on Christmas Eve the dead revisit their old homesteads and after the festivities and meal are over, and the family retire to rest, the place is left tidy and adorned. A great fire is heaped up; candles are lighted, the table covered with the best cloth and a plentiful supply of food spread out upon it. A jug of ale if left ready for the expected ancestral visitors. The chairs are carefully wiped and in the morning as carefully wiped again. If any small fragment of earth should be found it is accepted as a sure sign that some dead forbear has sat upon the chair during the night. A warm bath is got ready for the spectral party who may want a wash before they dine and sometimes the household sleep on straw that the visitors may occupy their beds.

With the Tyrolese, food or milk is left for the Virgin Mother and her child. For the spirits the Yule porridge is set out with new milk in a cream bowl and often a suit of small clothes and even spirits and tobacco. Thus freedom from harm during the New Year is brought.

In Norway it used to be believed that the old Norse Gods were stirred to wrath on Christmas Eve and would come down from the mountain fastnesses with great blasts of wind and wild shouts to carry off any human being who was unlucky enough to be abroad.

Among the Southern Slavs a girl learns about her future husband by covering the table on Christmas Eve, putting on it a white loaf, a plate, a knife, a spoon and fork. She then goes to bed. At midnight her future husband will appear and fling a knife at her. If it hurts her she will die early; if not, she will get a good husband and be happy ever after. The young man varies the programme to know about his future wife. When the others are gone to church he must sit in the darkness naked and sift ashes through a seive. The desired one will then appear, pull his nose three times, and having given him this foretaste of married bliss, she will depart.

In Alsace and some other places the Christ-child is represented as visiting the villages and bringing presents and performing all kinds of duties. A girl wearing a crown of golden paper containing lighted candles is chosen. In one hand she carries a bell and in the other a basket of sweetmeats. She is often dressed in white and has long fair hair. She is frequently followed by a masked man or boy, dressed in a bearskin, with blackened face, long beard and a rod with which he threatens naughty children. The children are saved from his wrath by the pleadings of the girl.

A very widespread notion is that water turns to wine at midnight on Christmas Eve and in Guernsey there is a story told of a woman who determined to test this belief by drawing a bucket of water from a well at the faithful hour. But a voice spoke according to the legend:

"Toute l'eau se tourne en vin
Et tu es proche de la fin."

(All the water turns into wine and you are near your end). With this the woman fell down with a mortal disease and died before the end of the year had passed away.

No time is so charged with romance and mystery as the Eve of Christmas.

THE BEST CHRISTMAS PRESENTS TO GIVE

Buying Christmas presents for his sisters and his cousins and his aunts is probably one of the most baffling problems which besets the average man in the course of the year, and the task is not made any the easier by the barrage of advice showered upon paterfamilies by all the sundry. Broadly speaking, however, friends and relations are divided into two classes. The first consists of those for whom presents can be bought in perfect certainty and confidence. The second is made up of those captiously critical people whose desires must be discovered by either open or secret methods.

With this latter class, we pay, and they choose; and on chances can be taken. Of course these rather tiresome folk who have to be asked what they would like, receive the tribute of duty rather than the gifts of affection.

It is simply not safe to take a chance on what Aunt Hilda or Cousin Robert's wife will demand as their Christmas levy this year. It is curious that it is nearly always the relations who order their own presents; the real poetry of shopping is found in buying for our friends.

Considerable ingenuity, however may be exercised within the limits of our relations' instructions. There is a measure of malicious delight in fulfilling the desire of the austere and religious Aunt who expressed a wish for an "improving" little work by tendering a collected edition of the sermons and theological writings of some eminent 17th Century Scottish Divine. Again there is a stern sense of duty in unloading the learned Professor Muggin's "Theory of the Periodicity of Telephone Inaudibility" upon some priggish nephew. The gift of bags with unturnable locks and imposing looking ornamental vases embossed with snake like figures crawling over them, is sometimes a solace to the spirit.

On the other hand a man who would ask his wife or sweetheart what she wanted must surely stand a self-confessed failure. It is his business to feel the right thing intuitively. Of course when one is buying a present for the person one likes best there is sure to be a depressing sense of inadequacy. Main street has no treasure worthy of them. In dreams we would ransack the markets of Fairyland and tear open the pack on the shoulders of the goblin hucksters. It is one of the crowning miracles of the world that people who deserve all this are very often actually thrilled just as much by some wretched little picture in a frame, or a book of verse, or even a writing-case.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

THE LAST RIDDLE

"Up north he dwells 'mid jingling bells."

"This is the last riddle," said the Riddle Lady. "At least for a while, as my brain needs a rest. Besides, Christmas is so near you must all finish up your shopping and tie up your packages, and I have some things of my own to attend to.

"But that reminds me of my riddle. I'm thinking of someone you all love. The riddle is about him. See who can guess first.

"He's merry, merry, and round as a berry,
The jolliest fellow I know,
Up north he dwells 'mid jingling bells,
And—toys and dolls and drums and things that on a Christmas-tree grow.

"He's a hairy, hairy, jolly old fairy,
With whiskers as white as the snow,
And he whistles and yells in his wintry dells,
To Comet and Cupid and Dasher and Dancer and all the rest of his reindeer, and hitches them up all ready to go,

"He's very, very cautious and wary,
And he crosses your room on tiptoe,
Then with mirth he swells, as a mouse he smells,
And he sees Tommy's and Mary's and Susy's and Harry's and Betty's and all the rest of the stockings in a row.

"He's nary, nary tired; I declare he
Is full of more get up and go!
His pack's like a dairy, and heavy, oh, very,
But he doesn't care, he just ho-ho's and ha-ha's (silently of course so as not to waken anybody) and slides down your chimney and trims your Christmas-tree, and then he's off again, cracking his whip and calling back, 'Merry Christmas to everybody in the big, wide world!'

"That's all! Now who is it?" asked the Riddle Lady.
"Santa Claus!"
"St. Nicholas!"
"Kris Kringle!"
"St. Nich!" called all the Riddle Land people and Nancy and Nick together.

"My goodness! I forgot he had so many names!" laughed the Riddle Lady. "Well, all of you are right. So you shall all have presents. Nancy and Nick and Mister Humpty Dumpty, will you please pass the things? Let each person pick out whatever he likes."

The Dame-Who-Lost-Her-Shoe got a perfectly good one, and so did Betty Blue, who had lost one of hers also. The three kittens got their lost mittens and, indeed, everybody who had lost anything got it back. Besides that they all had a fine present apiece, a nice fat plum pudding with a piece of holly on top, all except Jack Horner, who had a mincepie.

"I think well have to be going home now," said Nancy to the Riddle Lady. "We've had a wonderful time and thank you ever and ever so much for everything."

"You are certainly welcome and we want you both to come again," said the Riddle Lady. "Humpty Dumpty and Dick Red Cap will help you carry your presents home. Goodby, now, my dears!"

And away went the four of them back to the Fairy Queen's palace. Another adventure was coming.

LITTLE WANT ADS.

At this time of the year, there are any number of things that are badly needed, either by the man or woman.

These things can be done without, but the Summer is going to be not — happy without them, and they need not cost you nearly as much as you think, if you only use the Want Ads. to get them.

So many lose a vast amount of pleasure simply because they have never learned the value of a simple little appeal to the Examiner Want Ad. Column. Don't let this bright month of June go by without satisfying little extra Summer wants through the Want Ads.

DEFEAT BROKE CRIQUI'S HEART

French Pugilist's Career Ended By Loss of Title to Johnny Dundee.

PARIS, December 24 (Canadian Press). — Eugene Criqui's pugilistic career is ended. The abandonment of his titles of featherweight champion of France and Europe, owing to the injuries he received in his bout for charity against Hebrane on 6th October, is expected to be permanent.

Criqui's hands, which he smashed on the Belgian champion's head, are not as badly broken as his heart, over his failure to defeat Johnny Dundee in New York.

Through his victory over Kilbane, the Frenchman achieved an ambition of twelve long years divided between the ring and the battle front.

For sixty days his name was blazoned on the billboards as featherweight champion of the world, but Dundee ended all this.

The sledge-hammer blows Criqui received from Dundee at the Polo Grounds broke down some of his indomitable spirit. The jeers of the bleacher fans did the rest.

MUDDY FIELDS FOR FOOTBALL

Snow Thawed on British Pitches — Sensational Scoring in the Chelsea Match.

LONDON, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Football was played on muddy fields and under depressing conditions Saturday. The ground was treacherous after the snowfall and subsequent thaw. The fullbacks miskicked and gave the forwards the chances they were quick to seize.

There was sensational scoring in the Chelsea match. The centre-forward, Andrew Wilson made five great shots one of which hit the bar and the other went a few inches inside the bar but Dawson, Burnley's goal-keeper stopped each time.

Eight thousand people were assembled at Charlton's new home at Catford which promises to be one of London's very best grounds. Five of Hudderfield's goals were scored in the second half. This Yorkshire team scored more goals than they had ever done in any previous game since their entry into the first division.

There was an early surprise for sixteen thousand spectators when Notts Forest took the lead from West Ham through Flood, who was allowed to go on, scored from offside position. Spectators expressed their opinion of the referee Flood earned an unusual volume of cheers on a visiting ground He started at inside right but when Jones got hurt he went to full back and there not only carried out the duties of the job but gave the Hammers' back no end of trouble.

Ill-feeling crept into the Blackburn-Tottenham match when the latter won there for the first time in their history. Healless at centre-half had to leave the field for treatment and there were loud cries for the offender to be sent off. The referee however, refused to be influnced by the clamour and when Healless resumed he changed places with Rosecamp at centre-half.

BANISH BOO HOO AFTER RAMPAGE

Queen's Mascot Bear Frightened Woman Out of Her Kitchen In Kingston.

KINGSTON, Dec. 24.— Queen's "Boo Hoo," the mascot bear of the Queen's Football team has been sent to the main Duck Island and will be kept by C. W. Cole. "Billy" Hughes, Queens trainer, and W. C. Shales saw "Boo Hoo" off Saturday afternoon. She was chained to the foremast of the steamer C. W. Cole with just enough slack to permit play without going over the railing "Boo Hoo" appeared to enjoy the experience immensely and soon made herself familiar with everyone on the boat and wharf. Asked whether she would come back Mr. Hughes was not sure but it was probably that she would remain in Duck Island. Next year he may get a young cub Saturday morning Queen's Athletic authorities were notified she had broken out of the ring and was scaring the life out of a woman. When two clerks from the Athletic board arrived they found "Boo Hoo" having a great time in the yard at the rear of a Union Street home It took an hour and a half before she was captured and during that time she entered the kitchen of the house and frightened the lady so badly that she ran out of the house. "Boo Hoo" finished her rampage by climbing a tree and staying there for about half an hour

It develops that Zev's winning total has been padded by $10,600. . . . And the only thing to do, we guess, is to hold out that much oats on the unscrupulous scoundrel.

PADDOCK MUST CLEAR HIMSELF

Crack Sprinter May Be Prevented From Competing For Place on U. S. Olympic Team.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.— Charles Paddock, crack sprinter, will not be allowed to compete for a position on the 1924 Olympic from the United States until he has cleared himself of charges with the Amateur Athletic Union, it has been announced by the American Olympic committee.

The issues involved in the controversy that has raged about Paddock for several months include charges he is alleged to have made against the A.A.U. and athletes of that organization, in regard to their amateur standing; allegations that Paddock himself had sacrificed his amateur standing in going on a lecture tour; charges that he failed to reimburse the Olmpic committee for funds loaned to him in 1920 and his alleged failure to comply with a request that he account for expenses furnished him in coming to New York from Los Angeles for an athletic meet

The decision means that Paddock also must explain to the A. A. U. committee his participation without A.A.U. sanction in the University of Paris club meet, and in exhibitions in Czecho-Slovakia.

Bowling

MISS M. WALKER WIN PRIZE FOR LADY BOWLERS.

Miss M. Walker won the turkey at Solomon's Alleys, which was given to the lady rolling the highest single. Miss Walker rolled 164. Many ladies were over trying for the prize and some other nice single scores were set up.

ALEX MILLER WINS TURKEY FOR FIVE PINS.

Alex Miller won the turkey for the high three games in five pins. Miller rolled a total of 798 for his three games, having singles of 265, 259, 274. Joe Marsden was only ten pins behind Miller rolling 788 for his three games. Marsden had a chance to win but blew his last frame in the last game. It is interesting to note that both Miller's and Marsden's scores for three games are far larger than those rolled in Toronto last week at the different Alley up there who had turkeys up for the high three games. Gerald Thorndyke who had the high single for the week in rolling for the turkey prize, was only a few pins behind the high single in Toronto, his high single being 320. None of the Toronto bowlers however were able to better or come near Miller's high three games.

BILL SMITHSON WON THE TURKEY FOR TEN PINS.

Bill Smithson won the turkey given for the high three games in ten pins, he having a beautiful score of 723 for his three games. Smithson rolled over 200 in every game, and turned in some lovely bowling.

IDAHO CRADLE OF STAR JOCKEYS

Produced Sande and the Fators, and Now Young Parke, Latest Phenom.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 24.—This is a tale of a sixteen-year-old Idaho lad—Ivan Parke—who, on Dec. 31, will be crowned leading rider of the American turf for 1923, and whose earnings, "tips" included, may equal the salary paid Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States.

Parke,s rise to fame and fortune from obscurity began last March at far-off Tia Juana, Mex., where, fresh from an Idaho ranch, he was given a chance by S. L. Jenkins to become America's leading race rider.

Parke, the sixteen-year-old lad, now the talk of the turf, in the opinion of conservative horsemen has not reached the peak of his career. Reason: In the first six days of racing at eJfferson Park the lad, riding in 33 races, turned in 18 winners, four seconds, three thirds and unplaced eight times.

His greatest achievement, five consecutive winners, occurred on Dec. 5. Riding five in a row, however, is not extraordinary with Parke. He rode 10 consecutive winners at Latonia prior to coming here.

Whitney's Got Him.

The lad, under contract to Harry Payne Whitney, New York millionaire turfman and breeder, goes east in the spring to serve under the tutelage of "Jimmy" Rowe, called the "master mind of the American thoroughbred."

Whitney's acquisition of a lifetime contract on Parke so far as his riding is concerned, now ancient history, cost $15,000, Jenkins selling the lad to Whitney through Mose Goldblatt, the Cincinnati turfman, with whom he has been since the transfer.

Parke, a native of Delco, Idaho, tells his story in a modest way. There is none of the frills that usually come from a star rider. Instead, he shies off when eager turf enthusiasts solicit the news as to how he became a rider.

Here is the way the lad tells it: "Where I come from—out among the ranches—every kid must know something about a horse. I just happened to be near one at Delco and got my early knowledge of riding by following cowboys on a roundup; jumping into a saddle whenever any of the men would help me.

Started at Tia Juana.

"I must have looked natural there. Mr. Jenkins, who with Stuart Pollmakes it a business of rounding up boys who can ride, took a liking to me, and induced my parents to sing a contract with him. I was then started to Tia Juana and last March steered the first winner of a race home in front.

"All good riders come from my section of the country. Look at Sande and the Fator brothers. They are from Wyoming and learned to ride just as I did—following the cowboys.

"My weight, 96 pounds, isn't bothering me. I hope to keep below 115 for some years to come. My parents get the biggest part of my earnings, and they are going to keep on getting it. My folks now have their own home. Some day I hope to buy them a ranch. There is comfort at Delco, and just to think—me—a kid, has provided it!"

Parke has been home but once since starting his career as a jockey —a forced vacation. Suspended by the stewards at the Churchill Downs fall meeting because of rough riding, the lad thus had an opportunity to visit his parents prior to arriving here a few days before Thanksgiving Day.

Parke is undoubtedly the most sensational jockey New Orleans has seen in years. His feat of five consecutive winners has only been equaled once since the resumption of the sport in Louisania nine years ago.

The cry hereabouts is: "Throw away the dope book and have a ticket on Parke!"

No Ice in Montreal For Senators' Game.

OTTAWA, December 24 (Canadian Press). — The world's champion Ottawa hockey team was all set for its first trip to Montreal on Saturday when word came from Leo Dandurand, manager of the Canadiens, that it would be impossible to play there.

The Ottawas could have claimed the match by default, according to Manager Gorman, as it was up to the Canadiens to provide the ice for their scheduled engagement at home, but President Frank Ahearn stated that no unsportsmanlike advantage would be taken, and the Ottawa club consented accordingly to the postponement, with the understanding that the match take place on the first open date at Montreal.

ODD INCIDENTS GAVE NICKNAMES TO CLUBS IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—There are few baseball fans in the country who cannot tell offhand the nicknames of the various clubs in the two major clubs. However, there are probably fewer who can tell the origin of those names.

The New York club of the National League has always been called the Giants. The name was applied back in the eighties, when none but large men were considered for the team. It has stuck, notwithstanding that Manager McGraw in recent years has had some comparatively small men on his team.

Cincinnati clings to the Reds, an abbreviated form of Red Stockings, which originated from the red stockings worn by the famous old Cincinnati team of the late sixties, one of the first professional baseball organizations. Some sporting writers shortened the name to Red Legs and later the Reds.

The Pittsburgh club got the name Pirates from Louisville with the transfer of the latter's players to Pittsburgh when the National League reduced from 12 to eight clubs. The name is said to have been first applied to Louisville because of that club's successful scramble for players at the close of the Brotherhood war of 1891.

Chicago "Cubs."

During the leadership of the late Captain Adrian C. Anson the Chicago Nationals were known as Anson's Colts because the players, young and fast, often were referred to as being "frisky as colts." When Anson letf the team other names names were suggested but none proved popular until a Chicago sporting editor hit upon Cubs as conveying the same idea as Colts, and besides being convenient for head-writing purposes.

The St. Louis Nationals always have been known as the Cardinals from that color of their hosiery. Some writers shorten the name to Cards. The Philadelphia club has been known popularly as the Phillies, a contraction of the city's name, for 40 years. Sometimes the name Quakers is applied, Philadelphia being known as the Quaker City.

Brooklyn has had several nicknames. One of the first was the Superbas, derived from Hanlon's Superbas, a vaudeville act which was a hit throughout the country about the time Ned Hanlon became manager of the club. After his departure Brooklyn became one of the first trolley car centers in the country and the name Trolley Dodgers, later shortened to Dodgers, was adopted and still sticks to the club. In late years the club has been called Robins in honor of the present manager, Wilbur Robinson.

Boston "Braves"

The Boston club for many years was known as the Beaneaters because of the city's famous dish, Boston baked beans. Then the club was called the Doves in honor of George S. Dovey, a former owner, and since the ownership of James E. Gaffney has been nicknamed the Braves. This is said to have come from the owner's close affiliation with Tammany Hall and the Tammany Braves. Another version of the origin of the name is that it came from Tecumseh, a Shawnee Indian chief. The players familiarly called Manager Stallings chief and linked that wih his middle initial "T" as for Tecumseh, although his name is George Tweedy Stallings.

HAMILTON BLEW UP IN LAST LAP

Outplayed St. Patrick's for Three Quarters of the Game.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—After outplaying St. Patrick's for three-quarters of the journey, Hamilton, due to weak goal-keeping, "blew up" with a dull and sickening thud, and away went the game by 5 to 2. Three of the goals were scored in forty seconds, two of them being from the outside defence. Vernon Forbes, goalkeeper for Hamilton, who has not struck his stride, was more responsible than any other for the third defeat.

In the first two periods Hamilton had a margin in their favor, but Jack Roach, the greatest of all goalkeepers, barred the way with some startling saves. It was decided to use Roach just a few minutes before the game commenced, and the decision was a wise one. Roach kept the Irish in the running.

Another capacity crowd saw the professionals in action, and there were many of them who "got in behind" the visitors because they showed that they are one of the fastest teams seen here in a long time.

SUZANNA

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

MABEL NORMAND IN BEWITCHING COMEDY.

Has Star Part in New Sennett Feature, "Suzanna," Beautifully Romantic.

An appeal to the lover of the artistic and picturesque is Mack Sennett's "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand, an Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release, coming to the Capitol Theatre on Monday, Tuesday; and Wednesday.

Against a background historic and romantic, "Suzanna" faithfully depicts the charm romance, and the fruitfulness of California about 1835. To the most minute detail, the mannerisms, customs, adventures and buildings of the early Californian have been reproduced and revived for this quaint but beautiful story.

Supported by a cast chosen with great consideration for type, Mabel Normand is irresistibly appealing to every lover of beauty, romance, adventure and comedy.

She has been given ample opportunity, to her great delight, to appear before millions of comedy-lovers in a role at once so human, so lovable, so sympathetic, so bewitching that no one can resist her. The character of Suzanna, so ably portrayed by Miss Normand is that of an early Spanish-Californian peon, raised so from the day of her birth. Through design, however, Suzanna has been cheated of her rightful heritage, for she is in reality the daughter of a Don of high caste and lineage.

Because of her apparent low station in life, Suzanna cannot accept the love of the man she loves and is loved by. But Fate, however, decides to make amends, and everything ends as it should.
